Golden Medical Discovery

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is an unequalled remedy. Sold by druggists.

colors of the rainbow. Rooster Rock is one beyond that is far more picturesque in view than in name. Past the Pillars of Hercules—two huge columnar rocks guarding the railroad track on either side from the west—and we are on the Pacific slope of the Cascade Mountains, and in a short run of a few hours come to Portland, the metropolis of the Northwest, and one of the few American cities that have had a phenomenally rapid growth within the last few years. Lost as a small boy in the woods back of one street that made up the little village in 1853, it is hard for me to comprehend now that it, with its suburbs, makes up a city of 40,000 people, and that most of the increase has been within the last few years; the census of 1880, even, showing less than half of that number. I have seen it stated and claimed that Portland has in this population twenty-two millionaires, and a look at her business blocks and residences would not belie the statement if that could be taken as a criterion. Southward from Portland, and tributary to it, stretches for about 150 miles the navigable Willamette River, draining the richest agricultural valley beyond all comparison in the great Northwest. Its average width in land adapted to agriculture is about thirty-five miles, and in proportion to its area it has by far the densest population in the Northwest, while many of the oldest and most staple towns in the State are to be found here, resembling thrifty New England or New York towns rather than the mushroom and backwood appearance of many of the places through which the traveller has been making his way during the last four or five days. Four lines of railroad drain this rich valley from Portland as a centre, two of standard gauge and two narrow gauge; and one of each being on opposite sides of the Willamette River, itself navigable nearly to the head.

Portland, like Quebec, London, Antwerp, and others, is an inland seaport, being a little over 100 miles from the sea. Its exports for last year amounted to $12,556,833, the principal being wheat and salmon, the latter alone requiring 120 vessels of as many thousand tons to move the product for one year.

The Lower Columbia is a picturesque ride, but somewhat tame after coming through scenes grander by comparison. It is about like the Hudson at West Point and the Highlands. We travel down it 40 miles, cross the Columbia at Kalama, and bid Oregon farewell till we see it again from the top of Mount St. Elias.

A Queer Little Western Railroad.

There is a little narrow gauge railroad in central Illinois which is rather amusing. It runs through a rich farming country and is owned and managed by wealthy farmers. The conductors, engineers and brakemen are farmers' sons who have grown weary of raising cattle and corn and who have taken to "railroading" as a relief. The various stations along the line of this little railroad are of no consequence whatever, except to their score or more of inhabitants and to the farmers of the neighborhood. A train starts from each end of the road every morning after breakfast, runs to the opposite end of the road by dinner time, returns again for tea, and ties up for the night. As there is no telegraph line connected with the road, nobody at any of the stations knows when a train is coming until it arrives in sight. As the rails are laid on ties placed on the flat prairie, and as no grade exists from one end of the road to the other, the tall grass has an awkward habit of getting under the wheels and stopping the train. Not frequently, also, the light rails spread apart and the cars run off the track, and go tumbling along on the virgin prairie. Whenever a little accident of this kind occurs the engineer, conductor, brakemen and passengers jump to the ground and lift the cars into place again. The passengers ride in a car reserved for them in the rear of a long line of freight cars. Half of this car is partitioned off in order that it may also serve for carrying mail bags, express matter and baggage. Not infrequently passengers walk into a village ahead of the train and announce that the cars will follow them in an hour or two, providing they can be kept on the track long enough. Sometimes a locomotive gets stalled on some one of the several gentle hills along the line. The trainman thereupon quietly wait until the other engine appears. Then the two engins draw the train up the hill. Notwithstanding its oddities the stockholders are making lots of money.

A Deadly Electric Sword.

A gentleman of Shanghai has, after considerable experimenting, invented a new and deadly weapon. This is an electric sword, which, when the point touches the party attacked, sends a powerful shock through him, and if not immediately killing will at least put him hors de combat. The sword is an ordinary military sabre, but along its whole length is let in a fine platinum wire, which ends at the foil of the weapon. A small but very powerful storage battery is carried strapped about the waist, much the same as a cartridge-box. Insulated wires connect this battery with the sword, and by pressing a button the holder can complete the circuit at pleasure.

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

A CADET WHO SWOONED.

Why a $6,000,000 Widow Ran to a Soldier Boy on a Parade Ground.

Mme. Barrios is a beauty. She is of the genuine South American type. According to our ideas she lacks height, and there is too much of her aquiline nose. She is said to be only 24, and may be, as South American women don't long retain their girlishness. Of the seven children three, including the cadet, are her stepchildren. Her own four are little tots, dressed oddly, but always picturesquely. Mme. Barrios has magnificent jewels. Her collection of diamonds is said to rival the European crown jewels. But she does not wear many of them now—only a diamond comb, that blazes like an electric light, and a pair of solitaire ear rings as big as hickory nuts.

One afternoon lately, just as she had stepped out of her carriage and taken her seat on one of the benches facing the grassy plain where the parade was formed, a cadet, standing in the middle of the line near the colors, suddenly fell full length on the grass. It is no uncommon thing for them to faint after a hard day's drilling, particularly when it is warm and the belts around their slim waists are strapped unusually tight. It was soon known to be young Barrios. Mme. Barrios uttered a little cry and flew to the edge of the path skirting the parade ground. She is said to be very affectionate to this step-son, and certainly showed a motherly solicitude.

Meanwhile his belt had been unfastened, his coat opened, and while one cadet fanned him vigorously another ran for water to the officers' quarters, close by. The line stood motionless; nothing short of Judgment day could move that soldierly corps. The poor young fellow lay at full length, as still and white as death. Presently he stirred faintly. A cadet officer, with a red sash tied around his slim waist and a sword, stepped out of ranks and advanced toward Mme. Barrios, telling her it was nothing but a fainting fit, and in a minute or two Barrios was helped to his feet and walked feebly across the plain to the barracks, supported between two cadets. Mme. Barrios, with a companion, hurried—if anything so graceful as her quick walk could be called hurried—and met him. So you see she has a heart as well as glorious eyes and a delicious voice.—West Point Cor. Chicago News.

In an Electric Storm.

Messrs. Walsh and Tweedy, of the United States geological survey, were caught out in an electric storm while sketching from a high peak, near Dixie Butte, Ore., recently. First there was a buzzing sound, apparently coming from under the drawing table that Mr. Walsh was using. He put his hand under the drawing sheet and received a severe shock. Tweedy, who was lying down, was disturbed, and jumped to his feet, but went down again quickly, for where he stood the electric fluid entered in such quantities as to produce an almost unbearable pricking sensation. Both men felt tremendous shocks, their hair stood up like bristles, their muscles twitched, and in all respects they felt as if connected to a powerful electric battery. Through it all the projecting rocks gave forth a musical, humming sound.—New York Sun.

Joke on Editor Pulitzer.

Joseph Pulitzer, editor of The New York World, wandered into a fashionable restaurant in that city, one evening recently, to eat his supper. He had hardly been in there a minute when one of a party of English gentlemen, who had arrived but the day before, beckoned vigorously to him, with the exclamation of "Here, waitah; a glass of sherry!" There was a roar of laughter from those who witnessed the incident, and readily comprehended the Englishman's mistake, while Mr. Pulitzer's face turned all the colors shown through the spectrum, and he lost no time in hiding his confusion by a hasty and undignified exit. "Confound it!" said the Englishman, when the cause of the laughter was explained to him, "I didn't know but the fellow was a waiter. He looks like one, and how could I tell?"—Chicago Times.

Gen. Sickles' Residence.

Since Gen. Sickles had his famous quarrel with a gas company over a bill for gas charged for while his house was closed and he was away in Europe the general has kept his eye on his meter, and now one of the most conspicuous ornaments in his handsomely furnished house on Fifth avenue is a gilded and showy gas meter, which stands in an alcove in his front hall. It is an unusually elaborate and intricate, and presumably vigilant, piece of mechanism, which combines with its functions of a measure also the qualities of a Hawkshaw, to detect and prevent the surreptitious entrance into Gen. Sickles' house of any uninvited and unnecessary supply of the insidious and costly fluid.

A Female Revivalist.

Mrs. Woodworth, a revalist, is attracting large crowds in Muncie, Ind. Her sermons are simply exhortations, and she holds her hearers quite as much by her manner as by her words. She is dramatic in tone and action. Her speech is of a sing-song style, while her hands are kept busy in graceful gesture. At times her eyes are fixed heavenward for several minutes, while she stands like a statue, her hands thrown back over her shoulders, palms upward, in a slow, weaving motion. Her audience watch her intently, and are evidently deeply impressed.—New York Sun.

Henry George on Literary People.

It is curious how people will persist in looking upon writers as unpractical people, no matter what their previous experience has been. As matter of fact the literary people of to-day are as a rule excellent business men and women. Look at Mr. Stedman, for instance. I myself am called a dreamer, an idealist and I don't know what else. Yet I have been a sailor in all parts of the world, a compositor, newspaper man and now a publisher. One would think I ought to have some knowledge of everyday affairs by this time.—New York Tribune Interview.

The Napoleonic Outlook Hopeless.

Ex-Empress Eugenie of France has withdrawn the pensions which she hitherto paid to the supporters of the Bonaparte dynasty. Several persons who were accustomed to call at the Paris postoffice and draw their money orders on her majesty at Chiselhurst are now missed. The reason alleged for the withdrawal of the alllowances is that her majesty sees that the Napoleonic outlook in France is hopeless, and that there is nothing to be gained by sustaining the cause of imperialism against the republic.—Chicago Tribune.

Mrs. James Brown Potter.

Mrs. James Brown Potter produced such an impression upon the poet Browning during her recent visit to London that he is writing a poem especially for her, which will be as dramatic as he can possibly make it. It is not to printed at all, and her recitation of it is expected to be a great feature of her dramatic appearances in New York this winter.—The Argonaut.

Mr. Conkling's Dinner.

At the Carlton club, New York, ex-Senator Conkling ordered for dinner a bunch of white grapes and a cup of iced tea, when his breakfast had been a glass of milk and some toast.

THE CHOCTAW NATION.

Their Fine Language—Government and Capital City—Laws.

The Choctaw is a fine sounding tongue, declared by Walter Lowry, once a United States senator, and fully capable of judging, as being the finest language in the world for oratory. It is easy to learn enough of it for trading purposes, but to learn it thoroughly is very difficult. It has more words than most Indian tongues, the lexicon containing about 10,000. The Choctaws for over fifty years have had publications in their language.

They use the Roman alphabet, with some modifications. There are twenty-two letters. They now have a regular representative form of government, and have had for many years. Their principal chief is Edmund McCurtain. This official is elected every two years. Thomas McKinney has recently been elected his successor. The Choctaw capital is Tushkahomma. They have a general council, consisting of a senate and a house of representatives, and have county, district and supreme courts.

The Choctaw nation had the prohibitory law thirty years before Maine, and it was in their constitution thirty years before Kansas had it. It is enforced fairly well, particularly as the United States intercourse laws prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquors into the territory. As to the general laws of the nation, they are not as well enforced as they might be. Whipping is a favorite punishment.—Indianapolis Journal.

Stray Shot.

Sir Charles Dilke spends three hours every day in sword practice and pistol shooting at short range.

China, it is said intends to issue a loan for $50,000,000 for construction of railways in the empire.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, at Hartford, regularly attends the church of which her son is pastor.

Cigarette smoking by persons while in the surf is the fashionable child's play at San Diego, Cal.

There are 2,000 Chautauqua circles in Michigan.

The use of the Suez canal in moving the tea crop from China to America is rapidly being abandoned for the swifter means afforded by transcontinental railways.

Lace is said to be driving out frillings in England, and the Honiton factories at Exeter are overrun with orders.

A bunch of grapes recently picked near San Jose, Cal., weighed 10¼ pounds.

A Sydney paper avers that the Prince of Wales gives to ladies diamond latch keys which are worn as a sort of decoration.

Dennison, the inventor of the convenient and now indispensable tag, died recently in Massachusetts. Over 225,000,000 of his tags are sold annually.

Queen Victoria is thinking of restoring Col. Valentine Baker to his old rank in the British army.

Before next June a statue of Miles Standish will frown on Boston people.

Ex-Senator Bruce, of Mississippi, says he is going to prepare a lecture on his experience in the senate.

James C. Flood, the California millionaire, has just finished a $2,000,000 brown stone house on Nob Hill, San Francisco.

A palindrome in actual existence is the sign of a baker in Yreka, Siskiyou county, Cal. This is it: "Yreka Bakery."—Newark Advertiser.

Miss Fortescue is under bond not to marry for six months after her arrival in America.

A heroine of note is Miss Mary Dewey, of Vermont, who has started for eastern Turkey as a missionary, and who, before reaching her destination, will take a horseback journey of 300 miles through a barbarous country.

Edward Cooper wears eyeglasses of unusual diameter. They are among the widest in New York, and instead of fitting over the eye they cover eyes, eyebrows and eyelashes. They add to his kindly paternal and benevolent air.

Once famous Anna Dickinson has been summering in the Wyoming valley, and she feels much refreshed and in condition for the literary work in which she proposes to engage.—The Journalist.

Maggie Green, of Sodus, Mich., aged 10, ought to be a lucky little girl. She had on exhibition at the Benton Harbor fair 2,125 specimens of four-leaved clover, picked with her own hand and arranged on cardboard.

The Freeze in Florida.

In regard to the freeze of last winter, thought to be so disastrous, Editor Graves, of The Jacksonville Herald, said: It has done Florida great good. It has proved the hardiness of the orange tree. We thought when it occurred that every tree was killed. It turns out that the very fewest were killed. Groves that were thought to be killed are now unusually luxuriant and thrifty. This has reassured the investors and given the orange tree a steady character and fixed value.—Florida Letter.

Heavier Than Ever.

It is said that, notwithstanding Dr. Ward's advice that he fish and shoot industriously while in the woods, in order to reduce his flesh, President Cleveland took it easy, ate very heartily, took a nap each afternoon and thus came out of the woods ten pounds heavier than when he went in, and has never weighed so much as now.

Lieut. Gorringe's Grave.

The monument that is to be unveiled this month over the grave of Lieut. Gorringe at Sparkhill, on the west bank of the Hudson, overlooking Tappan Zee, is an obelisk of granite, an exact copy of the Cleopatra's Needle on a reduced scale, the proportions of that work being carefully preserved.

Queer Phase of Insanity.

Nashville has a citizen who in dress and general conduct appears to be perfectly sane, but each morning he gets up early, fills a small bag with food, a little tobacco and some stones, goes to the river and throws it in. Asked why he does this, he says: "Brother can't get anything to eat under the water." One of his brothers was drowned.—New York Sun.

The King and the Doctor.

On the spot in Sternberg lake where the body of the late King Ludwig was found there now stands a cross with a beautiful wreath of mountain flowers, while the place where Dr. Von Gudden's body was found is simply marked by a pole.

An Eagle Released.

A big eagle that measured nine feet from tip to tip, captured last spring near Binghamton, N. Y., was released the other day. On its leg is a brass tag giving the date of its liberation, and offering cash prizes for the return of the bird.—Cleveland Leader.

One Every Five Days.

Mr. Webb, of the London and northwestern railway, England, stated in a recent speech in London that a new locomotive is placed on that road on the average every five days, to repair the loss caused by ordinary depreciation.

Annual Parade of the Peabody Fire Department.

A Successful Exhibition, Etc.

The parade, trial and supper of the Peabody Fire Department for this year is now a thing of the past. It was a grand success in every respect and was carried out without a thing to mar the smoothness with which the whole affair has been conducted from the first meeting of the committees held Sept. 17th to the winding up of the supper last Thursday evening. The day opened threatening storm and at one time Thursday forenoon rain began to fall, but not in quantity enough to lay the dust. At noon, however, "Old Sol" pushed his shining face through the curtain of clouds and from then until the day was done the weather was all that could be wished. The fire boys began to assemble early in the forenoon, the Fearless Hose Company of Amesbury, with their drum corps, arriving in town about 9 o'clock and were taken in charge by the boys of Hose 4 and shown the sights around town. At 12:30 o'clock Hose 2 and 4 with the Amesbury Company all headed by the Salem Brass Band marched to their positions on Chestnut street and soon the other companies fell in. After inspection by Chief Buxton the orders were given for the column to march at 1:15 o'clock. The column formed and marched over the route published in last week's PRESS.

The apparatus was polished up as bright as could be and decorated with flowers and bunting. Steamer 1 was drawn by a team of four blacks, Steamer 2 by four of Munroe & Arnold's bays, and the H. & L. by four grays. Fearless Hose of Amesbury also had a pair of horses from Marr's stable. Supt. of Fire Alarm Smart led off the line in a Concord buggy. The route was terribly dusty but was marched over in two hours and a half. Bunting was displayed all along the line. George H. Jacobs displayed a figure of a fireman in full uniform in front of his clothing store. Steamer 1 and Hose 1 turned out in the blue regulation uniform while the other companies wore the red uniforms. The display, while not being so large as that of thirteen years ago, was fully equal to it in point of excellence and condition of apparatus and horses. The streets were crowded, every horse-car bringing in large loads. There were about 200 men in the line including bands. The line was dismissed in front of the Central station at 3:45 o'clock and the firemen began to make ready for the trial which was to take place on Foster street. The Salem and Lynn bands consolidated and gave a concert of several numbers on the Square, to the great satisfaction of an immense audience. Foster street from the Square to Spring street was so full of people that it seemed as though it would be impossible to make the trials, but it was a good-natured crowd and submitted to being pushed back to the sidewalks. The distance to be run was from Oak street to the hydrant in front of the old police station, a distance of just 733 feet 5 inches, or 73 feet 5 inches over an eighth of a mile.

The Hook and Ladder made the first run, starting from box 37, at the corner of Oak street, the signal being one stroke of the fire alarm rung in from box 37. The test was to make the run, about an eighth of a mile, put up the Bangor ladder, and put a man on the roof. The time made would have been cut down one-half but for the catching of one of the hooks as the ladder was being taken out, but as fancy time cannot be made with such a heavy ladder, the boys have nothing to be ashamed of. The time made will be found below. Steamer 2 made the next run over the same ground, fires being lighted at the start, the run made, 150 feet of hose laid, all connections made, the line put on the roof of Blaney's block, steam got up, and water forced through the pipe. The greatest excitement, however, was the running of the hose carriages, Hose 1 making the first, Hose 3 next, followed by Hose 5, 2 and 4. The test was to make the same run as the previous machines, connect to hydrant, lay 150 feet of hose, and get water through, and some pretty quick work was done. Steamer 1 was the last on the programme, their test being the same as Steamer 2. Following is the official time: Hook and Ladder, 2m. 25 1-4 sec.; Steamer 2, 7m. 50 sec.; Hose 1; 1m. 25 3-4 sec.; Hose 3, 1m. 20 sec.; Hose 5, 1m. 25 sec.; Hose 2, 1m. 26 sec.; Hose 4, 1m. 22 1-2 sec.; Steamer 1, 8m.

The Judges were ex-Chief D. S. Littlefield, of Peabody; ex-Chief J. B. Osborne, of Salem; Engineer Glidden, of Beverly, and Capt. Pierce, of Pickett Engine Co., of Marblehead.

The best run to the hydrant was made by Hose 2, that carriage arriving just four seconds ahead of any other time. The pipemen were on the roof in fine order, but were delayed seven seconds for water by a blunder in opening the hydrant, which lost them the first place. The pipeman of Hose 4, hooked the pipe to his back and ran up the ladder entirely unencumbered, the water coming before he could unhook the pipe. Hose 3 let the water into their hose just as soon as connection was made at the hydrant, and took a kink in the hose at the foot of the ladder until the pipeman was on the roof, so that the water followed the pipe on the roof, winning that company first place. The Steamers would have made better time had they run a longer distance, as the crowd around the engines after they set at the fountain shut off the draught, but the time made was unusually good, considering that the water had to be lifted 45 feet. The drill was a perfect success and no company has any reason to be ashamed of its record as the difference between the first and last was only 6 3-4 seconds. The work was well done and shows the citizens just what they have for a fire department. The drill was no fancy work but just what can be done at any time in fire duty. The apparatus was housed as soon as the trials were over, and at 6:10 o'clock the line was reformed and with the invited guests the march was taken up to the Town Hall where supper had been prepared, plates being laid for 300. The party were welcomed by Chief Buxton, and the orders given to fall to and do justice to the good things set before them. The bill of fare consisted of escalloped oysters, roast turkey and chicken, ham, cakes, fruits, ice cream, frozen pudding, hot coffee and cigars. Harvey Blunt, of Boston, did the catering, and this fact makes it needless to say that it was a success. There was plenty of the best of food and it was promptly served. After supper the exercises of the evening were opened with a selection by the Salem Brass Band, which received great applause. Chief Buxton, as toast master, then made a few pointed remarks, followed by Selectmen Herrick and Relihan, S. C. Bancroft, James P. King, Col. C. T. Batchelder, O. B. Chadwick, D. S. Littlefield, ex-Chief J. B. Osborne of Salem, W. C. Munroe, John Linehan, ex-Chief Roome of Peabody, Engineer Glidden of Beverly, Capt. Pierce of Marblehead and others. The speaking was finished about 8 o'clock and all departed feeling well pleased with the exercises of the day. The members of Fearless Hose 3 of Amesbury were obliged to leave early to the regret of the firemen. The music of the Salem and Lynn brass bands was very fine and gave universal satisfaction.

SPARKS.

One little incident was when the hose used to keep the fountain full jumped out wetting down the crowd. This caused considerable merriment among those who did not get wet but the reverse with the victims.

The big bouquet in the smoke stack of Steamer 2 was furnished by B. D. Hill as were the boquets in the trumpets and the boutoniers worn by the members of that company. The great success of the day was due to the liberality of the citizens in their subscriptions. The committee in charge of the arrangements will hold a meeting to settle up affairs Friday evening.

Last Thursday morning Foreman William H. Joll, in behalf of the members of Steamer Company No. 1, presented the driver Robert Tanch with a handsome Malacca wood whip.

Engineer John H. Tibbetts has taken a position as private watchman on Foster street.

The skating and dancing party given by Abel Proctor H. & L. at the rink after the parade last Thursday evening was a grand success, being attended by an audience of over 700 persons. Dancing followed the skating, the grand march being started with 140 couples in the line.

Chief Engineer Moody of Lynn, with several Lynn firemen, was in town Thursday afternoon and expressed himself as well pleased with the turnout and trials. Firemen were also present from about every city and town in the vicinity.

The fire alarm went off on a rampage Monday noon, striking rapidly from 11:20 until 11:45 when it was shut off. This was caused by a tree, which was being cut down by the street department on Lowell street, falling on the wires and tearing down about 500 feet. The apparatus in the Central station hitched up but not knowing where box 497 was located, did not start out. Hose 3 took the alarm to be from box 15 and started for Pike & Whipple's. Hose 4 went for box 28 and Hose 2 started for the Square, while Hose 5 thinking that the whole of Foster street must be on fire turned out for that section. The break was soon repaired and quiet reigned once again.

Some of the firemen are talking up a grand firemen's muster for next year.

The new La France steamer for Beverly Farms will arrive and be tried this week. A large party of Peabody firemen will attend the exhibition as it is the only steamer of its kind in the New England states.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The Taunton Musical Festival, which was held last week, was a very enjoyable affair. In connection with the Worcester Festival, held a month earlier, it forms a prelude to the musical work of the artists during the season. It is a young society, comparatively speaking, and does not strive for so high things as the Worcester Association. Both draw upon the surrounding villages for chorus and audience, the Worcester chorus being double that of the Taunton one in point of numbers. These festivals do a great work in musical education, by giving an opportunity to the people of hearing the interpretation of grand works by artists of recognized ability. The audiences may not appreciate all the selections; very likely they do not. Very likely many attend the closing Oratorio because it is the proper thing to do. In either case they become familiar with the work in a degree; they cannot fail to be impressed with the grand choruses of Elijah or of Judas Maccabæus. Their education will at all events begin.

A comparison of the two festivals (Worcester and Taunton) would be unfair, because the former is an old established organization, with more money and larger resources to draw from. They can command an orchestra selected from the best instrumentalists in the country, made up of men like Listemann, Fries, Heindl, and others equally famed. The latter must be content with Blaisdell's Orchestra from Concord, N. H., an organization made up of good local material, familiar with the works of the old masters, in good practice, and competent to do acceptable work. They are no better, however, than our Salem Cadet Orchestra. The Taunton people will not support so many performances as at Worcester, neither are they as musical or appreciative. But here, again, the work of the festivals in education is seen. The Worcester Association has given its festivals for twenty-eight years; Taunton only eight. Yet the character of the works selected for the chorus and soloists was equal, as far as it went, to the Worcester festival. The difference was chiefly perceptible in the manner in which they were received. At the second evening's concert, William Courtney of New York sang delightfully and with refined artistic taste a song that was not severely classical, and Miss Hallenback sang a choice selection with a 'cello obligato—doing it well. Yet the audience were not as demonstrative as over the noise produced (we can call it nothing else) by a young lady from New York who tried to show off the beauties of a Weber piano.

In the endeavors of the management to provide solo artists of the best material possible with their limited means, nothing but praise should be bestowed. It is to be credited to them that they succeeded. Although fewer in number, the soloists will compare favorably with Worcester. The contraltos were superior. Where in Worcester was there such a contralto as Emily Winant? or Hattie J. Clapper? Gertrude Edmands, alone, of all the Worcester contraltos, was an artistic success, and she is a young and inexperienced artist, painstaking and creditable though she be and is, compared with these two at Taunton. They had no basso at Worcester equal to Max Heinrich. They had Wilson, so did Taunton. But this young artist, who bids fair to equal Whitney or Babcock in Oratorio work, had a better opportunity at Taunton, and showed himself fully equal to it. Taunton had Courtney and Mockridge for tenors—the best at Worcester. She had also good sopranos—Mrs. Humphrey Allen, of Boston, Mme. Stone Barton, who was at Worcester, and Miss Hallenback, of New York. It must be admitted that the solo sopranos were weaker than the others; it was so at Worcester. But their work will compare favorably with that of Taunton's older and more successful sister society.

If there is anything deserving of criticism on the part of the management at Taunton, it was in so utterly neglecting Boston artists in the selection of soloists. One soprano, alone, was a Boston artist. New York or other than Boston, furnished all the rest. For a Massachusetts society this is too bad. Was there no Boston soprano who could render the solo music in Elijah? We do not dispute that there are few. But one of those few ought to have been chosen.

The strongest single card of the management was the Courtney Quartette, who gave the solos of Rossini's Stabat Mater entire, besides other work. It was not alone the fact that the quartette were artists, but that they had sung much together that gave to this work the fine rendering which it had. Mr. Zerrahn said it was the most perfect performance of the Stabat Mater which he had ever conducted. The people of South Eastern Massachusetts have reason to be proud of its society, its management, and its work this year. It will be remembered doing the entire season by those who participated in its pleasures. It is worthy of a vote, in passing, that the leading railroad, the Old Colony, made liberal arrangements, at reduced rates, for the benefit of its patrons,—something which the Boston & Albany will not do for Worcester.

We learn that arrangements are in contemplation for the Lowell Choral Association to join with the Salem Oratorio Society in two productions of the Redemption, one at Salem and the other at Lowell. This was done, we believe, when this work was performed before by the Salem Oratorio Society. We trust successful and satisfactory arrangements may be made. The grand chorals of the "Redemption" can be thus more satisfactorily rendered, in addition to the interest, to both audiences, by the union of the two societies.

The first rehearsal of the Salem Oratorio Society occurs to-night in Academy Hall. We hope Peabody will be well represented.

The Hawthorne Male Quartette, assisted by Mrs. J. P. Fernald, met with good success at a recent concert at Hyde Park. The Norfolk County Gazette says: "The musical honors of the evening were about equally divided between the Hawthorne Male Quartette of Boston, and Mrs. J. P. Fernald. The selections by the quartette were excellently well rendered, their voices blending harmoniously, and their enunciation clear and distinct. The singing of Mrs. Fernald was especially admired, her rich soprano voice drawing forth many words of admiration from her auditors."

Mrs. Fernald has several engagements with this Quartette for the season. They will sing in Dedham, Mass., Nov. 11th.

A praise service was held in the vestry of the South church, last Sunday evening. The exercises consisted principally of singing familiar congregational hymns. Mrs. Chase and Miss Bill sung a duet as one selection. Short and pertinent remarks were made by the pastor. Such services are deserving of success.

Miss Howard, contralto of the Unitarian church here, and the South church in Salem, has left for a permanent residence in Kansas City. Miss Clara Pitman has been engaged at the South church, Salem. Miss Hubon, of the Universalist church choir, has been singing in the Unitarian church for several Sundays.

Mrs. Mary E. Roberts, of this town, has sung several Sundays acceptably in the Barton church choir at Salem.

Alfred W. Newcomb, of Salem, who is organist of the Trinity M. E. Church in Charlestown, is to bring out the Cantata of the Haymakers in that city to-morrow evening.

It is expected that Dr. Eben Tourjee, of the N. E. Conservatory of Music in Boston, will conduct one of his Sunday evening praise meetings in Wesley Chapel, Salem, shortly. Dr. Tourjee is an enthusiast in praise services and congregational singing.

Miss Jennie Sargent, the young singer who made her debut at the Worcester festival, recently sung in Haverhill, which is her home, and had a glorious reception. The Gazette says: "We observe a tendency in Boston to claim Miss Jennie Sargent. This is all wrong. Miss Sargent is a Haverhill girl from the word go, and we mean to retain our claim upon her. The 'Hub' may retain its cradle of liberty, its æsthetic culture, and even its John Lawrence Sullivan, if it chooses, but in the matter of sweet singers, we are chief among 10,000." That's right. Stick to it, brother Gazette.

R. L. Reinewald has resigned from his position as leader of the Salem Brass Band to take effect Nov. 1st. He will form a new band to be connected with the 8th Regiment and will have at his command some of the best musicians in Salem.

Holten Lodge of Odd Fellows will work the third degree next Tuesday night.

The Vaughn Morocco Machine Company shipped two of their machines to Philadelphia yesterday.

ASTHMA.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

LARGEST RETAIL CLOTHIERS IN NEW ENGLAND.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22.

We shall inaugurate our 9th ANNUAL FALL AND WINTER SALE of Men's, Boys' and Children's fine and medium Clothing, Hats, Caps, Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, Carriage Robes and Blankets, and Ladies' and Misses' Furs. Remember our salesroom now covers nearly half an acre. Such a display has never before been seen east of New York City. Having connected Conrad's entire block with our own store, we can now say that we have the largest Retail Clothing, Hat, Cap, and Furnishing Goods Store in the United States, except the Marlboro in Boston, one of our own stores. We would call the attention of the public to the fact that this is the fourth time that we have been obliged to enlarge our store since commencing business in Salem. We will guarantee to show more Clothing, Hats and Caps, and Furnishing Goods, than all the dealers in Salem, Peabody, Beverly and Marblehead combined.

The board of County Commissioners have agreed upon the Asa T. Newhall farm at Lynn, as the most desirable location for the truant school. It contains about ninety acres of valuable tillage land. The most of the farm lies in Lynn, but a portion extends up toward Lynnfield and there are a few acres in Peabody. The farm is valued at $13,000 and the whole expense is estimated to cost about $25,000.

They will reside in Worcester.

Yesterday we were shown a private letter to the Enos Electric Railroad Company from the Chicago Electric Elevated Railroad Company of Chicago making a very flattering offering for the right to conduct the Enos system in the State of Illinois. The offer was over a hundred thousand dollars and the company, to quote their own words, "has $5,000,000 capital and good men back of it." They have also had propositions from three other companies.

Lies come from meanness, low vanity, cowardice and a depraved nature, and they always fail of their nature and bring the writer into contempt. Without strict integrity, justice and honor, no man can have continued success in anything or lasting respect from anybody. Every one is found out sooner or later, and much sooner than he supposes. Indeed, true character is sure to be known and sure to be justly appreciated. What further comment is necessary.

The Oxford League held its regular semi-monthly meeting at the residence of Miss Lottie Sim, last Thursday night. There was a large attendance, notwithstanding the storm. The subject of the evening was Creeds. Miss Sabina Wait presented a paper, "Why I am a Methodist." Some new ones joined the membership list and some the social list. At next meeting it is hoped Mr. Sim, who is expected home from England, will address the League.

Rufus Sargent of Newburyport, the architect who superintended the building of our town hall and who had many friends in town, died Monday at Palatka, Fla., where he was engaged in constructing buildings for a Florida railroad company. For many years he has been a prominent architect in Essex County and Rockingham County, New Hampshire, and he furnished the plans for many public buildings and private residences in New England. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

A lady sends to the American Analyst the following recipe for preserving cheese from mold, which she vouches for as infallible, she having used it successfully during twenty-five years of housekeeping experience: "Cover the cheese with a piece of cotton or linen cloth, saturated with strong vinegar. It will preserve the cheese as fresh as when first cut, prevent mold, and no flies or insects will touch it. This I know is excellent. The taste of the cheese is in no wise affected by the vinegar."

Poet's Corner.

Golden-Rod.

I've reached the land of Golden-rod,
And I see it wave and nod;
But yesterday, in fiery street,
I heard the tramp of tired feet;
Now, on the heart of August noon,
Wood-waters lapse in rippling tune.
The curtains of the mossy burn
Wear fringes deep in fragant fern;
The arches of its shining sluice
Are slender spirals of the spruce.
While far above I see them stir
The lances of the stately fir,
And on the down, I see it nod,
And beckon me — the Golden-rod.

But yesterday it seemed to me
That I could never turn and flee,
Or ever find that quiet spot
Where greed and gain and noise are not.
How far away the vexing strife,
The turmoil sad men misname life!
Now here I wait till sunset dyes
Steal through the azure of the skies,
And scaring hill and circling plain
Flush radiant with their rosy strain.

I wait till twilight brooding deep
Takes earth within her arms asleep.
And only low half tones are heard:
The flutter of the dreaming bird,
The brooklets run below the pine;
Low-leaping trout that spring and shine;
The patter of the drooping burr
Grasshoppers in the holes astir;
The cricket and the katydid
Calling, in leafy houses hid,
The murmur of a world at peace
That stir, and thrill, and softly cease.
O peaceful realm of Golden-rod!
O kingdom of the clovery sod!
Thy tiny people of the ground
Do reign devoid of jarring sound.
Thy happy nations of the air
Fulfil their fate all free from care;
They carry into God's good plan
None of the loud ado of man.
How far the thunder of the mart,
The wear and tear, the wound and smart;
Ambition's war, the greed of gain,
The lust of power, faith slowly slain;
Man thrusting man on Failure's wall;
Man rising on his brother's fall;
The rush for prizes never earned;
The show of wisdom never learned;
The poor pretense; the flowery snare
That kills a soul, yet seems so fair;
Love wounded daily till it dies!
The heart bereft that idly sighs;
The loneliness, the sense of loss,
On treasures ruined, the human cross
That every ilving soul must bear.
What wonder that it seems so fair
Beside man's weary world of sin,
Thy world that no sin enters in—
O kingdom of the clovery sod!
O peaceful realm of Golden-rod!
I pluck the milk-weed's silken pod
And set it with the Golden-rod.
I tarry long, I linger late,
I cry: "O world of work, await,
I cannot hasten unto thee.
In Nature's kingdom I am free —
Free from the worker's ceaseless strain.
Tasks never done; the low dull pain,
Piercing the ever-burdened brain!
O weary world of work, await,
Nor call me from my high estate."
Yonder between two mountains vast
The bright shield of the lake is cast,
O splendor of the far deep sky,
Of mountain soaring lone and high,
Of lake that flashes at its feet,
Of ferns and mosses cool and sweet;
O beauty, brooding everywhere,
The essence of the earth and air;
The ringing brook, the pool's still well,
The sunlit slope, the shaded dell —
How can I say to you, Farewell!

I lie amid the Golden-rod,
I love to see it lean and nod,
I love to feel the grassy sod
Whose kindly breast will hold me last,
Whose patient arms will hold me fast —
Fold me from sunshine and from song,
Fold me from sorrow and from wrong.
Through gleaming gates of Golden-rod
I'll pass into the rest of God.

— Mary Clemmer.

Where Are They?

"No women in heaven." How sad the thought!
Yet such was the message the preacher brought
As he gave to us his morning discourse
And dwelt upon it till his voice was hoarse.
I listened, surprised at what he said,
It was so unlike what I'd thought or read;
And a similar surprise from different views
I saw expressed in many pews.

For one of the charms of that heavenly place,
Aside from its help as a means of grace,
Was the thought that ministering angel bands
Should be women gathered from many lands.

Of course mankind may have some show,
But women will rule, as here below,
With now and then an exception rare,
Where a man objects, though it is "up there."

This world-wide belief must be set aside
If our preacher's words cannot be denied,
And an accepted enjoyment of that other sphere
No longer serve as an incentive here.
On what basis then, did his argument hold
That no woman can enter the heavenly fold?
On this text of Scripture, explained with power,
"There was silence in heaven, for half an hour."

Etta Laken's New Dress.

BY VELA VANSE.

Although the last of April, yet the morning on which my story opens was very chilly. So chilly, indeed, that men pulled up their coat collars and buttoned all the buttons. The time was a little before eight, the place, Stanford, a village of no small pretensions, in Western Massachusetts.

It was nearly time for the Academy bell to ring, and the three girls walking so briskly down Main street were evidently aware of the fact.

As they turned the corner of the post-office, if one had been near enough, he might have heard Marian Heywood say:

Well, I know what I shall wear, and that will be a pink silk with a lace overdress that will cost all of five dollars a yard. Mamma says pink suits my light hair and blue eyes perfectly and so I shall wear it.

Miss Heywood, having delivered this speech, gave her much-be-frizzled head an added toss and her elbows a wider angle. Her two companions, Clara Farnsworth and Etta Laken glanced at each other significantly, but to both came the thought that Marian's pink silk did not make any difference in the problem they were trying to solve.

Clara was the only child of Judge Farnsworth and the favorite of the whole town. She had large, liquid brown eyes and a complexion like a peach. Strongly sympathetic and greatly attached to her friend Etta, she was greatly troubled at something which evidently concerned her.

The trouble in brief was this. The exercises given by the graduating class of the Stanford Academy, were to occur on the twentieth of June. Of course, new dresses were in demand for the occasion.

Mr. Laken, Etta's father, was a carpenter. By dint of long saving and prudent housekeeping on the part of his wife, he had been enabled to buy the Baine's estate. This consisted of a story and a half cottage house with two additions built on, a barn and two acres of good land. Of course, being opposite Judge Farnsworth's comfortable dwelling, and on a quiet street, the place was a desirable one and brought a good price.

The Laken's, who consisted of six children and the father and mother, had hardly got settled in their new home when an accident happened to Gerald, just one year older than Etta. He fell from a staging where he had been at work with his father, shingling, and ever since had been on his bed, suffering great pain. Everything was done for the boy that was possible but his attending physician did not think he would ever be able to walk again. Not wishing to put a mortgage on his house to raise money, it took every cent the father could earn to pay their expenses. This then was what made the cloud on Etta's fair face and made Clara's brown eyes look so thoughtful. Etta's mother had said that morning:

The expenses are so heavy, dear, that I think we shall have to make your muslin do for the graduation. Etta, as was her wont, answered carelessly, and the anxious look on her mother's face changed to a look of relief.

But for all this she was greatly disappointed and when Marian Heywood had joined them on her way to school the two friends were discussing the knotty problem.

Of course she wanted to know what they were talking about. On being told that the subject was dresses for the graduation, she informed her companions, in the words above, of her intention to wear a pink silk. Her father was wealthy, but people said he was "making ducks and drakes" of his money.

Reaching the academy the girls took their seats and began the day's work. Clara, usually full of life and overflowing with school-girl spirits, was strangely quiet to-day; so much so that her master eyed her askance as she sat with her chin in the palm of her hand and her brown eyes gazing into vacancy.

O, dear!, Clara was thinking, I wish I could give her a dress. She's too proud for that though. I wish the girls would all wear calico. I wonder if they would wear cambrics! As this thought came to her, she let the book which she had been toying with drop with such force on her desk, that everybody in the quiet room started and looked at her in surprise.

Seeing this, Clara smiled and then until recess gave her attention to her studies.

She was a quick learner and a bright scholar, standing second in the class, Etta having the first place.

At recess Clara interviewed a number of the girls, separately, but one and all scouted the cambric idea. For, alas for human nature, the news of the pink silk had spread rapidly and each determined to have the best that her parents would purchase.

Marian Heywood wouldn't wear one and I'm as good as she is, said Jennie Marks, then and there determining to have the handsomest blue silk she could find.

If Marian will, I will, was the sentiment of the whole class. But when Marian was asked her answer was haughty in the extreme.

Poor Clara was discouraged. But as day after day went by Mtta gave up worrying about her dress. Especially as Gerald grew no better and Dr. Maxwell had advised her parents to call Dr. Gardner, a physician in Springfield. It was approaching the day set apart by the town for the decoration of the soldiers' graves. The season was early this year so there was an abundance of flowers. The ladies of the Grand Army boys assembled in their hall to receive and arrange the flowers sent in.

Etta and Clara with their arms full of flowers, also came to help as many of the other academy girls had.

Mr. Reynolds, the pastor of the church which both girls attended, crossed the room to greet them and inquire for Gerald.

Gerald is under Dr. Gardner's care at the hospital, Etta replied to his kind inquiry. He thinks he will be able to walk with the help of crutches.

Indeed, well now that's good news. God is good to us all, is he not, to give the world such noble men as Dr. Gardner. How is your mother, Clara?

She is better this afternoon than she has been for a long while. It was only a bad cold, Dr. Maxwell said.

That's good. I'm glad to hear she is better. Mrs. Chase is better too and little Jimmy Serles. There is a lot of sickness this spring.

Oh!, Mr. Reynolds, said Clara suddenly, papa said to-day that Mr. Read was very sick with pneumonia. He went to Boston a week ago to see his sister and was taken down with it there. Isn't it too bad? He was always so jolly.

Yes, I heard something of the kind; although I was not aware that it was so serious an illness as pneumonia. Colonel Mitchel said that they would be obliged to omit the usual Memorial poem, as Mr. Read, who usually wrote it, was sick. I am very sorry. However, God wills it and it must be for the best. How do you do, Mr. Marks? This is a fine display of flowers, is it not?

When Etta went home to supper that night she evidently had made up her mind to do something desperate. Hanging her hat and sack in the hall and giving little Winnie a kiss, she ran upstairs to her room. Opening the drawer of a small stand on which some of her school-books lay, she took out a paper and began to read it. She made some corrections but at last put the paper back and went down to supper.

After she and Fanny had washed up the tea-things, Etta asked permission to go out for an hour.

I won't be long, mother, she said as she buttoned her sack.

Let me go, Et? pleaded Fanny.

No, answered her mother, your history lesson is to be learned, so bring your book and sit down.

Mrs. Laken had perfect confidence in her gray-eyed daughter, therefore she did not, as some mothers might have done, ask her any questions.

Before going out Etta ran upstairs and secured the sheets of paper from the little stand-drawer. She was soon on her way to Colonel Mitchel's, her destination. She pulled the bell and was soon admitted. On asking for the Colonel, Etta was shown into a tastefully furnished library where Mr. Mitchel soon joined her.

He was a very tall man, and to Etta, now heartily wishing herself at home, his size seemed immense.

Little Miss Laken! he exclaimed, shaking hands with her in his hearty manner. Well, this is a surprise. I wasn't looking for company this evening. What can I do for you?

His greeting put Etta at her ease at once, and plunging immediately into her errand she replied:

I heard that Mr. Read was sick and that you had no Memorial poem for the exercises to-morrow. So as I had written one for my own amusement I thought perhaps it might be good enough to read. Would you like to read it?

Colonel Mitchel took the paper and wiping his gold-rimmed glasses on his pocket handkerchief, he placed them upon his nose and prepared to read it.

Having finished the exquisite little bit he cleared his throat and laid the paper on the table. Etta looked up anxious for his opinion.

I shall be obliged to say, he commenced, and her hopes fell to zero, that this is about as pretty a poem as I ever read, he finished. His keen eyes twinkled as he noted the change upon her face which his last words produced. I shall not only be glad but proud to include this in our exercises. Would you rather read it yourself?

Oh, no, sir, if you please; I—I think I wouldn't like to. I am glad you like it.

Etta was so confused that she said afterward, she never got her breath until she was outside the big front door. Nor could she remember what she said or did when leaving.

Certain it was that on the morrow her poem was read and approved by all. Papers printed it and editorials spoke favorably of it.

One day the following week, as Etta came in from school, she noticed a large yellow envelope upon her inverted plate at the table.

Curiously opening it she was astonished to find that it contained a short note and a twenty dollar bill.

Mechanically she read the following words—Miss Laken:—Thanking you for your kindness in furnishing a poem for the exercises of Friday last, we beg that you will accept the enclosed as a slight token of the gratitude of Stanford Post, G. A. R.

This was a complete surprise to Etta and her family, but after a time she revived sufficiently to exclaim in joyful tones:

Now, mother, I can have a new dress, mayn't I? She could hardly eat her dinner, she was so eager to tell Clara the news.

But Clara was not so surprised as she pretended to be, for her father had told her all about it that morning at breakfast. He told her, too, that, the post having voted to give to Etta the ten dollars usually given to Mr. Read, Colonel Mitchel had made the amount twenty dollars from his own pocket.

Knowing this, therefore, Clara was not surprised, although as delighted as Etta herself.

Etta and Clara chose for their dresses soft white albatross with trimmings of lace. Their dresses were to be made alike.

The examinations over, nothing remained but to rehearse for the coming exercises.

The twentieth of June dawned bright and uncloudy.

Early in the forenoon a message arrived from Gerald, who had improved so rapidly that Etta hoped to have seen him in her audience, saying that they need not expect him.

This was a great disappointment to Etta, and was the only thing that marred the beauty of the day to her.

All went smoothly on in the exercises and at last came the valedictory by Miss Etta Laken.

Just before stepping to the platform her teacher detained her a moment, so she did not notice an unusual stir in the audience. The first object which met her gaze as she stepped to the front of the flower decked platform, was a reclining chair placed nearly in front of her.

Such a wave of surprise and gladness swept over her face that those present divined instinctively the cause and applauded loudly.

From his chair, Gerald, who had planned this surprise, listened with pride to Etta's able essay, The Marble Statue.

> Here your chisel, here your marble,
> Carve your statue as you will;
> If at first your star shines dimly,
> "Onward" be your motto still.

With these words of counsel and a happy smile she turned to go when a lovely basket of tea-roses was handed to her. Bowing gracefully she left the platform and was soon at her brother's side.

Who gave you your flowers, Etta? he asked after the first greetings.

I don't know, I'm sure. I was so eager to get down to you I didn't stop to look. Here's the card now.

With the compliments of Stanford Post, G. A. R.

Mr. and Mrs. Laken were very proud of their daughter that day and all spoke of their pretty dresses.

Marian Heywood's chagrin was great when she saw that her pink silk had not covered the defects in disposition and manner. One woman, even, was reported to have said that Marian Heywood had on some kind of a pink cambric with white muslin over it.

Etta, with her inseparable friend, Clara, occupies a room in the Liders' College at W— and is preparing to be a teacher.

Gerald, who walks with the aid of crutches, is the best short-hand writer between Stanford and Boston.

Soon after the graduation of the three girls, Mr. Heywood failed and was obliged to leave his handsome residence. Marian is a clerk in a store in Springfield where she drives all the other girls wild by continually harping on the time when Pa was wealthy and lived in Stanford.

Fanny, soon to graduate from the academy, does not worry about her dress; although she says if the obtaining it depended upon her writing a poem, that the dress would be a minus quantity.

It was a good stroke of policy when Mr. Z. A. Gallup, of the Naumkeag Clothing House, leased the store formerly occupied by David Conrad, and added it to his already large and commodious quarters. That it was needed no one of Mr. Gallup's customers can doubt who has visited the store the past year. The size of his mammoth stock of clothing and the limited quarters which had to be devoted to furnishing goods, hats, caps, etc., called for more room and this is just what the Conrad store has given him. About one week ago, in the presence of a large concourse of people, he had a brilliant opening, when fine masic was discoursed by the Salem Brass Band, and stereopticon views were displayed from the Essex House by Prof. Thompson. It announced to the public that Mr. Gallup was ready with his large and varied fall stock of goods for the needs of every man and boy in Essex County. The announcement was surely confirmed by a look inside. The new portion of the store gives more room for furnishing goods and here a fine display was made. It comprised all the novelties of the season arranged in the finest style. In the other portion of the store the counters were loaded with the goods for which this establishment has been long famous. The ready made clothing is all manufactured by the house and in quality, style and workmanship cannot be surpassed. The goods are not only made well but are made from first class materials. The workingman can here find something to suit him at a low price, and there are also the finer goods which are as near to the custom clothing as can be manufactured. Mr. Gallup has no goods which he is not willing to recommend to his customers, and they know it—hence his trade which has been large is constantly increasing, till to-day he has the largest clothing house, with one exception, in this part of the State. The firm are honorable and reliable and deserve the confidence and patronage of the community.

For the relief and cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other modes of treatment had proved of no avail.

Turkey down is becoming the favorite goods for trimming on cloaks and other winter garments.

Architect Edmond Legendre, 419 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal., states that having suffered for a long time with a severe cough, and failing to obtain any relief from doctors and the numerous preparations he took, he became alarmed. Tried Red Star Cough Cure, and one bottle entirely cured him.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The Detroit, Mich., papers have very complimentary notices of the work of Prof. C. R. Bill in introducing the Mason system of teaching in the schools there. One of the leading dailies thus speaks: It is doubtful if any of the gentlemen who visited the Bishop union school yesterday afternoon to listen to the exercises illustrating the present system of teaching music in the public schools realized the treat that was in store for them. For over an hour the pupils were handled by Mr. C. R. Bill of Boston with the most pleasing results. Mr. Bill is one of the vice-presidents of the National music school of Boston, chairman of the New England public school teachers' association, and supervisor of music for the schools of Beverly and Peabody, Mass. He is engaged in the introduction and supervision of the Mason system of school musical instruction, published by Ginn & Co. of Boston, which has been in use in Boston for two years, and was recently adopted in its latest improved form by the school board of Detroit. One of the leading features of the exhibition was the earnestness the pupils showed in their work. The purity and strength of tone displayed by several of the pupils was also a surprise, and the melody of the singing in unison was positively delightful. As acknowledged by Mr. Bill, the exhibition was not only proof of the care of the special instructors but was largely due to the thoroughness of the regular teacher of the room, Miss Hutchings.

The absence of Prof. Bill and Dr. Mason from our schools gives an opportunity to the teachers of the different rooms to carry on the musical instruction in their own way. We think it extremely probable that under the direction of the regular teachers, the scholars will be seen to show good progress, and possibly as good progress as under the management of Prof. Bill. At all events It is to be desired that the instruction of music should not be neglected, and we think our teachers are sufficiently interested to see that this is not done.

The Salem Brass Band, this week, enters the field under a new leader, who has had the direction of a band in Rutland, Vt. and who comes with the highest testimonials. He is an excellent cornet player, having a reputation in New York previous to going to Rutland. Mr. Reinewald, the former leader, is forming a new band to be attached to the 8th Reg't, and it is understood that he is under a personal engagement with Andrews, Moulton & Johnson to furnish the music at the dramatic performances in Mechanic Hall. With three bands Salem ought surely to be well supplied.

Charles A. Clark, the organist of St. John's church, is arranging for a piano and vocal recital to be given in Academy Hall, Salem, the latter part of this month. The vocal numbers will be given by Mrs. J. P. Fernald, and the tickets will be placed at popular prices. They will be on sale both in Peabody and Salem, and full particulars will be given later.

Dr. A. M. Dudley, of the Barton Square church choir, in Salem, sang tenor at the Unitarian church last Sunday, at which service a more perfect blending of voices in a quartette choir, we have not heard for a long time—certainly not at that church. The contralto was Miss Roberts of Lynn. The Society would be fortunate if they could maintain the choir as it was organized yesterday. Miss Roberts has a rich and pure contralto voice, blending with Miss Dalton's beautifully. Since Miss Sopha Hall's duet with Miss Dalton in the Peabody Institute at Macgregor's concert, we have not heard a contralto with Miss Dalton whose voices were better suited to each other.

The second rehearsal of the Salem Oratario Society will be held to-morrow evening at Academy Hall. Those who were prevented from attending, last Wednesday evening, on account of the storm, will bear this in mind.

Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, who is well known in this vicinity, has obtained a position as soprano in the church of the Divine Paternity (the church of the late Dr. Chapin), New York City, entering upon her duties next Sunday.

Miss Lucie H. Chandler, soprano of the Cong. church in Lynn, and sister of Lillian Chandler, the well known violinist, was married last week to Geo. E. Pillsbury, teller of the Lynn Nationl Bank.

The second of a course of entertainments by the young people connected with the South Church in Salem was given in Academy hall in that city, by Joshua Phippen, Jr., assisted by Miss Louise Elliot. The program consisted mainly of the works of Liszt, and a portrait of the composer was displayed on an easel on the stage. Mr. Phippen's piano-forte playing is well known to our readers and the Salem public; his selections were well chosen and rendered with a brilliancy of touch and clearness of expression which gained for him a liberal applause at the close of each number. Miss Louise Elliot sang a ballad from the Flying Dutchman, and two songs by Liszt. Miss Elliot is a stranger in Salem. She is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, and resides in San Francisco. She has relatives in Georgetown, Mass., where she has been spending the summer. Last year she studied with Fursch-Madi. She will be in Boston this winter, and has engagements already. Miss Elliot has a dramatic voice of much power in the high notes, which, however, she sings with apparant effort. At the same time they are her best. She was well received by the audience and bowed her acknowledgments of an encore.

TABERNACLE SERMON.

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES TO MERCHANTS AND BUSINESS MEN.

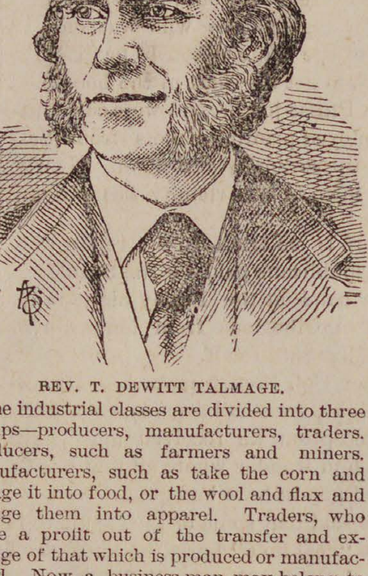
"The School of Hard Knocks" the Subject of His Discourse—Business Life a School of Patience and Christian Integrity—Inducements for Knavery.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 31.—The services at the Brooklyn Tabernacle are attended by large numbers of merchants and business men from all parts of this country, and from foreign lands, and the following sermon, preached by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., this morning, was timely. He selected for the opening hymn of the service that beginning:

> Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
> And all the world go free?

The text was Romans xii, 11: "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord."

Industry, devotedness, Christian service are all recommended in this one short text. What! is it possible to conjoin them? O yes! There is no war between religion and business, between Bibles and ledgers, between churches and counting houses. On the contrary, religion accelerates business, sharpens men's wits, sweetens acerbity of disposition, fillips the blood of phlegmatics, and throws more velocity into all the wheels of hard work. To the judgment it gives more skillful balancing; to the will more strength; to industry more muscle; to enthusiasm a more concentrated fire. You cannot show me a man whose business prospects have in any wise been despoiled by his religion.



REV. T. DEWITT TALMAGE.

The industrial classes are divided into three groups—producers, manufacturers, traders. Producers, such as farmers and miners. Manufacturers, such as take the corn and change it into food, or the wool and flax and change them into apparel. Traders, who make a profit out of the transfer and exchange of that which is produced or manufactured. Now, a business man may belong to one of these classes or he may belong to all of them. Whatever be your avocation, if you plan, calculate, bargain; if into your life there come annoyances, vexations and disappointments, as well as gains, dividends and percentages; if you are harassed with a multiplicity of engagements; in a word, if you are driven from Monday morning to Saturday night and from January to January with relentless obligations and duty, then you are a business man or a business woman, and my subject is appropriate to your case. We are apt to speak of the moil and tug of business life as though it were an inquisition or a prison into which a man is thrown, or an unequal strife where, half armed, he goes to contend. Hear me, this morning, while I try to show you that God intended business life to be a glorious education and discipline, and if I shall be successful in what I say I shall rub the wrinkles out of your brow and unstrap some of the burdens from your back.

I have first to remark that God intended business life to be to you a school of Christian energy. God started us in the world, giving us a certain amount of raw material out of which we were to hew our own character. Every faculty needs to be reset, rounded, sharpened up. After our young people have graduated from the schools and colleges and universities, they need a higher education, that which the collision and rasping of everyday life alone can effect. Energy of soul is wrought out only in the fire. And when a man for ten, or fifteen, or twenty, or thirty years has been going through business activities, his energy can no longer be measured by weights, or plummets, or ladders. It can scale any height. It can plummet any depth. It can thrash any obstacle. Now, do you suppose that God has spent all this education on you for the purpose of making you a more successful worldling, of enabling you to more rapidly accumulate dollars, making you sharp in a trade? Did God make you merely to be a yardstick to measure cloths, or a steelyard to weigh flour? And did He intend you to spend your life in doing nothing but to chaffer and higgle? My friend, He has put you in this school to develop your energy for His cause and kingdom. There is enough unemployed talent in the churches, and in the world to-day, to reform all empires, and all kingdoms and people in three weeks. O, how much idleness and strong muscles and stout hearts! How many deep streams that turn no mill wheels and haul on the bands of no factory? God demands that he have the best lamb out of every flock, the richest sheaf in every harvest, the best men of every generation; and in a cause where the Newtons and the Lockes and the Mansfields of the earth were proud to enlist, you and I need not be ashamed to toil. O, for fewer idlers and for more consecrated Christian workers!

Again: God intended business life to be to you a school of patience. How many little things there are in one day's engagements to perturb, and annoy, and disquiet you. Bargains will rub, and men will break their engagements. Collecting agents will come back empty handed. Tricksters in business will play upon what they call the "hard times," when in any times they never pay. Goods placed on the wrong shelf. Cash books and money drawer in a quarrel. Goods ordered for an especial emergency failing to come, or, if coming, damaged in the transportation. People who intend no harm going about shopping, unrolling goods they do not mean to buy, and trying to break the dozen. Men obliged to take up other people's notes. More counterfeit bills in the drawer. More bad debts. Another ridiculous panic. Under all this friction men break down, or they are scoured up into additional brightness. How many you and I have known who, in the past few years, have gone down under the pressure, and have become petulant, and choleric, and crabbed, and sour, and pugnacious, until customers forsook their stores, and these merchants have become insolvent, and their names were pronounced with detestation! But other men have found in this a school for patience. They toughened under the exposure. They were like rocks, more serviceable for the blasting. There was a time when they had to choke down their wrath. There was a time when they had to bite their lip. There was a time when they thought of a stinging retort they would like to utter. But now they have conquered their impatience. They have kind words for sarcastic flings. They have a polite behaviour for discourteous customers. They have forbearance for unfortunate debtors. They have moral reflections for the sudden reverses of fortune. How are you going to get that grace of patience? Not through hearing ministers preach about it. Oh, no. If you get it at all you will get it in the world, where you sell hats, and plead causes, and tin roofs, and make shoes, and turn banisters, and plow corn. I pray God that through the turmoil and sweat and exasperation of your everyday life you may hear the voice of Christ saying to you: "If patience possess your soul, let patience have a perfect work."

Again: God intended business life to be to you a school for the attaining of knowledge. Merchants do not read many books, nor study many lexicons, nor dive into great profounds, yet through the force of circumstances they get intelligent on questions of politics, and finance, and geography, and jurisprudence, and ethics. Business is a hard schoolmistress. If her pupils will not learn in any other way, with unmerciful hand she smites them on the head and on the heart with inexorable loss. You went into some business enterprise, and five thousand dollars got out of your grasp. You say the five thousand dollars were wasted. O, no! that was only tuition. Expensive schooling, but it was worth it. Misfortune, with hard hand, comes upon a man and wakes him up, and by the very force of circumstances business men get to be intelligent. Traders in grains must know about foreign harvests. Traders in fruit must know about the prospects of tropical production. Manufacturers of American goods must know about the tariff on imported articles. Publishers of books must know the new law of copyright. Owners of ships come to understand winds and shoals and navigation. And so every bale of cotton, and every raisin cask, and every tea box, and every cluster of bananas, become literature to our business men. Now, what is the use of all this intelligence unless you give it to Christ? Do you suppose God gives you these opportunities of brightening up your intellect and of increasing your knowledge merely to get larger treasures and grander business? O, no! Can it be that you have been learning about foreign lands and people that dwell under other skies, and yet have no missionary spirit? Can it be that you have been learning the follies and trickeries and hollowness of the business world, and yet you are not trying to bring to bear upon them this gospel which is to correct all abuses, and abolish all ignorance, and correct all mistakes, and arrest all crime, and irradiate all darkness, and lift up all wretchedness? Can it be that, notwithstanding your acquaintance with the intricacies of business, you are ignorant of those things which will last the soul long after bills of exchange and commissions and invoices and consignments and rent rolls have crumpled up and consumed in the fires of a judgment day.

Again: God intended business life to be to you a school of Christian integrity. No age of the world ever offered so many inducements for scoundrelism as are offered now. There is hardly a statute on the law books that has not some back door through which miscreants can escape. How many deceptions in the fabric of goods! Commercial life plies the land with trickeries innumerable, and there are so many people in Brooklyn and New York who live a life of plunder, that when a man proposes a straightforward, honest business, it is almost charged to greenness and want of tact. Ah! my brethren, this ought not to be. But I have to tell you that it requires more grace to be honest now than it did in the days of our fathers, when business was plain, and there were no stock gamblers, and woolen was woolen, and silk was silk, and men were men. How rare it is that you find a man who can from his heart say: "I never cheated in trade. I never overestimated the value of goods when I was selling them. I never covered up a defect in a fabric. I never played upon the ignorance of a customer, and in all my estate there is not one dishonest farthing." There are those who can say it. They never let their integrity bow or cringe to present advantage. They are as pure and Christian today as on the day when they sold their first tierce of rice or their first firkin of butter. There were times when they could have robbed a partner, when they could have absconded with the funds of a bank, when they could have sprung a snap judgment, when they could have borrowed illimitably, when they could have made a false assignment, when they could have ruined a neighbor for the purpose of picking up some of the fragments; but they never took one step on that pathway of hell fire. Now they can pray without being haunted with the chink of dishonest gold. Now they can read the Bible without thinking of the day when, with a lie on their soul, they kissed the book in a custom house. Now they can look into the laughing faces of their children without thinking of orphans left by them penniless and houseless. Now they can think of death without having their knees knock together, and their hearts sink, and their teeth chatter, because their is a judgment where all defrauders, and jockeys, and tricksters, and charlatans shall be doubly damned. Now they can read in the Bible without flinching: "As the partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at the end shall be a fool." Alas! if any of you, for the purpose of getting out of temporary embarrassment, dare to sell your soul, or any portion of it. You may wake up in the midst of embarrassment and say: "No one is looking. This transaction may be a little out of the way, but it is only once, only once." On that one occasion you not only wreck your spiritual nature but you despoil your business prospects. You put one dishonest dollar in an estate, but it will not stand. You may take a dishonest dollar and put it down in the very depths of the earth, and you may roll on the top of it rocks and mountains, and on the top of those rocks and mountains you may put all the banks and moneyed institutions, piling them up heaven high, but that one dishonest dollar down in the depths of the earth will begin to rock, and heave, and upturn itself until it comes to the resurrection of damnation. You cannot hide a dishonest dollar.

In the review of this subject there are two or three things I want to say, and the first is, let us have a larger sympathy for business men. I think it is a shame that in our pulpits we do not oftener preach on this subject and show that we appreciate the sorrows, and struggles, and temptations, and trials of every day life. Men who toil with the hands are very apt to be suspicious of those who move in the world of traffic and think that they get their money idly, and that they give no equivalent. Men who raise the corn, and wheat, and rye, and oats are very apt to think that grain merchants get easy profits. The first is very apt to be jealous of the brain. Plato and Aristotle were so opposed to all kinds of merchandise that they said commerce was the curse of the earth, and they recommended that cities should never be built any nearer the seacoast than ten miles. But we have become wiser than that, and you know that there are no harder workers than those who plan and calculate in stores and banks and counting houses. What though their apparel be neat, what though

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem.

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds-Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bosuley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated courtesy whether anything is red ornot.

STOVES AND RANGES.

We have a large stock of Parlor Stoves for the fall of 1886, among which are the HARVEST, PALLAS, SOMERSET, and WELCOME PARLOR STOVES, making our line of these goods equal to any shown in this city.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,

Editors and Publishers

OF COURSE we are pleased at the result of the Congressional election in this district, and at the election of Gen. Cogswell to the 50th Congress. Essex county will be represented by a republican, and will be represented with ability. We have had no doubt of his election from the first. We realized that this was not a republican district, in a combination of the democrats and labor men. We felt sure that Gen. Cogswell would receive the support of the labor vote to a certain extent. This he did, and would have received more if Willard Spaulding had not been in the field as the labor candidate.

We shall hear from Gen. Cogswell in Congress. His position in the State Legislature, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, will command for him instant recognition on an important committee of the House. He has pledged his word to the people of Gloucester and of Essex county that the interest of the fisheries shall be looked after, and we are prepared to believe that he will keep his word.

Next to the election of Cogswell we are glad to record the triumph of Henry Cabot Lodge in our neighboring district, and it is probable that the $8.00 pension bill will not be heard from in the next Congress. Mr. Lodge is one of the ablest exponents of the liberal ideas of the republican party on the tariff question, and will bring to the discussion of the subject a clear comprehension of the needs of the country, and that revision which shall be just towards the protection of the interests of the industry of the nation. Mr. Lodge is in favor of a revision of the tariff, but he does not hold, with James Freeman Clark, that the whole theory of protection is wrong in principle.

Local issues led to the defeat of Mr. Rice in the Worcester district. Mr. Rice alone is responsible for his defeat. Had Mr. Bates been nominated, had Mr. Rice kept faith with Mr. Bates, the republicans would have had a representative from that district instead of the democrats. It is to be regretted that personal ambition allowed itself to triumph over the good of the party, and the wishes of a large number of his constituents.

Two Congressional districts were yielded in advance to the democrats. The third was lost by the dissensions of the republicans and the personal ambition of the candidate. The fourth is doubtful at this writing, although we think it probable that Mr. Ely is defeated. Massachusetts will have eight republican congressmen in the next Congress—of whom she will not be ashamed.

THE VOTE given to John F. Andrew is certainly complimentary to that gentleman, and an analysis of the returns shows that his strength came largely from the mugwumps, the new allies of the democratic party. This is shown by the fact that the vote for Foster, the lieutenant governor, ran behind the vote of Andrew, and the labor people who voted for Andrew would certainly vote for Foster, the leading Knights of Labor man. It is shown also in the large gains for Andrew in the Connecticut valley, where the influence of the Springfield Republican unquestionably made many votes against Ames.

If the labor people had voted throughout the State as they did largely in Essex County, Mr. Andrew would have been the worst whipped candidate put forth in Massachusetts for many years. In this county they gave Ames a goodly majority. But the name of his honored father was an influence with many—although we can hardly see how intelligent voters should allow such an influence to affect their votes.

To the mugwump element, dissatisfied with Blaine, the "holier than thou" portion of the old republican party, belongs the credit of the gain for the democratic candidate for governor. If this alliance continues, if this element is allowed to control the party, as it evidently does the administration, we shall see a division of the two parties based on the question of the tariff. Mr. Powderly says plainly that he "is for protection from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot." By the side of the republican party will come the intelligent and thinking portion of the labor party, as they are already coming. They will return to the republican party, and when the tariff question is plainly set before them, the rank and file will follow the leaders, and the republican party will go forth to conquer on this issue.

The new allies of the democratic party are the portion of the old republican party whose aristocratic ideas, free trade predilections and talk about purity of politics have driven many who once voted the republican party away from its ranks. To them, more than to men like Blaine, belongs the loss of power which has come to the republican party. They have nothing in sympathy with the every day republican, except on the day of election. They have not much, we confess, with the other party; but when they have lost influence with the republican party and can be catered to by the democrats, it is easy to find them every time.

THE PRESS stated, long before the County Conventions, that it would be folly for the republican party to make a nomination for district attorney against Henry F. Hurlburt. We have claimed that he should be supported without reference to his party affiliations, and solely on the ground of faithful service to the entire people. That he was supported thus yesterday is indicated by the handsome vote polled for him in Peabody and in the city of Lynn. With hardly an exception, the press of the county has favored his election, and by their efforts, in part, it cannot be denied that some portion of the result is due.

THE LARGE vote by which Col. Cyrus T. Batchelder is returned to the legislature shows the esteem in which he is held by his fellow townsmen without regard to party. It shows that attempts to injure him, his character, his motives, or his conduct in the legislature, have recoiled with terrible force. Assaults upon some men, by cheap subterfuges, and low insinuations, only serve to blacken the character of the accuser; this has been the case regarding Col. Batchelder. He will serve the town well in the future as he has in the past, and our citizens will have no reason to regret the choice which they have made.

The following is the vote for governor and lieutenant governor from 336 cities and towns; twelve towns are yet to hear from, and more returns are to be sent in for lieutenant governor than the head of the ticket:

GOVERNOR
Ames (R)	120,567
Andrew (D)	111,467
Lothrop (Pro)	8,104
	240,138

LIEUT. GOVERNOR
Brackett	115,976
Foster	110,744
Blackmer	8,220
	234,940

The following is the summary of the vote for district attorney: Hurlburt, 18,728; Moody, 15,140. Salem, Lynn, Lawrence and Peabody largely defeated Moody. Haverhill's vote was, Moody, 2053; Hurlburt, 796.

ELECTION.

OFFICIAL VOTE OF PEABODY.

RESULT IN THE COUNTY.

The polls opened promptly at 8.30 A. M., and there was a goodly number of our business men, who go to Boston daily, ready to deposit their ballots. The day was fine and clear, and a steady stream of voters passed up the aisle until the closing of the polls. It was a quiet election, considering that 1428 votes were polled. There were plenty of regular tickets in the field, and many a voter was confused by the similarity of several kinds of ballots which were made to trip the unwary. The vote was as follows:

CRUMBS OF COMFORT.

And Faxon, how is he?

Stickers were freely used!

An entire ballot pulls them in!

It was a short but decisive campaign!

Some one was bound to get left any how.

'Stonished? Yes, everybody 'stonished.

A number of democrats voted for Ames.

There was no liquor dealer peddling ballots.

It was a full vote and in some respects a full voter.

Cogswell led French in every town in the county.

There were only four tall hats at the polls yesterday.

The corrupt Breen was badly defeated. Hallelujah!

Some of the boys now carry a whole pocketful of cigars.

Peace is the object of all war. All's well that ends well.

Well why should not we feel well and trot out our rooster.

The tinkling of the bells of the ballot box has lost its novelty.

Mr. McCarthy personally deserved a better fate. Try again.

And the apostle said unto Cyrus, "Thou hast been called."

Mr. Chas. A. Weare had 40 votes in Salem for clerk of courts.

Col. French took advice from the wrong source in this town.

It will take the defeated candidates several days to get over their mad.

The politicians did not dare make much of a calculation on the result.

The Selectmen did not get through till about four o'clock this morning.

Stickers were made to stick and thereby pay off many a political trick.

Batchelder stickers were in great demand and many of them were used.

The republicans were weak in executive force but did good work at the polls.

Most people voted to suit themselves and party lines were not strongly drawn.

Well, you democrats found that Spaulding was no chicken, didn't you?

Things turned out pretty near as the PRESS predicted and desired, didn't they?

Mr. Spaulding did not bury very well in Peabody. There's a good deal of him.

Will the Sunday Globe tell us what they know about false election prophecies?

How do you feel on the result any way?

To those who voted for Spaulding a vote for principle is never thrown away.

There were about half a dozen different tickets with Spaulding's name on them.

Are not the men who sell their votes and the men who buy them about on a level?

How many of the committee elected to look after Spaulding's interests voted for him?

Not many independents, you say? Well, most of them took "democratic straight."

The patent ballot box was overhauled, oiled and greased and did its duty like clock work.

A number of democrats are poorer than they were when they bet on Jonas H. French.

It is always wise for a town to compliment a faithful servant like Mr. Batchelder.

It looks as if the sword of Damocles was now hanging over the heads of the "Old Board."

There is a feeling that Col. Batchelder will stand by the record made by him last year.

The little knot of republicans who opposed Gen. Cogswell and Col. Batchelder now regret it.

There were 427 straight Cogswell tickets thrown, 179 straight French and 210 straight Spaulding.

Little bars of "soap," little bags of "sand," make a great commotion when in a "committee's" hand.

The tables run by the W. C. T. U. were liberally patronized and were a convenience in many ways.

Mr. Asa T. Newhall can thank S. S. Littlefield for his large vote in this town. Steve worked well.

A number of young men did nothing but stand around the town hall and talk yesterday. Better hire a hall.

When the party whip is snapped a large number of the labor men walk up and vote the Democratic ticket.

The enthusiasm over Col. French was so great last Saturday night that only a few leaders knew he was in town.

The saloon, to a certain extent, has entered our politics and some of the politicians returned the compliment.

Don't the Haverhill Gazette want to borrow the PRESS's cock to crow over Cogswell's election? He is a beauty.

Queries of Hurley, Lord and Collins, the Salem democrats; Does bossing boss? Does rule or ruin bossing pay?

The appearance of one of our young business men with a new hat this morning indicated that the bet was promptly paid.

If anything can be dirtier than the action of Moulton of Haverhill in regard to Rev. Spaulding, we should like to hear it.

He who celebrates, and goes to bed sober.
Falls as the leaves do, and dies in October—
But he who celebrates and goes to bed mellow
Lives like a democrat, and dies a good fellow.

The long time spent in counting the vote, and numerous other circumstances yesterday, showed the need of precinct voting in this town.

There was a number of Simon pure, straight-cut, all wool and yard wide democrats who refused to vote for Eugene T. McCarthy.

Money was plenty in this congressional district and all the boys warmed their toes in the way of "legitimate campaign expenses."

Waste paper—the pamphlet on Spaulding's record and the comments of the Republic intended only to excite the passions of a few bigoted people.

During the day that registration ceased a big pile of divided tax bills increased the amount in the money drawer of the man who marked the magic word "Paid" on the bills.

The fortunate ones do smile and with very good grace, look their friends in the face and flatter themselves that they've got a soft place.

Had the democrats endorsed Spaulding they might have had another representative in Congress. But that isn't their way of catching on.

A goodly crowd of the party men gathered at Temperance Hall, and a few returns were received till ten o'clock by the republicans.

One overgrown youth presented himself for registration who was only 18 years of age but claimed to be 21. He wanted to get his share of the boodle.

The PRESS job presses were constantly employed printing ballots from Saturday till yesterday afternoon. Nearly every town in this vicinity was on our list.

There is no truth in the report that the Republicans paid for the Spaulding flag or band at the Friday night rally. Small contributions from ten cents to one dollar paid for it.

When Col. French spoke here Saturday night, the small attendance and the cool reception he received must have made him wonder where all that boodle he had put in here had gone.

It is said that some of the frequenters of the "coal hole" burst the buttons off their clothes as they swelled with indignation after reading Mr. McCarthy's reference to them in his speech.

The vote of Essex county one year ago was, Republican, 15,678; Democratic, 12,546; Prohibition, 629; Greenback, 742. The Republicans had 3,132 plurality, and a clear majority of 1761.

The Peabody Reporter and other papers are repeating Congressman Lovering's statement that the duty on coal was increased 25 cents a ton in 1883. It is a falsehood!—Boston Journal.

The Rev. Spaulding looked very calm as he sat poking over the check list hunting for names yesterday, while his fate as congressman was being weighed in the balance.

Theodore C. Bates is glad now that he wasn't nominated. It is much pleasanter to send than to receive condolences.—Boston Globe.

If Mr. Bates had been nominated, he would have been receiving congratulations.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge has got there at last, but his majority is not anything to brag about.—Boston Globe.

How about Lovering's majority last time? How much was there to brag about then? We are satisfied, as long as he got there. We hope the Globe is.

One young man in this town, who is earning an excellent living in a business of his own, allowed the managers of one of the political parties to pay a dollar of his poll tax, so that he might register and vote at the coming election.

The cow-boy element in politics was noticed at the Democratic rally. The cat calls and howls that have always been taught as a Democratic strong point were turned against them Saturday night. The chickens came home to roost.

The state ticket aside from the heads had a very even run in this town. For auditor Chas. R. Ladd 711, William F. Cook 679. Henry B. Peirce as secretary of state lost some votes from non-support of the disaffected in the Grand Army.

One democrat was heard to say that he voted for Col. Batchelder because the republicans were opposed to him. He thought something must be wrong when the republicans wanted to throw over a man whom they so highly lauded a year ago.

As the sage of West Peabody, chairman of the republican town committee, "grand function of the grand junction," was not called upon to speak at the republican representative caucus, he volunteered himself and fired off his mouth for fifteen minutes without saying anything.

The action of Master Workman Howard of District Assembly 30 in coming out in the Sunday Globe and urging the election of the Democratic ticket has lost him the respect of many in this vicinity. It gives the impression that, like Moulton of Haverhill, he is for revenue only.

E. V. EMILIO,

45 ESSEX SRTEET, SALEM.

WINTER WHEAT BRAN.—Just received a car of the heaviest, best sacked bran we have seen this season. A good time to lay in stock for winter use.

CHAS. A. ROPES & SON,
nov 2 41 to 47 Central St.

The Peabody Press.

Wednesday Evening, Nov. 3, 1886,

Harry P., son of Cleves K. Hutchinson, employed at Potter & Lovell's banking-house, in Boston, was cowardly assaulted as he was leaving the office last Thursday afternoon. A man stepped up and dealt him a blow in the face with a knife, or some other sharp instrument. Young Hutchinson had presence of mind enough to go to a physician and several stitches were taken. It was found, also, that his coat was cut on the breast, as if the assailant had struck there also. No motive is known for the crime, except it was a case of mistaken identity, as the young man has few acquaintances in Boston and no enemies.

A special horse-car came from Cliftondale Wednesday night, bringing about 25 ladies and gentlemen to visit their former pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Geo. A. Phinney. Among the party were some known to this town, Rev. C. A. Littlefield; E. S. Kent, Chairman of Saugus selectmen; Chas. Wesley Raddin and A. Sweetser. A bountiful supper was provided by the company and a most joyful evening passed. Rev. Dr. J. H. Mansfield was among the guests. The party returned about 10:30 P. M.

The sympathy of the many friends of Mr. J. W. Tufts goes out to him in the bereavement which has fallen upon him by the death of his wife, which occurred last Wednesday night. Mrs. Tufts had for a long time endured physical suffering which she bore with great fortitude. Mr. Tufts, himself, is in poor health and in no condition to be severed from a loving wife and life-long partner, although his wants will be attended to by the hands of an affectionate daughter, Miss Jennie S. Tufts, a teacher in the Bowditch school. Mrs. Tufts was 77 years of age.

The public school teachers met in the Selectmen's room, at the town hall, Monday afternoon, and organized an association to be known as the Peabody Teachers Association. A constitution was adopted and the following officers were elected: President, J. K. Cole; Vice President, A. E. Wells; Secretary, Miss Georgie Hart; Treasurer, L. W. Farr; Board of Directors, Miss Adelaide Hill, Miss Julia Wilkins, George F. Barnes. Meetings are to be held semi monthly. The topics, primary methods, assigned for this meeting was not taken up on account of lack of time, but will be considered at the next meeting.

We begin this week the publication of comments and helps to teachers on the International Sunday School lessons. Those for the lesson of next Sunday will be found in another column. There is also another of Talmage's sermons, the one preached last Sunday by this gifted pulpit orator. We are in receipt of many congratulations on the addition of these features to the PRESS.

In the police court yesterday morning, a non-union man named Chas. Milleck was arraigned for assaulting with a knife William McGrath, at their boarding house on Mt. Vernon street. Evidence showed that there was a drunken row, furniture was broken, and Milleck attempted to stab McGrath. The prisoner admitted the assault and said he wished he had killed McGrath. He was placed under $1200 bonds for the higher court.

Last Sunday three young men were gunning on Forest street and were about to shoot a flock of tame pigeons when a son of Patrick Ellis forbid it. They then turned their gun on a dog belonging to Ellis and shot him. Mr. Ellis had a tussle with one of them but he escaped leaving his gun in Ellis' possession.

Mr. James R. Tuttle, foreman for Dahl & Co., was hastily summoned to his home last Saturday by the severe illness of his youngest son, James Percival, who died that evening at the age of four years and eight months. Mr. Tuttle has the sympathy of his friends.

The firm of B. & A. N. Jacobs, leather manufacturers, has been dissolved. Andrew N. will carry on the business on Foster street, and Benjamin will continue at the Oak street yard the successful sheep skin tannery, which has received his personal attention for the past two years.

The Merry Workers of the Universalist church will give a supper and entertainment in the vestry, this evening. Supper at 6.30, to be followed by musical and dramatic exercises, closing with a farce entitled "Grecian Bend." Tickets including both, 25 cents.

The Rockville church at South Peabody will hold a fair next Tuesday and Wednesday evening. There will be a spelling match the first night and a musical entertainment the second.

Mr. Albert E. Barnes, till recently hostler for Dr. C. C. Pike, was united in marriage last Saturday evening to Miss Nellie Brown of South Peabody. They were married by Rev. F. W. Sprague and will reside on County street, South Peabody.

Last Friday night a rally was announced in which Spaulding was reported to address the voters of the town. The Salem Cadet Band had been engaged, and it had been arranged to put out a flag for Spaulding at the headquarters of the labor men in Ashland hall. It was found that Moulton, the chairman of the far-famed committee of seven chosen to manage Spaulding's campaign, had booked the reverend gentleman in three or four different and widely separated places, and as it was thought better that he should speak in the home of Col. French, his Peabody supporters engaged two gentlemen to take his place, F. S. Pickett of Brockton and Henry J. Skeffington of Philadelphia. Both of these gentlemen are Knights of Labor, and said that they never before had made a political speech. They did not care for either the republican or democratic parties, but had come here to advise their brother Knights to vote for Spaulding, who was an honest man and had been a true friend of labor. The rally was a very enthasiastic one, every mention of the name of Spaulding being received with great cheering.

The republican representative caucus was held in town hall last Friday evening. B. F. Southwick was chosen chairman and Chas. H. Goulding, secretary. On motion of Joseph F. Wiggin, Col. Cyrus T. Batchelder was nominated as representative by acclamation. Col. Batchelder was present and thanked the convention for the nomination, stating that he went to the Legislature last year untrammelled, and if elected should return this year in the same manner. Stirring speeches were made by Amos Merrill, Esq., Capt. W. F. Wiley, Henry Wardwell, Frank E. Farnham and others. A rallying committee of twenty was appointed and the caucus adjourned. Very little opposition to the nomination of Col. Batchelder appeared to exist, and that little did not show itself at the caucus.

A rally by the democrats was held Saturday evening in Town hall, at which Eugene T. McCarthy presided. The Salem brass band furnished music—their last engagement under Mr. Reinewald. The first speaker was John C. Short of Boston, after which Col. Jonas H. French, the democratic nominee for Congress, addressed the meeting. Mr. French essayed an explanation of the labor troubles in his quarry on Cape Ann, and denied that any one in his interest had offered boodle to Mr. Spaulding. There was considerable enthusiasm manifested for Mr. Spaulding in the meeting, especially at the mention of his name. At the close of Col. French's remarks John J. Kelly of Cambridge made a short address.

Rev. Mr. Spaulding addressed some of the labor men in the rooms of L. A. 2947 Monday afternoon. Mr. Spaulding arrived unexpectedly, but a few moments sufficed to gather a good crowd. Mr. Spaulding riddled French's explanation of the labor difficulty at his quarry, giving facts which completely upset French's statement. His words were listened to with great attention.

We call particular attention to the prices made on rubbers by Geo. E. Pearson, of Salem. Read his change of advertisement, and take a note of what he says. It is a good place to trade, and a popular place for Peabody ladies.

Mr. Israel J. Goodwin was married last night to Miss Annie Lynch, daughter of Parker Lynch, at the home of Rev. C. N. Smith of Malden, formerly pastor of the Methodist church.

Mr. Parker Lynch on Oak street had his hand amputated yesterday by Dr. Frost. Lynch has had several fingers removed before to prevent the spread of blood poisoning.

Thomas H. O'Keefe is out with a new express wagon made by H. P. Whipple. He also is prepared to attend to furniture moving.

The officers and members of George Peabody Lodge O. U. A. W. make a fraternal visit to John Endicott Lodge of Salem to-morrow evening.

Jeremiah McCarthy, charged with assaulting Dennis Mahoney, was discharged by paying costs in the police court Monday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Phinney, of the Methodist church, united in marriage last Saturday afternoon, at the parsonage, Robert Ballard and Miss Etta B. Frost.

The police are investigating the actions of several young men suspected of breaking into the leather factory on Aborn place.

Some one slashed with a knife about a dozen sides of kip leather hanging on the polls at S. A. Southwick's last night.

Rev. C. A. Merrill preached at the Methodist church last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Phinney preached in Danvers.

The Boston & Maine time table, with the latest corrections, will be found in another column.

Geo. F. Caller & Co., curriers, are moving their business to South Boston.

Mr. Henry Torr's house on Washington street, is being shingled.

Mrs. Andrew Sweet of Wolfboro, N. H., has been visiting in town.

ARTICLE 47.

WILLIAM G. WEBBER & CO.,

ESSEX & WASHINGTON STREETS.

Keeping pace with Dry Goods fluctuations requires not only boldness of operations but fine calculation. In a healthy business like ours large shipments are constantly arriving to be quickly disposed of. Fashions changing and prices depreciating has driven us to the expedient of Quick Sales and Small Margins for self production. Still, with proper management, even this system is profitable, which we delight in giving our patrons the benefit of it. It has now become with us an established fact, and we mean to stick to it. ARTICLE 47 means Forty-seven articles, each a distinct Bargain for this week, commencing to-day.

ARTICLE 1.

Commencing with

SILKS AND PLUSHES.

Article 1. A regular quality of Black Silk at 75 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 2.

A regular $1,25 Black Rhadame for $1.00 per yard.

ARTICLE 3.

The balance of a lot of Cheney's American Silks in good colors at 75 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 4.

A beautiful quality Faille Francais, the new materials for ladies black silk costumes, at $1.25 per yard.

ARTICLE 5.

A full line of colors, beautiful shades of Faille Erancais at $1.50 per yard, nothing that approaches them elsewhere in the city.

ARTICLE 6.

A beautiful quality 24-inch Black Satin Rhadame at $1.50 per yard.

ARTICLE 7.

Commences with

BLACK GOODS.

We offer you makes that are fashionable and from the best houses in the world. Article 7 is a lot of Black Cashmeres, very fine 40 ihches wide, at 50 cents per yard. We venture to say that you cannot match the quality today at the price in another store in New England—yet possibly you might.

ARTICLE 8.

10 pieces Black Sebastopool Cloths at 87 1-2 cents per yard, regular price everywhere $1.00.

ARTICLE 9.

A Heavy Camels Hair Diagonal, wide width, 75 cents, now 50 cents for this sale.

ARTICLE 10.

Black Cashmere (Cloth finish) 46 inches wide. 75 cents; should be $1.00. Our man in Black goods says he can get a dollar for it. We don't want him to; 75 cents is the price.

ARTICLE 11.

Black Tricot Clotes at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00. No one else gives such values for the prices.

ARTICLE 12.

A score of fancy weaves in Black Dress Goods, a direct importation, the very choicest in the market, 75 cents, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

ARTICLE 13.

A lot of Black Flannels, 36 inches wide, fine quality, worth 50 cents, price 25 cents. A lot one year ago just like them lasted only two days.

ARTICLE 14.

Commences with

COLORED DRESS GOODS.

Article 14. 100 pieces Pin Check Tricotines at 50 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 15.

20 pieces Sebastopool Cloth, beautiful shades, late received, ordered last spring, 87 1-2 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 16.

20 pieces Homespun suitings, wide and heavy, at 37 1-2 conts per yard, better than the lot offered last week at this price.

ARTICLE 17.

ARTICLE 18.

FLANNELS FROM AUCTION.

Flannels from 6 1-4 cents to 50 cents per yard, bought at auction cheap, as the cheapest goods, as the best, come and see them.

ARTICLE 19.

BLANKETS.

Real California Blankets, $6.50 up to $14, and Blankets down as low as 95 cents a pair. We sell more comforters than all the rest of the stores in Salem combined, so the manufacturers say.

ARTICLE 20.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

If you have shopped in Salem the past year we know you have bought your Handkerchiefs of us.

See other papers for balance of enumeration. Each and every article of the 47 is meant to be sufficiently corroborative of our system, viz: QUICK SALES AND SMALL PROFITS.

THE DRAMA.

"Nothing succeeds like success," is a saying, the truth whereof is illustrated every day, and nowhere more unmistakably than in the busy world of amusements. Harbor Lights, now completing a third month of success, not affected in the least by managerial competition, will reach its century at the Boston Museum at Thanksgiving time. If the reception of the London melodrama in this city is approached elsewhere, Harbor Lights will make one of the greatest stage successes of the era.

People have crowded the Park Theatre all the week, regardless of the dismal weather, and A Parlor Match has aroused the most unlimited merriment. Evans and Hoey have each made the roles associated with their names about as droll as even these clever stars could do. Miss French is thoroughly interesting as Innocent Kidd, and the company generally knows what it has to do in the merry skit, and does it well. A Parlor Match stays another week. The Park will be packed at every performance.

The merry, merry chorus, in gala array, seems to enjoy its work in Adonis as much as though that long lived burlesque had not beaten the record of runs, months and months ago. Dixey, too, whether as the statoot, as the rural member would say, the graceful chevalier, the Eton hobbledehoy, the girl with the Oh, My song, the mashing clerk, the only barber, or as the Irvingesque man of milk and water predilections, is welcomed nightly by throngs at the Hollis. The fiftieth night of Adonis is coming soon, and will be observed with souvenir appropriateness.

May Davenport has been acting in Harbor Lights the role assigned Maida Craigen, who temporarily retired from the cast on account of her mother's illness and death. Miss Davenport's performance has given much satisfaction.

Funnier and better than Joshua Whitcomb itself—such was the verdict of a great many people who saw The Old Homestead at the Boston last season. It will be seen this week at the Boston Theatre. In the changing scenes of The Old Homestead, Uncle Josh is brought to Gotham, where his experiences are no less lively and interesting than when he ran to fires in Boston. George A. Beane is to play Old Cy Prime, Walter Lennox, Sr., is to appear as Henry Hopkins, Walter Gale as Jack Hazzard, Aunt Louisa Morse as Matilda, Annie Thompson as Ricketty Ann, and Virginia Marlowe as Annie Hopkins, while Gus Kammerlee, the favorite barytone, with other good singers, are to contribute to the pleasure of patrons of the Boston. The Old Homestead can have but seven representations. The play will be staged very handsomely, of course.

So great has been the success in New York of Mrs. Langtry's Pauline, that it has been decided to open her engagement at the Boston Theatre next Monday evening with The Lady of Lyons. No impersonator of Bulwer's heroine has gained more favor than Mrs. Langtry in the metropolis, and the character will, if all reports be true, be most elegantly and brilliantly costumed. Charles Coghlan's portrayal of Claude Melnotte has aroused a degree of interest second only to the performance given by the Jersey Lily herself. The sale of seats opens at the Boston Theatre box office on Tuesday morning.

The November Magazine of American History has a superb frontispiece, the very finest of any of the magazines of the month; it is the notable portrait (almost unknown in this country) of Governor Thomas Pownall, from the celebrated Lord Oxford painting, in England. Two of Pownall's pencil drawings of American scenery about the middle of the last century, are reproduced among the unique illustrations; also his home while governor of Massachusetts, and an original letter of his (never before published) inclosing the fact of his refusal of the governorship of New York. The second article of the number, "The Hermitage," a North Carolina home of great age, belongs to the popular series of "Historic Homes," for which this magazine is famed. There is not a dull line in the whole number. This periodical has fairly and justly earned its high position as "the best publication of its kind in the world." Price $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

With such vast quantities of apples, we ought to have genuine cider vinegar, and if people would manufacture and use it instead of the poisonous acids of commerce, there would be fewer mysterious disorders in the human family, which is not only from food adulterations, but from money making experiments.

Catarrh is a very prevalent and exceedingly disagreeable disease, liable, if neglected, to develop into serious consumption. Being a constitutional disease, it requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, effecting a radical and permanent cure of catarrh in even its most severe forms. Made only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."
CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."
EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.
Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

their manners be refined, do not put them down as idlers. They carry loads heavier than a hod of bricks, they go into exposures keener than the cutting of the east wind, they scale mountains higher than the Alps and Himalayas, and maintaining their Christian integrity, Christ will at the last accost them, saying: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

I also enjoin you to quit all fretfulness about business matters. Is there not something in your own household that you would not give up for the worldly success other men have? Besides that, if these trials lifted you up, you ought to bless God for the whip of discipline. The larger the note you have to pay, the greater the uncertainty of business life, the better for your soul if Jesus Christ leads you triumphantly through. How do I know? I know it by this principle—that the hotter the furnace the better the refining. There have been thousands of men who have gone through the same path you are now going through with an aching heart. There are multitudes before the throne of God who were lashed with cares and anxieties innumerable, and were cheated out of everything but their coffin. They were sued, they were ejected, they were imprisoned for debt, they were maltreated, they were throttled by constables with whole packs of writs, they were sold out by sheriffs, they had to confess judgments, they had to compromise with creditors, and their last hour on earth was disturbed by the fact that their door bell was rung loudly and angrily by the hand of some impetuous creditor, who was surprised that that sick man should be so impertinent and outrageous as to die before he had paid him the last three shillings and sixpence. Oh! how men are tossed and driven! I had a friend who went from one anxiety to another; a good and great heart he had, but everything he put his hand to seemed to fail. Misfortunes clustered around, and after awhile I heard he was dead, and the first word I said was: "Good! he has got rid of the sheriffs." There is a great multitude of business men who on earth had it hard, but by the grace of God they stand triumphant in heaven; and when the question is asked of them, "Who are they?" the angels of God, standing on seas of glass, will cry out: "These are they who came out of great tribulation, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

Once more: I want you to seek business grace. Commercial ethics, business honor, laws of trade, may do very well for a while; but there will come a time when the ground will slip from under your feet and the world will frown, and the devils will set after your soul, and you will want more then than this world can give you. You will want the eternal rock to stand on. For the lack of that grace you have known men to forge, and to maltreat their friends, and to curse their enemies, and you have seen their names bulletined among scoundrels, and spit upon, and blistered by scorn, and ground to powder. They not only lost their property, but their souls were mauled, and putrified, and blasted for eternity. You could count up scores of such persons, while there are others who, tossed on the same sea, sustained by the grace of God, have all the time kept their eye on the lighthouse. Men coming out of that man's store say: "If there ever was a Christian trader, that is one." Stern integrity kept the books and waited on the customers. Light from the future world flashed through the show windows. Wrath never stamped that floor, nor did sly dishonesty cover up imperfections in goods. Love to God and love to men were the principles that ruled in the store of that Christian trader. Some day the shutters are not let down from the store window and the bars are not taken from the door. Men pass along and stop, and stare, and go up to read a card on the door which announces: "Closed on account of the death of one of the firm." That death—it is talk in commercial circles that a good man has gone. Boards of trade pass resolutions of sympathy, and churches of Christ pray: "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth." He has made his last bargain. He has suffered his last loss. He has ached with his last fatigue. The results of his Christian industry will bless his children after he is dead, and bequests to the kingdom of God will gather many sons into glory. Everlasting rewards in place of business discipline. There "the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

THOMAS CONVICTED.

DR. JOHN HALL'S NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VI of the International Series for Sunday, Nov. 7—Golden Text, "And Thomas Said unto Him, My Lord and My God"—Lesson, John xx, 19-31.

Our lesson to-day has an interest peculiar to itself. Peter, John and Judas only, of the twelve, have as much notice of them in the gospels as Thomas. He had a character peculiarly his own, like which there are many among men, and this doubtless is the reason for his being so outstanding a figure in the Gospel of John. There are two parts of the lesson, but connected together, for we should not understand the features of the second interview if we had not the details of the first—very important in themselves.

It was the Jewish Monday, the first Christian Sabbath (called the first day, etc., as in Acts xx, 7), and evening. The disciples knew the light in which the Jews regarded them, and had the doors of the room in which they met closed, probably as we would say "barred" or "locked." "Disciples" may include others beside the twelve apostles. (See Luke xxiv, 33.)

The words "came Jesus," along with the account of "the doors shut," give the impression that there was no opening of the doors needful. The glorified body of Jesus was not bound by ordinary natural laws, nor probably will those of saints be. The "iron gate" of Peter's prison opened to the angel and him of its "own accord." What power we shall have when we become equal with the angels, who can tell? We shall see through questions about matter that baffle us now. Jesus "stood in the midst" and gave his salutation, "Peace be unto you!" How timely! They were in "fear of the Jews." How much they needed it! How often he has come into chambers where timid and perplexed disciples were gathered, and spoken in effect the same thing! Timid in view of Jewish malice, but glad over the news of our Lord's resurrection, they had secretly come together, and lo! he is there, without any need to open the door. He is all he ever was. He is the same in feeling, as they feel when the words fall on their ears, Peace be unto you!

V. 20. He knows human dullness; he knows them. How good it is for us that the disciples were not model men, not perfect, but like ourselves! If they had been well nigh perfect we should have desponded. But their need of help and of repeated lessons concerning truth encourages us, for our Master knows us as he knows them. So he shows them his hands and his side. They have many infallible proofs (Acts i, 3) of his rising. He is the same in body. He is not a spirit, as they thought him on the Sea of Galilee. He has suffered. He is the "Lamb slain." John remembered this—"handled"—in I John i, 1, long years afterward. How much all this meant they did not then know or stop to ask. Their hearts overflowed with joy. "Then were the disciples glad," etc. And when we are cast down and things seem to go against us, here is the most gladdening thing in the world—the sight by faith of Jesus. (See Rom. v, 2.)

V. 21. Again the "peace" is given, and the truth which they failed to understand before is repeated: "As my father sent me—not to do my will but his—so I send you, not to do your own but mine; and as I preached the gospel, so are you to do in my name."

V. 22. This living man breathes—breathes on them, and with the power of God says, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." He had promised this gift in John xvi, 7, and elsewhere. It is true a fuller blessing of this sort is to be theirs; but even now they need special help. He had told them that the Comforter would bear witness to him. This they need now, as they are to wait for the Pentecostal power. He is to them a Spirit of prayer (Acts i, 13, 14). Then he foreshadows the commission in

V. 23. "Whosoever," etc. Whatever power was given Peter is here given to all. All stand on the same level. The apostles did not give forgiveness in their name or in virtue of their office; they proclaimed it. See Jer. i, 10, "See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant." Did the weeping prophet do all that? No; but he proclaimed the terms, in God's name, on which God would do it, and as it was with prophets so it is with apostles. See the same principle in Isa. vi, 10, in Ezek. xxxii, 18, also in Ezek. xliii, 3. Hosea vi, 5, Rev. xi, 5. It is important to make the pupils understand this. Words like these are constantly quoted in favor of a priesthood and of Rome, and the rising generation of Americans will need to understand the case. What the apostles did explains the sense and meaning of this commission. They did not hear confessions, prescribe penances and pronounce absolutions. They preached Christ and remission of sins in his name.

We now come to the second section, which gave a name to our lesson. "Thomas" means a "twin." The word resembles "Tom" in Hebrew (comp. Song vii, 3), and Didymus is the Septuagint (Greek) rendering of it.

It is usually a loss to be absent from a meeting of disciples. It was so with Thomas (v. 24). Probably it was not an accident, but his despondent nature that kept him away. But of course the disciples told him what they had seen (v. 25). Then came the words which have been taken by some to show a skeptical, ill-conditioned mind, "Except," etc. But they did not. To learn their meaning we must know what manner of man Thomas was. When Jesus intimated that he was leaving his safe retreat from Jewish malice and going to Bethany (John xi, 7, 8, 16), Thomas, dispirited, taking the gloomiest view of the case, said to his fellow disciples. "Let us also go, that we may die with him," i. e., Jesus. He loved him tenderly. But he thought his a "lost cause." He will be seized and killed. We may as well go and die with him. He took the gloomiest view of things. So when at the last supper Jesus spoke of going away and of their coming along, the same spirit breaks out. But it is not bad; it is only sad. Jesus treats it kindly. "Lord, thou art going, we know not whither; how can we go after or with thee? We know nothing of what is meant." He deems the departure of Jesus the end of all of them. He was not an unbeliever, eager to get reasons for unbelief. He was right in aim, in heart, in affection. But his nature was slow; his mind was dependent; he was easily cast down. He took the gloomy view of things. There is a long succession to this apostle among men from mental nature, from sad experiences, from physical weakness or what is called temperament. Some are over-sanguine, like Peter; some are too slow to believe and downhearted. This was the character of Thomas. Jesus never treats him as a man bent on disbelief, or willingly blinding his eyes to evidence, or bad at heart. So when

(V. 26), after eight days, the disciples being just as before, door shut and all together, including Thomas, Jesus came and spake "peace" as before.

V. 27. But he did more. Why, he has heard Thomas' words! He knows the nature of his mind. (So God knoweth our fame, Ps. ciii, 14.) He offers him the very evidence he craved in his depression. That was enough. There is no hint that Thomas went through the mechanical process. The Master is there and knows him well. He shows that by his word, "be not faithless" ("do not become faithless," it might be) "but believing." He makes a confession of his faith

(V. 28), brief in words, but fuller and clearer in meaning than any yet made, owning Jesus not only as his "Lord," but his God. He is the Messiah; he is divine in nature. He is "my" God. This, the divine nature of Jesus, was the point with which John set out (John i, 1), and here his book as good as ends, for chapter xxi is supplementary.

V. 29. Our Lord shows him that his way, of slow faith, depression, despondency, is not the best way. There is a better. He has believed, for he has seen; but blessed are they, and there will be a countless multitude of them, who not seeing will yet believe. Heb. xi, 1, 27; II Cor. v, 7; I Peter i, 8 may well be studied in this connection. They have ample evidence, but not of the kind Thomas' nature craved. Let us seek this blessing.

Vs. 30, 31 require little explanation. John is not exhausting the subject, but supplementing other writers, and his aim is, now that the nature of Jesus is being discussed by Greeks, etc., to show that he is the son of God, and that, believing him, his readers "might have life through his name." What an instrument God made him!

The teacher may well point out the ample evidence of Christ's rising; the fact that he is revealed as divine Redeemer; that his disciples, sent as he was, are to serve through suffering and death if need be; the gentleness of Jesus, going after the one wandering sheep and bringing him back; the fitness of his dealing with slow, doubting Thomas in this way, and the fullness of confession not only of Christ's rising, but of his divine nature; and the nature of believing, which includes all that is implied in faith.—Sunday School World.

An Expressman's Trick.

A young woman journeying alone from Seattle to Nanaimo recently, landed at Victoria, B. C., and her trunk was landed at the wharf where the boat for Nanaimo would start. She didn't know this, and hired an expressman to take it to the Nanaimo wharf. He did. He loaded it, made the girl pay in advance, and then drove around the block and back to the starting place.—New York Sun.

An Æsthetic Loghouse.

A loghouse is to be built soon in Minneapolis. Let not the æsthetic reader start. It will not be one of those rude structures such as the pioneers built in the early days, but a delightful, rambling structure, full of angles and nooks, with queer gables and quaint windows. It will have stained glass and all the modern improvements. But it will be a veritable loghouse. Moreover, it will cost $20,000.—Pioneer Press.

CRUMBS OF COMFORT.

The voting was steady all the afternoon.

At one o'clock only 800 votes had been cast.

French furnished the boodle and Spaulding caught the votes.

The West Peabody farmer vote went for Spaulding and Newhall.

The voting commenced promptly and for twenty minutes there was no break in it.

The West Peabody farmers furnished teams to bring Spaulding voters to the polls.

It is evident that the democrats can't conjugate the verb French in Peabody at least.

Spaulding received numerous dispatches during the evening in regard to his vote.

Haverhill went back on Cogswell, but thank fortune Peabody went back on Moody.

Miss Grace Stevens relieved Mrs M. O. Stevens as ballot distributor for an hour at noon time.

Everything was orderly and quiet about the polls and crowds of people lined the sidewalks.

There were about twenty persons present in the hall this morning when the vote was declared.

The distributor of Jonas H. French stickers got weary early in the day and gave up the job as N. G.

The election of Lodge in the Sixth district gives great satisfaction to his many friends in this town.

A number of the republican rallying committee made it a point to distribute tickets with Hurlburt's name on it.

About two o'clockthe standing committee got weary and sat down on the curb stone completing a semi-circle.

Salem sends three Republicans again to the Legislature, including Charles Henry Simonds, the criminal lawyer.

Mrs. Stevens to accommodate those who wished to scratch her ticket brought along a glue pot and a pair of scissors.

The Republicans did nobly and stood by Hurlburt as they said they would, and he can thank them for his election.

Now let Cleveland give Lovering a good fat office and sheive him for the future, as his days of usefulness are over.

There was no excuse for a person not voting yesterday. The day was made for a large vote, being as mild as Jnne.

Mr. John S. Torr voted the straight republican ticket and cast the first vote. Was it a forerunner of the vote cast in town?

Rev. Mr. Spaulding says, I shan't shed many tears over the result. If Mr. Colby is defeated I shall be reconciled.

The head of the Republican Town Committee, J. Fred Ingraham of Faraway, has been made a happy father again.

At the close of registration Wednesday night there was a total of 1,644 names on the voting list. Last year it was 1420.

Notwithstanding the dirty tricks sprung upon them, the friends of Spaulding rallied and fought with Spartan firmness.

Handsome Col. French will stay at home. The labor vote for Spaulding was what defeated him. Cogswell had his usual luck.

Some of the moral republicans peddled ballots for Hurlburt for District Attorney in an honorable and above board manner.

The following is the vote for sheriff: Herrick, 18.389; Breen, 12.728; Tarr, 415; Morgan, 351. Herrick is handsomely elected Yesterday ended one of the rottenest campaigns ever fought in Essex county. Combination trades and boodle were met at every step.

Notwithstanding the large number of men loafing, most of them did not vote till the noon hour as has been their custom in the past.

The genial Sam Roads of Marblehead, democrat, defeated Odell of Beverly as senator in the Second district. Sam was always popular with the boys.

Chairman Southwick stood up and uninterrupted from six o'clock in the evening till ten minutes of two this morning called off the split tickets.

Munroe & Arnold's express team containing several barrels drove up in front of the town house and the crowd started the cry that it was a barrel of boodle.

Mr. Asa T. Newhall, the democratic senator from this district, was present when the vote was declared and he knew that he was elected by about 200.

Now the ballots are all counted,
And the net result is mounted,
And the wild huzza is shouted,
And our rival he is routed
And elected to stay at hum.

A number of Salem rumsellers drove up to the town house during the day to see how the fight against Hurlburt was going on and leaving stickers to defeat him.

Miss Mary J. Floyd, Miss Kate Hodgkins and Mrs. Lucy Reed of the W. C. T. U. remained at the town house and kept the teapot warm for the selectmen and reporters.

The regular labor ticket was in the field for an hour or two in the morning, but two or three names were spelled wrong and it was relegated to do service as shaving paper in a barber shop.

One ardent republican, who could see only Hurlburt's name on the ticket, was distributing one that had the name of Chas. H. Odell of Beverly as Senator, a man who didn't live in this district.

The entire Essex County republican ticket is elected, with the exception of Hurlburt, and he was elected by the republicans. This is good news, and is significant of a change in party affiliations.

Bright and early Mrs. M. O. Stevens was at the polls and heroically urged the voters to accept a Prohibition ticket. She was treated with the respect due her sex and should feel proud of her day's work.

The reporters lingered around the halls, while the hours of counting the votes were dragging along, and amused themselves by pasting stickers on each other and covering the stiff hat of Rev. Spaulding with the Jonas H. French stickers.

An election bet has been made between John McHugh who bet that Spaulding would be elected,and Richard Hurley who bet that Cogswell would be the successful candidate. The winner is to be wheeled by the loser down Main street to the big tree and return.

There was a foolish scare made by the town clerk who said that the ballots on which Spaulding's name was pasted over that of French and didn't cover the word Gloucester, would be counted for Spaulding of Gloucester. There are new decisions every year.

It is too bad to have such a handsome man as Colonel Jonas H. French so badly beaten as he will certainly be in the seventh district,said the Boston Record. You are right, my dear, but he was warned in time but thought money could buy the voters as well as the "committee."

Who settled it? Not the democrats and their mugwump allies. Not the republican town committee with all their lack of work and management. Not the prohibitionist, although they did well, but the laboring man, who saw in Col. Batchelder one on whom they could depend.

The democrats can stand prosperity, but they don't seem to catch on till the band has gone by. They lack confidence in each other. They should recognize every honorable, political element according to its strength and merit, and not try to crowd out those on whom they really depend.

It was said of Andrew Jackson: "He loved the common people." Why should he not? He realized as all who have had any experience must, that the friendship of the common people (so called) is genuine and substantial, and not governed by a money consideration. Such friendship is worth having.

Now the crafty politician
Ponders o'er the situation,
Adding up the rows of figures,
And declares by all that's holy,
That he wished he hadn't run.

A business man who had some personal feeling against Mr. Chas. A. Weare, looked over the democratic ticket and drew his pencil over the three names for Commissioners of Insolvency with the remark: "I scratch Weare because I don't like him, and the others for being in such bad company."

The French leaders are charged with dumping bushels of boodle into the Seventh district for the election of their candidate. That virtuous and incorruptible Knights of Labor Committee never imagined there was so much money in the country, and so of course the French men did not cast their bread upon the waters.

Thinking we should neglect to vote, Candidate John F. Andrew sent us his name printed on four little pieces of gumned paper. It was very thoughtful of Mr. Andrew but we're not voting that way this year. Now that the election is over, will he think enough of us to subscribe for the PRESS? Two dollars a year in advance.

Mr. Asa T. Newhall has been elected senator from this district. "Yer 'and Guv'ner, yer 'and." We voted for the other fellow but give us "yer 'and" and accept our congratulations. We submit always most gracefully to a defeat and treasure no feeling over a beat in a fair contest, where only square means are employed to win the prize.

The vote for County Commissioner in total is as follows: Low, 17,207; Colby, 14,970; Friend, 373. There are a few towns to hear from. The agricultural portions of the county evidently preferred the genial secretary of the Essex Agri. Society to the present incumbent. We are inclined to believe that the voters are right. We are glad Mr. Low is elected.

There is a good deal of bad feeling against Mr. J. J. Cahill who represented this part of the district on the Spaulding committee. We do not believe the report that Mr. Cahill received money for going over to French, although we have not so much confidence in other members of the committee. Cahill made a mistake in not resigning when he concluded to support Jonas H. French.

The Democrats have captured the Senatorial district, our dog will be subject to an increased tax next year, the best spring chickens will bring only ten cents, crow will come higher, pumpkins are frozen up, champagne cider gives topers something worse than the cramps, our one hundred and fifty days of winter have started in upon a scanty fuel pile, snow will soon be piling up, hands become rough and chapped and the coffee pot has sprung a leak. Terrible times, all owing to the election of a Democrat in this district.

THE AMESBURY News had an editorial in a late issue regarding truant schools in Essex county, which contains much of truth regarding this much discussed matter. It took the ground that the establishment of a school such as is proposed by the statute would be a questionable one, both as to propriety and expediency, to say nothing of the expense. It says, among other things:

If truant schools are necessary, they can be maintained by a union of towns and cities after the manner adopted by the city of Lawrence. For several years the truant school of that city has quietly worked in the interest of reform. It has been successful because it has had comparatively few scholars to care for, whose welfare has enlisted the attention of a board of control composed not only of the city government, but prominent gentlemen who have generously watched its progress. The organization of a truant school would aggravate the evils of truancy forefold, for the reason that inconsiderate haste would lead committees to desire to be rid of boys classed as truants, and who now, by little more care and oversight, they could themselves control. Again, sad as the fact may be, there are parents who would see in such a school a means of relief for the care, oversight and maintenance of boys who may become wilful in spirit at the restraints of home and ordinary school discipline. Boys, who otherwise could be taught at the home school, would be forced to associate with others worse than themselves, and "as evil communications corrupts good manners," the whole leaven of evil in a school of this character would be destructive in its tendency.

The truth of much of the above cannot be gainsaid and we presume has been the argument taken by the County Commissioners in the action regarding truant schools. We noted this indication and referred to it last year, giving it as our judgment that if the establishment of schools such as are provided by the laws of the State was unwise, if there was a doubt as to the policy of the methods provided, the proper thing to do was to have the matter fairly presented to the Legislature, that the present law might be repealed or amended.

The judgment of the School Boards of this town and other towns and cities, which asked for the establishment of the school, is not in accord with the argument of the Amesbury News. This town has found the present condition of things entirely incompetent to prevent the evil of truancy. While it is a matter of expense which should duly be taken into consideration by the County Commissioners, the statute does not make it optional with them, which should be remembered by the News when it says that "Never should the Commissioners of Essex County involve the towns and cities in this great expense." Such a school has been asked for by the towns and cities in this vicinity in the manner provided by law; if thought to be an unwise thing, the Commissioners have had opportunity to present the case, through representatives of the sections of the County which have been opposed to such establishment, to the Legislature. Inasmuch as no change has been made in the law, we fail to see upon what tenable grounds the refusal of the school can be defended.

Elene Buffington Kehew is engaged to sing in Lowell, November 24, for choral union; Baltimore, Md., January 5 and 6, in the "Messiah;" Melrose, January 17, and at the Cecelia Club's production of Dvorak's "Spectre Bride" March 17. At the latter performance Max Heinrich, the celebrated New York basso, will also take part.

Mr. Harry Benson of Tonic Sol Fa fame has just opened a full class of sight-reading in singing at No. 5 Park St., Boston. Mr. Benson has held similar classes to this for several years past, and as an outcome of these has originated the Chorus Club, which gave several concerts last year under his direction. Professing at least to teach the art of reading music at sight in 20 lessons, this is a subject that should demand the notice of many of our music students.

Next week Mr. Angelo's Italian Opera Co. is to give a two week's season in Mechanics Institute Hall. Prominent among the singers are Mme. Valda (Miss Julia Wheelock of Boston), and Louisi Simi (Miss Hattie Louise Sims of New York). Both of these ladies have been in Europe for several years in the study of opera.

SPARKS.

The much talked of and long-looked for La France steam fire engine for Beverly Farms arrived in Beverly last Thursday and at once became the object of admiration of every one interested in fire apparatus. The engine was placed in the Central engine house and on Saturday afternoon was taken out and given a test. It is the only engine of this design in New England and the report that it would be tested Saturday drew firemen from every city and town within 20 miles, among them being Fire Commissioner Green, Chief Webber and Sup't of Repair Shops Demerritt, of Boston, Chiefs and engineers from Salem, Lynn, Gloucester, and in fact all around the county. Peabody was represented by Chief Buxton and Assistants Southwick and Tibbetts and about twenty-five firemen from the various companies. The rain began to fall heavily at 1 o'clock and continued throughout the afternoon, making it uncomfortable for everybody. The engine is a beauty and cannot be discounted for looks, being wholly nickel-plated, even to the axles and springs. The wood-work is painted a very dark lake striped with gold. It is a piston engine claimed to be of the third class, but as it throws 650 gallons of water per minute and weighs 6,600 pounds it would be classed, in this state, in the second class. It is supplied with the La France patent boiler, a boiler which is guaranteed to get steam in two minutes, and to run up to 80 pounds in about five minutes. The boiler is self-cleaning. The slides and link boxes of other piston engines have been done away with, and in their place a neat mechanical movement running without friction substituted. Other important improvements have been made. The engine was taken out on Rantoul street about 2 o'clock, but by some vexatious delays with the hydrants did not get to work until nearly 3 o'clock. The fire was lighted, and in three and a half minutes had twenty pounds of steam, and in seven minutes eighty pounds. A line of 150 feet of hose, with a 1 3 8 inch pipe, was laid, and a stream of water thrown 297 feet actual measure. Two lines of 100 feet each of hose were laid, and a siamese nozzle put on, with 1 1-2 inch pipe, and the stream was thrown 310 feet. A stream. 650 gallons per minute, was thrown perpendicular about 175 feet. There was a high wind, and most of the time a heavy rain.

The machine gave perfect satisfaction in its workings and Beverly Farms will have an engine to be proud of. After the trials a supper was provided in the opera house by Killam, the Beverly caterer. The engine cost $3,500. A second trial was given the machine Monday forenoon.

In our notice last week we said that Mr. B. D. Hill furnished the flowers for the trumpets, now we don't want to give Mr. Hill too much credit, because Mr. Ward of Endicott street furnished flowers for ten trumpets.

Two weeks ago Kent & Boynton had the Salem Brass Band in their finely furnished store for a concert to their patrons and friends. It was the occasion of their fall opening of goods, and attracted a large crowd of people. This firm is young and comparatively new to Salem. Mr. Boynton was favorably known prior to the opening of the store and Mr. Kent had a good reputation in Brockton. These gentlemen started out with the idea of giving the people the full value of their money—honest goods at as low prices as could be afforded. Their stock was all new; and the people were not long in finding out that a different class of goods was being sold from that on the counters of this store in years past. They engaged one of the best cutters in the state, and so satisfactory has he proved that the patrons of this establishment find that it is necessary to order their suits some time ahead. They have some of the finest goods in the state, and it is sufficient to say that a customer of this firm in this department once is always a customer. One of the firm said to us that never, even in the largest bargain sales ever advertised, did the firm of Wilmot & Co. have such a trade as they have been having regularly since the opening of the season. It is on the increase daily, and they are more than pleased with the result, and their patrons have reason, also, to be pleased. This firm are offering no cheap goods at any price, their goods are all warranted as represented and sold as low as can be afforded. Their stock is large and varied, cleanly selected and suited to all classes. The firm, themselves, are gentlemanly and courteous and customers can rely upon prompt attention. They invite our readers to call and inspect their line of goods, and we cordially second their invitation.

It will be seen by Osborne's advertisement that he means business in Men's $3.00 Shoes, cutting prices right and left. Osborne always means what he says, and he never could have the trade he has if he treated the public any other than honorably, Read his advertisement in another column.

ASTHMA.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of
DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

An agent of an electric light company has been circulating among our manufacturers to see what they thought of establishing an electric light plant in this town.

The last trip on the Salem & Lowell railroad will hereafter leave Salem for Lowell at 4.40 P. M. instead of 5.50 P.M., as heretofore. The change began on Monday.

Mrs. Alfred Logan of this town, while in Salem last Saturday forenoon, lost or was robbed of a pocket book, containing thirteen dollars and some small change.

A boy, employed at Harrington & Co.'s, while attempting to shift a belt from one pulley to another with a stick last Thursday was struck and burned about the face.

Mr. Simon P. Buxton was kicked in the head by a balky horse yesterday afternoon, cutting a deep gash and rendering him unconscious. He is confined to his bed to-day.

Mr. Henry C. Wilson rescued a man last Monday evening who was attempting to board a train and lost his balance. If it had not been for Wilson he would have gone under the wheels.

Mr. Joseph N. Sumner will move to Boston this week, having accepted a position as foreman of the new leather manufactory of John Hemmenway, late of the firm of Hemmenway & Caller.

Already attempts are being made in Salem to divide the vote of Mayor Raymond and defeat his re-election. They ought to fail. Mayor Raymond has made a good executive and should be re-elected.

A number of members of Geo. Peabody Lodge, A. O. U. W., visited John Endicott Lodge of Salem Thursday evening on the occasion of its reception to G. M. W. John J. Upchurch, in lodge circles called "Father" Upchurch, the founder of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. A banquet was served and speeches made by several brothers.

Mr. Charles A. Thomas will open the rink next Saturday evening for the regular skating season. Music will be furnished by Reinewald's new orchestra, and skating will be continued till 10.15 o'clock.

A gang of hoodlums threw stones through the windows of John Hemmenway's house on Oak street last Wednesday night. It is too bad that they could not be caught and an example made of them.

The Morocco Dressers' Assembly of the Knights of Labor have hired the Danvers Skating rink, and will give a skating and dancing party next Friday evening for the benefit of the locked-out tanners and curriers.

The committee having in charge the free course of lectures in the Institute have nearly completed their arrangements. The opening lecture will be by S. G. W. Benjamin on Persia, on the evening of Thursday, Nov. 18.

Peabody firemen feel proud over their successful endeavors to save the property of our Salem neighbors from fire. They ought to. There is not a better organized, better drilled or more enthusiastic body of men in the state.

Some one, supposed to be clerk in a grocery store, removed the gates from in front of a number of Main street residences last Sunday night. The young dude had better be careful or he may have to pay for being so funny.

At the Methodist church, commencing to-morrow, (Thursday) afternoon, prayer meetings of the mothers connected with that and other churches, will be held. This is a new feature and a good attendance is anticipated.

The Salem and Danvers Street Railway Company have reduced the wages paid its drivers and conductors from $2 to $1.75 each per day. This is a voluntary thing on the part of the men, that the whole force may work this winter. There seems to be some dissatisfaction already as two men were discharged last Monday.

The house belonging to Geo. McCausland, on Tremont street, now occupied by Mr. Leighton, book-keeper for L. & G. H. Poor, has been sold to Thomas Duffy. It is said that Mr. Duffy will open a grocery in the basement.

A new foundation has been put under the Lillis' building at the corner of Wallis and Walnut streets. The building will be raised a couple of feet. It is occupied by Edward Willcox as a grocery store and is owned by the Warren Bank.

Mr. Frank E. Farnham, who owns the John A. Enos house on Highland Park, has made that structure safe to live in by whittling off about two feet of it and building a large addition. Now it looks more like a house than an observatory.

A dog belonging to John Moore on Franklin street, caught the hand of a son of Mr. Asa C. Sawyer in his mouth and badly lacerated it. Dr. Osborne dressed the wounds. The dog was part bull and mastiff. It has been killed by officer Goodwin.

Mr. John Hannon, while passing between two horse cars in Salem last Monday, stooped to pass under the horses' heads of the rear car just as the brake on the forward car was loosed and it struck him in the head, cutting a gash two inches long.

James Corbett has finished his nine months in the house of correction for liquor selling and is about town again. It is probable James E. Millea will be out in season to eat his Thanksgiving dinner at home. Jim has been acting as cook since his confinement.

"Scotty" Whipple, a well known Peabody youth, was found in a field in the rear of Shillaber street Saturday, with bullet holes in his left leg. He claimed that he accidentally shot himself, but the police are of the opinion that he attempted suicide. He has been at work in the tannery of Joseph E. Harris and has a wife and three children.

Poet's Corner.

The New Atlantis.

Patience! God's House of Light shall yet be built,
In years unthought of, to some unknown song,
And from the tomes of Science shall her guilt
Pass like a cloud. How long, O Lord, how long?—

When Faith shall grow a man, and Thought a child,
And that in us which thinks with that which feels Shall everlastingly be reconciled,
And that which questioneth with that which kneels.

And that true Book—the lovely dream is o'er
Which saw it sheltered well beneath the palm,
Sent by a saint from some mysterious shore,
Its tiny frigate floating o'er a calm.

No vessel bore it to a sacred isle,
No magic kept it from the salt sea spray,
It had no perfect charm of Grecian style,
No shaft of glory heralded its way.

Yet, peradventure, shall diviner seem
The chronicle of a severer truth
Than all the fabulous coloring of the dream
That tinted it so richly in our youth.

And yet, for all the puzzle of the lines,
All the discordant copies stained with age,
A more miraculous lore it intertwines,
A grander Christ looks radiant from its page.

For all the stammering of those simple men,
A fourfold unity of truth they reach;
Drops as of light fall from their trembling pen,
And Christ speaks through them with a tenderer speech.

And through all time our Father's faith shall speed,
And the old utterance be sent abroad,
And eastward chanted rise the changeless creed—
O Light from Light, O very God from God!

But for the New Atlantis—for the Church
Where faith and knowledge heart-united dwell—
I think it lies far off beyond our search,
Enfolded by the Hills Delectable.

William Derby and Raphoe.

The Turn of the Tide.

The harbor lights are dim with smoke
Which hangs about the under sky,
And wraps the simple fisherfolk
In lurid mist as they go by.
Along the shore the wind blows free,
Keen twilight kisses the wan sea
Far out; steer thither, watch with me
The tender stars come out on high.

The sky is deepening overhead;
The sail flaps loose; the wind has died;
The water laps the boat like lead;
Faint ripples plash against the side,
And shimmer with unearthly light,
The harbor lamps are out of sight:
We drift into a starless night
Together on the ebbing tide.

How still—how strange—the tide is slack,
We eddy round—we drift no more.
What swell is this which sweeps us back
To where the gathering breakers roar,
About the pale unlighted land?
Can any tell if we shall stand
Safe in the morning hand in hand
Upon the steep and rock-bound shore?

On Some Buttercups.

A little way below her chin,
Caught in her bosom's snowy hem,
Some buttercups are fastened in,—
Ah, how I envy them!

They do not miss their meadow place,
Nor are they conscious that their skies
Are not the heavens, but her face,
Her hair, and mild blue eyes.

There, in the downy meshes pinned,
Such sweet illusions haunt their rest,
They think her breath the fragrant wind,
And tremble on her breast:

As if, close to her heart, they heard
A captive secret slip its cell,
And with desire were sudden stirred
To find a voice and tell!

Another Unpublished Poem.

The following is said to be a poem by Alice Carey, never before published:—

LUNA.

Fair Luna peeps with crescent curve
Through shadows of the night;
Nor heeds the soft and fleecy swerve
Of cloudlets o'er her light.

Anon there comes a cloudy pile,
With raindrops filled a-brim;
It hides her face, but yet her smile
Shines all around the rim.

Mr. Arthur Shurtleff, Parker, Dakota, writes that he suffered for two years with a lame knee, which was entirely cured by the use of St. Jacobs Oil. He considers it a wonderful remedy. It conquers pain.

Take in the cabbages and turnips before the ground freezes.

Catarrh is a constitutional disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a constitutional remedy. It cures catarrh. Give it a trial.

Selected Story.

The Two Artists.

BY HELEN FORREST GRAVES.

A yellow September morning had risen over Crescent Point. Far off in the distance the glancing of white caps revealed a stiff breeze; up the slope of the yellow, crinkly sands in front the foamy surges crept with a soft sound; and Alice Aylmer stopped a moment at the door of the old ruined lighthouse, to talk with David Neill, the boatman.

Another artist? said she. At Crescent Point? Oh, why can't they keep away?

I suppose, miss, said David, with a shrewd shrug of the shoulders, as he went on caulking the seams of his battered old boat, they think it's a sightly place. I've many a time wished I could paint myself, when I've been out on the bay of a moony night, or betwixt day and dawn, when the sky was all pinky red, and the mornin' star a-shinin' like a lamp over the old lighthouse top. But I hadn't never no talent that way, he added, with a sigh.

Is it a famous artist? Alice asked, wistfully.

Old David shook his head.

There you have me, ag'in, said he. I dunno much about them things. His name is Esterfield, and he ain't bad-looking.

Oh! said Alice. The husband of that cross invalid at the Ocean House. I pity him! she added, with a sigh.

So she went on up the winding stone stairway to the little lantern chamber, which she had transformed into an impromptu studio.

When the lightship off Crescent Point had usurped the office of the old lighthouse, Farmer Aylmer had bid in the strip of seashore and the ruinous stone building at a nominal price.

It'll do to store salt hay and seaweed in, said he, if it ain't good for nothing else.

But Alice, his granddaughter, had pleaded for it.

It will make such a nice studio for me, grandfather, she said, and she had her way.

Alice Aylmer loved art with a genuine love, and she put all her soul into the glowing little pictures that she sketched on the conch-shells and bits of floating spar and stones washed into perfect ovals by the restless flow and ebb of the tides.

Each of them was a little gem in its way, and as they were sold, one by one, to the fine ladies and languid "vacationists" at the hotel, it gave Alice a secret pang to part with every one.

But it was her bread-winner, that delicate taste of hers in color, perspective and line. Farmer Aylmer was old and feeble, and it pleased Alice to think that she was helping the kind grandfather who had been all the parent that she had ever known.

Up to this time she had had no rival in this special line of art, and she was a little amazed when old David announced the appearance of this new artist on the field of action.

But if he has an invalid wife to support, I can't so much blame him, she thought. Poor fellow! Every one has trials in this world, so far as I can see!

When she came out of the lighthouse at noon—she would like to have prosecuted her work a little longer by this glorious mid-day glow, if it had not been for getting her grandfather's dinner, at the old farmhouse under the cliff—she saw a young man sitting on the keel of David Neill's upturned boat, and talking with this sturdy toiler of the sea.

Here's the gen'lman I was tellin' ye 'bout, Miss Alice, said David, with a simple ceremony of introduction. Mr. Esterfield, this is our Miss Alice.

Mr. Esterfield took off his broad-brimmed hat and bowed courteously.

I am told that your family owns this picturesque old ruin, said he, inclining his head toward the lighthouse.

Yes, said Alice.

I should like to rent it for a studio.

I already occupy it as a studio, said Alice, stiffly.

Indeed! Then, said he, you are the young lady who paints those little conch-shells and smooth stones. They are very pretty, indeed!

Alice bowed with conscious pride.

That room up there would be a glorious studio! said Mr. Esterfield, longingly. Couldn't you give me easel room there? I think the sight of the sea and the sound of the breakers would inspire me.

I have no more space than I myself need to occupy, said Alice, more frigidly than before.

Was it not bad enough for this patronizing artist to come here at all, poaching (so to speak) on her manor, but he must even want to crowd her out of her solitary tower of refuge? This was certainly the height of presumption!

But as Alice fried the fish and sliced up the juicy, crimson tomatoes for her grandfather's meal, a softer sentiment stirred her bosom.

Perhaps the young man was poor and friendless, struggling to make his way in the world; and that invalid wife of his, who could not stir without crutches, and who was universally reported to be so very uncertain in temper—was not that trial enough for anybody?

Alice was sorry that she had spoken so sharply.

When she came back across the glistening sands, where the low tide had left its deposit of feathery seaweed and delicately tinged shells, Mr. Esterfield sat sketching by the old boat.

I have changed my mind, said Alice, walking up to him. There is room for your easel, as well as mine, in the lantern room.

May we share the studio together? said the young man, joyfully. Thanks, a thousand times! and I will try to take up as little room as possible.

So there were two artists now in the round room of the lighthouse.

Grandfather Aylmer came there sometimes to read his paper and chat. Old David "posed" more than once, after Mr. Esterfield had made him comprehend that he was to come in his fisherman's suit instead of his Sunday clothes, with a stiff collar and a hat that came down over the bridge of his nose.

Alice grew to like her fellow-artist, and she treated him with a soft, gracious dignity that became her well.

Everbody seems to admire your pictures so much! said she, with a sigh. I wish I could paint as you do.

It's all in practice, said Mr. Esterfield, intent on bringing out the scarlet touches in a cluster of autumn leaves in his foreground.

How nice it would be, said Alice, if Mrs. Esterfield could come here and look at you work.

Don't mention such a thing, pray, said the artist, laughing. I've the greatest respect for her, of course, and consideration, and all that sort of thing; but between ourselves, Miss Alice, we're a great deal more peaceful without her than with her. She can't help scolding and fretting and finding fault, he added, apologetically, as Alice looked reproachfully at him. It's her nature, I suppose.

Poor fellow! thought Alice. But he ought uot to speak so of his wife.

She began to wonder what sort of a person Mrs. Esterfield was as to looks. Was she pretty? Was she young?

Yet Alice was too proud to ask questions of anybody, and she was delighted when there came an order for a painted conch-shell from a Cuban lady at the hotel, who desired it for a souvenir.

I will take it there myself, she thought, and I shall see Mr. Esterfield's wife. And then—then I think I had better accept Cousin Betsey Prideaux's offer to go to Nebraska City, to teach her little girls.

For Alice had just begun to be conscious that she was becoming too much interested in Gordon Esterfield. He was so young, so handsome, so enthusiastic in his art—and even the fact of that great trial of his existence, the crippled wife, lent an additional glamour to his surroundings.

The Cuban lady was charmed with the painted conch-shell.

I shall show it to La Donna Esterfield, she said. Come with me, signora. La Donna is a critic—she knows all of art.

And Alice timidly followed the fat Cuban lady into a shaded room, where, wrapped in shawls, a pallid, middle-aged personage lay on a sofa.

It's pretty well, she said, discontentedly, surveying the shell. It's crude—all these things are crude. What can a young girl know of true art feeling? Nobody understands—not even Gordon. Where's the young woman? Let her come in. Let her come around by the window, where I can see her.

The tables were turned. Alice had come to see Mrs. Esterfield, and Mrs. Esterfield was determined to see her. Blushing deeply, she obeyed. The yellow faced little lady took a long stare at her.

Well, said she, you are pretty. He said so, but I didn't believe him. Sit down. Let me talk to you.

No, thanks, cried Alice, feeling as if all her veins were filled with fire. I—I want to go back home now; grandfather will be wanting me.

And she made her exit with more vehemence than ceremony.

Country-bred! said Mrs. Esterfield, lifting her tow-colored eyebrows. That is plain enough! But pretty!

How I pity him! oh, how sorry I feel for him, Alice kept repeating to herself, as she hurried home.

Perhaps, also, she pitied herself a little, for the tears kept trickling down her cheeks like the soft, slow drops of summer rain.

Alice! Why, what is the matter?

It was Gordon Esterfield's voice. He was close behind her, in the narrow lane, where the blackberry vines were turning scarlet, and the path was carpeted with yellow leaves.

She tried desperately to recover herself.

The matter? Nothing! Why should anything be the matter? retorted she.

You are crying.

I am not crying. Why should I be crying?

Alice, will you not tell me? Dear Alice, I love you! I was coming this very day to ask you to be my wife, he pleaded.

She turned on him with crimsoned cheeks and flashing eyes.

How dare you thus insult me? she exclaimed. Go to your poor, deluded wife!

Alice! he cried; what on earth are you talking about? I haven't got any wife. I never had a wife. And I never shall have, unless you say 'yes' to me.

But Mrs. Esterfield, in the hotel?

She's my aunt, he explained. You don't mean to say that you thought she was—my wife?

The comic dismay of his tone, the revulsion of feeling in Alice Aylmer's own heart, were too much for her. She burst out laughing, then she began to cry. And by the time that Mr. Esterfield had succeeded in comforting her, they were engaged.

But—but, faltered Alice, I thought you were a poor artist! I felt so sorry for you!

Pity is akin to love, Mr. Esterfield responded. I am an artist, but I am not poor. Especially since you, my love, have given me the treasure of your heart.

Yes; but everything has ended so differently from what I thought it would! cried Alice.

Hasn't it ended exactly right?

Yes, but—

There was never any end to this sentence. Mr. Esterfield stopped it with a kiss.

For the relief and cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other modes of treatment had proved of no avail.

"Hand-painted underwear" is the latest craze.

ONLY A STEP.—When catarrh has progressed to a certain extent, it is only a step to that terribly fatal disease, consumption. If you have catarrh, even slightly, it is a terrible mistake to allow it to continue its course unchecked. If you will only read, you will find conclusive reasons why you should take Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, in the statements of many people who have been completely cured of this disease in its most severe forms. "ACELDAMA."

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON AT THE BROOKLYN TABERNACLE.

The Great Preacher Denounces Gambling in All Its Forms—Church Raffles Come Under the Same Denomination. The Great Extent of the Evil.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 7.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning on the subject "Aceldama." The opening hymn was:

My soul, be on thy guard!
Ten thousand foes arise.

After expounding the Epistle of James concerning the nature of temptation, Dr. Talmage announced the text, Acts i, 19: "Aceldama, that is to say, the field of blood." Following is the sermon in full:

The money that Judas gave for surrendering Christ was used to purchase a graveyard. As the money was blood money, the ground bought by it was called in the Syriac tongue Aceldama, meaning "the field of blood." Well, there is one word I want to write today over every racecourse where wagers are staked, and every poolroom, and every gambling saloon, and every table, public or private, where men and women bet for sums of money, large or small, and that is a word incarnadined with the life of innumerable victims—Aceldama. The gambling spirit, which is at all times a stupendous evil, ever and anon sweeps over the country like an epidemic, prostrating uncounted thousands. There has never been a worse attack than that from which all the villages, towns and cities are now suffering. The farces recently enacted in our Brooklyn courtroom, by which it was proved that in the City of Churches there is not enough moral force to put into the penitentiary the gambling jockeys who belong there, is only a specimen of the power gained by this abomination, which is brazen, sanguinary, transcontinental and hemispheric.

While among my hearers are those who have passed on into the afternoon of life, and the shadows are lengthening, and the sky crimsons with the glow of the setting sun, a large number of them are in early life, and the morning is coming down out of the clear sky upon them, and the bright air is redolent with spring blossoms, and the stream of life, gleaming and glancing, rushes on between flowery banks, making music as it goes. Some of you are engaged in mercantile concerns, as clerks and bookkeepers, and your whole life is to be passed in the exciting world of traffic. The sound of busy life stirs you as the drum stirs the fiery warhorse. Others are in the mechanical arts, to hammer and chisel your way through life, and success awaits you. Some are preparing for professional life, and grand opportunities are before you; nay, some of you already have buckled on the armor.

But whatever your age or calling, the subject of gambling, about which I speak to-day, is pertinent. Some years ago, when an association for the suppression of gambling was organized, an agent of the association came to a prominent citizen and asked him to patronize the society. He said: "No, I can have no interest in such an organization. I am in nowise affected by that evil." At that very time his son, who was his partner in business, was one of the heaviest players in Herne's famous gambling establishment. Another refused his patronage on the same ground, not knowing that his first bookkeeper, though receiving a salary of only $1,000, was losing from $50 to $100 per night. The president of a railroad company refused to patronize the institution, saying: "That society is good for the defense of merchants, but we railroad people are not injured by this evil;" not knowing that at that very time two of his conductors were spending three nights of each week at faro tables in New York. Directly or indirectly this evil strikes at the whole world.

Gambling is the risking of something more or less valuable in the hope of winning more than you hazard. The instruments of gaming may differ, but the principle is the same. The shuffling and dealing of cards, however full of temptation, is not gambling unless stakes are put up; while, on the other hand, gambling may be carried on without cards, or dice, or billiards, or a tenpin alley. The man who bets on horses, on elections, on battles—the man who deals in "fancy" stocks, or conducts a business which hazards extra capital, or goes into transactions without foundation but dependent upon what men call "luck," is a gambler.

It is estimated that one-fourth of the business in London is done dishonestly. Whatever you expect to get from your neighbor without offering an equivalent in money, or time, or skill, is either the product of theft or gaming. Lottery tickets and lottery policies come into the same category. Fairs for the founding of hospitals, schools and churches, conducted on the raffling system, come under the same denomination. Do not, therefore, associate gambling necessarily with any instrument, or game, or time, or place, or think the principle depends upon whether you play for a glass of wine or 100 shares of railroad stock. Whether you patronize "auction pools," "French mutuals" or "bookmaking," whether you employ faro or billiards, rondo and keno, cards or bagatelle, the very idea of the thing is dishonest, for it professes to bestow upon you a good for which you give no equivalent.

This crime is no newborn sprite, but a haggard transgression that comes staggering down under a mantle of curses through many centuries. All nations, barbarous and civilized, have been addicted to it. Before 1838 the French government received revenue from gaming houses. In 1567 England, for the improvement of her harbors, instituted a lottery to be held at the front door of St. Paul's cathedral. Four hundred thousand tickets were sold at ten shillings each. The British museum and Westminster bridge were partially built by similar procedures. The ancient Germans would sometimes put up themselves and families as prizes, and suffer themselves to be bound, though stronger than the persons who won them.

But now the laws of the whole civilized world denounce the system. Enactments have been passed, but only partially enforced, and at times not enforced at all. The men interested in gaming houses and in jockey clubs wield such influence by their numbers and affluence that the judge, the jury and the police officer must be bold indeed who would array themselves against these infamous establishments. The house of commons of England actually adjourns on Derby day to go out and bet on the races; and in the best circles of society in this country to-day are many hundreds of professedly respectable men who are acknowledged gamblers.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in this land are every day being won and lost through sheer gambling. Says a traveler through the west: "I have traveled 1,000 miles at a time upon the western waters, and seen gambling at every waking moment from the commencement to the termination of the journey." The southwest of this country reeks with this sin. In some of those cities every third or fourth house in many of the streets is a gaming place, and it may be truthfully averred that each of our cities is cursed with this evil.

In themselves, most of the games employed in gambling are without harm. Billiard tables are as harmless as tea tables and a pack of cards as a pack of letter envelopes, unless stakes be put up. But by their use for gambling purposes they have become significant of an infinity of wretchedness—600 gambling saloons in New York city when last counted.

Men wishing to gamble will find places just suited to their capacity not only in the underground oyster cellar, or at the table back of the curtain, covered with greasy cards, or in the steamboat smoking cabin, where the bloated wretch with rings in his ears deals out his pack, and winks in the unsuspecting traveler—providing free drinks all around—but in gilded parlors and amid gorgeous surroundings.

This sin works ruin, first, by unhealthful stimulants. Excitement is pleasurable. Under every sky and in every age men have sought it. The Chinaman gets it by smoking his opium, the Persian by chewing hashish, the trapper in a buffalo hunt, the sailor in a squall, the inebriate in the bottle and the avaricious at the gaming table. We must at times have excitement. A thousand voices in our nature demand it. It is right. It is healthful. It is inspiriting. It is a desire God-given. But anything that first gratifies this appetite and hurls it back in a terrific reaction is deplorable and wicked. Look out for the agitation that like a rough musician in bringing out the tune plays so hard he breaks down the instrument! God never made man strong enough to endure the wear and tear of gambling excitement. No wonder if, after having failed in the game, men have begun to sweep off imaginary gold from the side of the table. The man was sharp enough when he started at the game, but a maniac at the close. At every gaming table sit on one side Ecstasy, Enthusiasm, Romance—the frenzy of joy; on the other side, Fierceness, Rage and Tumult. The professional gamester schools himself into apparent quietness. The keepers of gambling rooms are generally fat, rollicking and obese; but thorough and professional gamblers, in nine cases out of ten, are pale, thin, wheezing, tremulous and exhausted.

A young man having suddenly inherited a large property, sits at the hazard tables, and takes up in a dice box the estate won by a father's lifetime's sweat, and shakes it, and tosses it away. Intemperance soon stigmatizes its victim—kicking him out, a slavering fool, into the ditch, or sending him, with the drunkard's hiccough, staggering up the street where his family lives. But gambling does not in that way expose its victims. The gambler may be eaten up by the gambler's passion, yet you only discover it by the greed in his eyes, the hardness of his features, the nervous restlessness, the threadbare coat and his embarrassed business. Yet he is on the road to hell, and no preacher's voice, or startling warning, or wife's entreaty, can make him stay for a moment his headlong career. The infernal spell is on him; a giant is aroused within; and though you bind him with cables, they would part like thread; and though you fasten him seven times around with chains, they would snap like rusted wire; and though you piled up in his path, heaven-high, Bibles, tracts and sermons, and on the top should set the cross of the Son of God, over them all the gambler would leap like a roe over the rocks on his way to perdition. "Aceldama, the field of blood!"

Again, this sin works ruin by killing industry. A man used to reaping scores or hundreds of dollars from the gaming table will not be content with slow work. He will say: "What is the use of trying to make these $50 in my store, when I can get five times that in half an hour down at Billy's?" You never knew a confirmed gambler who was industrious. The men given to this vice spend their time not actively employed in the game in idleness or intoxication or sleep, or in corrupting new victims. This sin has dulled the carpenter's saw and cut the band of the factory wheel, sunk the cargo, broken the teeth of the farmer's harrow and sent a strange lightning to shatter the battery of the philosopher. The very first idea in gaming is at war with all the industries of society. Any trade or occupation that is of use is ennobling. The street sweeper advances the interests of society by the cleanliness effected. The cat pays for the fragments it eats by clearing the house of vermin. The fly that takes the sweetness from the dregs of the cup compensates by purifying the air and keeping back the pestilence. But the gambler gives not anything for that which he takes. I recall that sentence. He does make a return; but it is disgrace to the man that he fleeces, despair to his heart, ruin to his business, anguish to his wife, shame to his children and eternal wasting away to his soul. He pays in tears, and blood, and agony, and darkness and woe.

What dull work is plowing to the farmer when in the village saloon in one night he makes and loses the value of a summer harvest! Who will want to sell tape and measure nankeen and cut garments and weigh sugars when in a night's game he makes and loses, and makes again and loses again, the profits of a season? John Borack was sent as mercantile agent from Bremen to England and this country. After two years his employers mistrusted that all was not right. He was a defaulter for $87,000. It was found that he had lost in Lombard street, London, $29,000; in Fulton street, New York, $10,000, and in New Orleans, $3,000. He was imprisoned, but afterward escaped, and went into the gambling profession. He died in a lunatic asylum. This crime is getting its lever under many a mercantile house in our cities, and before long down will come the great establishment, crushing reputation, home comfort and immortal souls. How it diverts and sinks capital may be inferred from some authentic statement before us. The ten gaming houses that once were authorized in Paris passed through the banks yearly 325,000,000 francs.

Where does all the money come from? The whole world is robbed! What is most sad, there are no consolations for the loss and suffering entailed by gaming. If men fail in lawful business, God pities and society commiserates; but, where in the Bible or in society is there any consolation for the gambler? From what tree of the forest oozes there a balm that can soothe the gamester's heart? In that bottle where God keeps the tears of his children are there any tears of the gambler? Do the winds that come to kiss the faded cheek of sickness and to cool the heated brow of the laborer whisper hope and cheer to the emaciated victim of the game of hazard? When an honest man is in trouble he has sympathy. "Poor fellow!" they say. But do gamblers come to weep at the agonies of the gambler? In Northumberland was one of the finest estates in England. Mr. Porter owned it, and in a year gambled it all away. Having lost the last acre of the estate, he came down from the saloon and got into his carriage, went back, put up his horses and carriage and town house and played. He threw and lost. He started home, and on a side alley met a friend, from whom he borrowed ten guineas, went back to the saloon, and before a great while had won £20,000. He died at last a beggar in St. Giles. How many gamblers felt sorry for Mr. Potter? Who consoled him on the loss of his estate? What gambler subscribed to put a stone over the poor man's grave? Not one!

Furthermore, this sin is the source of uncounted dishonesty. The game of hazard itself is often a cheat. How many tricks and deceptions in the dealing of the cards! The opponent's hand is ofttimes found out by fraud. Cards are marked so that they may be designated from the back. Expert gamesters have their accomplices, and one wink may decide the game. The dice have been found loaded with platina, so that doublets come up every time. These dice are introduced by the gamblers unobserved by the honest men who have come into the play, and this accounts for the fact that 99 out of 100 who gamble, however wealthy when they began, at the end are found to be poor, miserable, haggard wretches who would not now be allowed to sit on the doorstep of the house that they once owned. In a gaming house in San Francisco a young man having just come from the mines deposited a large sum upon the ace, and won $22,000. But the tide turns. Intense anxiety comes upon the countenances of all. Slowly the cards went forth. Every eye is fixed. Not a sound is heard until the ace is revealed favorable to the bank. There are shouts of "Foul! foul!" but the keepers of the table produce their pistols, and the uproar is silenced and the bank has won $95,000. Do you call this a game of chance? There is no chance about it.

But these dishonesties in the carrying on of the game are nothing when compared with the frauds that are committed in order to get money to go on with the nefarious work. Gambling, with its needy hand, has snatched away the widow's mite and the portions of the orphans; has sold the daughter's virtue to get the means to continue the game; has written the counterfeit signature, emptied the banker's money vault and wielded the assassin's dagger. There is no depth of meanness to which it will not stoop. There is no cruelty at which it is appalled. There is no warning of God that it will not dare. Merciless, unappeasable, fierce and wilder, it blinds, it hardens, it rends, it blasts, it crushes, it damns. It has peopled our prisons and lunatic asylums.

How many railroad agents, and cashiers, and trustees of funds it has driven to disgrace, incarceration and suicide? Witness years ago a cashier of the Central Railroad and Banking company of Georgia, who stole $103,000 to carry on his gaming practices. Witness the $40,000 stolen from a Brooklyn bank within the memory of many of you, and the $180,000 taken from a Wall street insurance company for the same purpose. These are only illustrations on a large scale of the robberies committed for the purpose of carrying out the designs of gamblers. Hundreds of thousands of dollars every year leak out without observation from the merchant's till into the gambling hell.

A man in London keeping one of these gambling houses boasted that he had ruined a nobleman a day; but if all the saloons of this land were to speak out, they might utter a more infamous boast, for they have destroyed a thousand noblemen a year.

Notice also the effect of this crime upon domestic happiness. It has sent its ruthless plowshare through hundreds of families, until the wife sat in rags, and the daughters were disgraced, and the sons grew up to the same infamous practices, or took a short cut to destruction across the murderer's scaffold.

Home has lost all charms for the gambler. How tame are the children's caresses and a wife's devotion to the gambler! How drearily the fire burns on the domestic hearth! There must be louder laughter, and something to win, and something to lose; an excitement to drive the heart faster, fillip the blood and fire the imagination. No home, however bright, can keep back the gamester. The sweet call of love bounds back from his iron soul, and all endearments are consumed in the fire of his passion. The family Bible will go after all other treasures are lost, and if his crown in heaven were put into his hand he would cry, "Here goes; one more game, my boys. On this one throw I stake my crown of heaven."

A young man in London, on coming of age, received a fortune of $120,000, and through gambling, in three years, was thrown on his mother for support.

An only son went to New Orleans. He was rich, intellectual and elegant in manners. His parents gave him on his departure from home their last blessing. The sharpers got hold of him. They flattered him. They lured him to the gaming table and let him win almost every time for a good while, and patted him on the back and said, "First-rate player." But fully in their grasp they fleeced him, and his $30,000 were lost. Last of all, he put up his watch and lost that. Then he began to think of his home, and of his old father and mother, and wrote thus:

"My Beloved Parents: You will doubtless feel a momentary joy at the reception of this letter from the child of your bosom, on whom you have lavished all the favors of your declining years. But should a feeling of joy for a moment spring up in your hearts when you should have received this from me, cherish it not. I have fallen deep, never to rise. Those gray hairs that I should have honored and protected I shall bring down in sorrow to the grave. I will not curse my destroyer, but, oh, may God avenge the wrongs and impositions practiced upon the unwary in a way that shall best please him! This, my dear parents, is the last letter you will ever receive from me. I humbly pray your forgiveness. It is my dying prayer. Long before you will have received this from me the cold grave will have closed upon me forever. Life to me is insupportable. I cannot, nay, I will not, suffer the shame of having ruined you. Forget and forgive is the dying prayer of your unfortunate son."

The old father came to the postoffice, got the letter and fell to the floor. They thought he was dead at first, but they brushed back the white hair from his brow and fanned him. He had only fainted. I wish he had been dead, for what is life worth to a father after his son is destroyed? "Aceldema, the field of blood!"

When things go wrong at a gaming table they shout: "Foul! Foul!" Over all the gaming tables of the world I cry out: "Foul! foul! infinitely foul!"

"Gift stores" are abundant throughout the country. With a book, or knife, or sewing machine, or coat, or carriage there goes a prize. At these stores people get something thrown in with their purchase. It may be a gold watch, or a set of silver, a ring, or a farm. Sharp way to get off unsalable goods. It has filled the land with fictitious articles, and covered up our population with brass finger rings and despoiled the moral sense of the community, and is fast making us a nation of gamblers.

The church of God has not seemed willing to allow the world to have all the advantage of these games of chance. A church fair opens, and toward the close it is found that some of the more valuable articles are unsalable. Forthwith the conductors of the enterprise conclude that they will raffle for some of the valuable articles, and, under pretense of anxiety to make their minister a present or please some popular member of the church, fascinating persons are dispatched through the room, pencil in hand, to "solicit shares," or perhaps each draws for his own advantage, and scores of people go home with their trophies, thinking that is all right, for Christian ladies did the embroidery and Christian men did the raffling and the proceeds went toward a new communion set. But you may depend on it, that as far as morality is concerned, you might as well have won by the crack of the billiard ball or the turn of the dice box.

Do you wonder that churches built, lighted or upholstered by such processes as that come to great financial and spiritual decrepitude? The devil says: "I helped to build that house of worship, and I have as much right there as you have;" and for once the devil is right.

We do not read that they had a lottery for building the church at Corinth or at Antioch, or for getting up an embroidered surplice for St. Paul.

All this I style ecclesiastical gambling. More than one man who is destroyed can say that his first step on the wrong road was when he won something at a church fair.

The gambling spirit has not stopped for any indecency. There transpired in Maryland a lottery in which people drew for lots in a burying ground! The modern habit of writing about everything is productive of immense mischief. The most healthful and innocent amusements of yachting and baseball playing have been the occasion of putting up excited and extravagant wagers. That which to many has been advantageous to body and mind has been to others the means of financial and moral loss. The custom is pernicious in the extreme where scores of men in respectable life give themselves up to betting now on this boat, now on that; now on this ball club, now on that.

Betting, that once was chiefly the accompaniment of the racecourse, is fast becoming a national habit, and in some circles any opinion advanced on finance or politics is accosted with the interrogation: "How much will you bet on that, sir?"

This custom may make no appeal to slow, lethargic temperaments, but there are in the country tens of thousands of quick, nervous, sanguine, excitable temperaments ready to be acted upon, and their feet will soon take hold on death. For some months, and perhaps for years, they will linger in the more polite and elegant circle of gamesters, but, after a while, their pathway will come to the fatal plunge. Finding themselves in the rapids, they will try to back out, and, hurled over the brink, they will clutch the side of the boat, until their fingernails, blood-tipped, will pierce the wood, and then, with white cheek and agonized stare, and the horrors of the lost soul lifting the very hair from the scalp, they will plunge down where no grappling hooks can drag them out.

Young man! stand back from all styles of gambling. The end thereof is death. The tenpin alley affords the best of physical exercise, and many an hour I have passed in some such place getting physical invigoration; but many of the tenpin alleys are now given up to gambling practices. Husbands, brothers, fathers, enter. Put down your $1,000 all in gold eagles! Let the boy set up the pins at the other end of the alley! Now stand back and give the gamester full sweep! Roll the first—there! it strikes! and down goes his respectability! Try it again. Roll the second—there! it strikes! and down goes the last feeling of humanity! Try it again. Roll the third—there! it strikes! and down goes his soul forever! It was not so much the pins that fell as the soul! the soul! Fatal ten-strike for eternity! "Aceldama, the field of blood."

Shall I sketch the history of the gambler? Lured by bad company, he finds his way into a place where honest men ought never to go. He sits down to his first game, but only for pastime and the desire of being thought sociable. The players deal out the cards. They unconsciously play into Satan's hands, who takes all the tricks and both the players' souls for trumps—he being a sharper at any game. A slight stake is put up, just to add interest to the play. Game after game is played. Larger stakes and still larger. They begin to move nervously on their chairs. Their brows lower and eyes flash, until now they who win and they who lose, fired alike with passion, sit with set jaws and compressed lips, and clenched fists, and eyes like fireballs, that seem starting from their sockets, to see the final turn before it comes. If losing, pale with envy and tremulous with unuttered oaths cast back red hot upon the heart; or winning, with hysteric laugh, "Ha! ha! I have it!"

A few years have passed, and he is only the wreck of a man. Seating himself at the game, ere he throws the first card, he stakes the last relic of his wife—the marriage ring which sealed the solemn vows between them. The game is lost, and staggering back in exhaustion he dreams. The bright hours of the past mock his agony, and in his dreams fiends with eyes of fire and tongues of flame circle about him with joined hands, to dance and sing their orgies with hellish chorus, chanting "Hail, brother!" kissing his clammy forehead until their loathsome locks, flowing with serpents, crawl into his bosom and sink their sharp fangs and suck up his life's blood, and, coiling around his heart, pinch it with chills and shudders unutterable.

Take warning! You are no stronger than tens of thousands who have by this practice been overthrown. No young man in our cities can escape being tempted. Beware of the first beginnings! This road is a down grade, and every instant increases the momentum. Launch not upon this treacherous sea. Splint hulks strew the beach. Everlasting storms howl up and down, tossing unwary crafts into the hell gate. I speak of what I have seen with my own eyes. I have looked off into the abyss, and have seen the foaming and the hissing and the whirling of the horrid deep in which the mangled victims writhed one upon another, and struggled, strangled, blasphemed and died—the death-stare of eternal despair upon their countenances as the waters gurgled over them!

To a gambler's deathbed there comes no hope. He will probably die alone. His former associates come not nigh his dwelling. When the hour comes his miserable soul will go out of a miserable life into a miserable eternity. As his poor remains pass the house where he was ruined old companions may look out a moment and say: "There goes the old carcass—dead at last;" but they will not get up from the table. Let him down now into his grave. Plant no tree to cast its shade there, for the long, deep, eternal gloom that settles there is shadow enough. Plant no forget-me-nots or eglantines around the spot, for flowers were not made to grow on such a blasted heath. Visit it not in the sunshine, for that would be mockery, but in the dismal night, when no stars are out, and the spirits of darkness come down horsed on the winds, then visit the grave of the gambler!

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THERE is much to reflect upon in the result of the elections last week. The democratic majority in the House of Representatives has been reduced so that it is barely a majority; Morrison and Frank Hurd and other free traders are defeated; Virginia has gained republican congressmen and Massachusetts has lost some of her republican congressmen. These things mean something.

The republican party can take hope in several ways. First, the result in Virginia, and other states that are breaking away from the solid democratic majority in the south, is a favorable sign. It shows that the southern states, as a unit, are not in favor of free trade; it shows that with the growth of manufactures there, with the increase in free labor, and the spread of education on the part of the laboring population, the ideas of protection and the policy of the republican party are taking root. They are doing more—they are bearing fruit. And this is seen in the added strength of the republican party.

The free trade doctrines of the south have been the result of the education of the people there in the times of slavery. The doctrine will do very well for a nation whose labor costs them nothing. The old slaveholders, who could afford to pit their labor against the labor of the north, were anxious for a low tariff and willing that the markets of this country should be thrown open to the whole world. They had no manufacturing interests and nothing to fear from an enforced reduction in the price of labor.

All this is changed. The south has abolished slavery, or rather the country has abolished it for her, and with the establishment of manufacturing industries, she, too, sees that some protection is needful to compete with the industries of the old world. The fallacies of free trade are being seen there; and the result is shown in the increase of the republican vote in Virginia and some of the border states, with the prospect of some of them being counted in the republican line at the next presidential election.

The action of the labor party, also, is towards the republican doctrine of protection. The leaders of this party are pronounced protectionists. Their platform is not in the direction of free trade. As the masses of the laboring people have this doctrine fairly presented to them, as it was done in Morrison's district, as it has been done in Pennsylvania, as it will be done in the assemblies of the Knights all over the country, the tendency will be towards the voting away from the old democratic party. They will either vote a ticket of their own, as they did in New York, as they have done in Essex county, or they will vote with the republican party.

The accessions which will come to the republican party, from the direct issue of protection, will more than offset the loss of the mugwumps in the state of Massachusetts. The difference between the two parties is growing more and more distinct on this issue. With Clarke and Codman and Russell and others declaiming against protection as "being wrong in theory," and the state of Virginia adding congressmen to the republican side, with Morrison defeated and Carlisle barely saving his election, the issue is clearly defined. The republican party need not shrink from the conflict. The statistics which show the wages paid to the working-men of this country are a lasting monument to this doctrine of the republican party for twenty-five years. Labor is well paid, and is prosperous — beyond any country where, like England, free trade exists.

It should be noted as a result of the election, that no democrat can be elected president should there be no election in 1888 by the people. The republican delegations are a majority in twenty states, which would elect a republican, should there be no choice in the Electoral College. The lessons of the elections are a rebuke to the free trade doctrines of the party which is in power: they point to a republican president, and a republican majority in the following Congress.

THE PURCHASE of a piece of land in the city of Lynn, for a truant school, disposes of the discussion regarding the expediency of the County Commissioners following the line of their plain duty in heeding the request of several cities and towns for the establishment of such a school. The truant school is to be an established fact, and those interested in its feasibility can only wait and see the result of the experiment.

An experiment, in this section, it certainly is. Truancy has become, of late years, an increasing evil. Our State wisely provides for the compulsory education of its children. She is to see to it, also, that their education is not neglected. There is even less excuse than in former years for the children to avail themselves only of the smallest limit of attendance required, as the furnishing of free text books by the State removes considerable expense from the parents, especially poor people who have large families With larger attendance, larger number of school children, and growth of population in our county, comes larger responsibilities and need of care on the part of the truant officers. So long as there has been no truant school, so long as the accommodations in many of the towns have been limited, there has been an excuse, apparently, and an encouragement to a truant officer to neglect his duty, at least to allow many cases of truancy to pass unnoticed.

We can see how such a school, rightly managed, with proper discipline, may accrue to good to the county. We are also aware of the opportunity for a disgraceful failure. The present commissioners are men of good judgment, and we hope to see it carefully exercised in the establishment of the school. Criticism on the action of the commissioners, or upon the wisdom of the step, must and ought to be deferred until more information regarding the policy of the commissioners is vouchsafed, and until the school itself has become an institution of the county.

THE SALEM Gazette, in commenting on the election of Mr. Hurlburt, says that thousands of republicans in Essex County did for Mr. Hurlburt what he would not have done, had the case been reversed. We believe this is true; and the fact that the democrats would not allow the nomination of Dean Peabody to go by default shows that they are not in sympathy with the attempt on the part of the republicans to take any of these offices out of politics. It is no argument to say that the republicans did not nominate Mr. Hurlburt; it has always been a party office and the votes which Hurlburt did receive in the convention were an indication that this office would soon be placed out of the reach of political tricksters. But there has been nothing in the campaign to indicate that the democrats were inclined to meet the republicans even half way in this matter.

We agree with the Gazette that it ought not to be necessary for a district attorney to explain to a crowd in a skating rink the language he used in the prosecution of a criminal. It is also true that it was unwise on the part of Mr. Hurlburt to make such partisan democratic speeches as he made during the campaign. Of course he knew, every candid voter knew, that unless republicans voted for him, he would be defeated as district attorney. Their votes and their influence were, then, of as much, if not more consequence to him, than the votes of his party. Under these circumstances he might, at least, have refrained from active partisan work during the campaign. He showed plainly, what the Gazette intimates, that if the cases were reversed Mr. Hurlburt would be likely to be the last man to support a republican nominee.

As far as the principle of the thing is concerned, as far as a vote for Mr. Hurlburt was influenced by a desire to remove the office from politics, these indications by Mr. Hurlburt himself are of no account. But we have no doubt that the actions of Mr. Hurlburt in the campaign influenced many to vote for Mr. Moody who had intended, at first, to vote for Mr. Hurlburt. We cannot blame them. There was much to be said for and against Mr. Hurlburt. His alliances were not of the best, as the Gazette asserts; but his record for the past term surely commended him to any one—and this was very likely the consideration which decided many voters.

THE LARGE vote given to George, in the city of New York, for mayor, shows the influence of the labor vote, when concentrated for a candidate of its choice. It shows that this vote is not to be held at the dictation of the democratic party, as of old, and perhaps not at the dictation of any party. It voices a serious opposition to the democratic party, from whose ranks the larger part of the vote came.

To hold Mr. Blaine responsible for this movement is folly. We can easily understand that in an election for President, a large third party vote like this, drawn from the democratic party, would elect a republican candidate. We can understand that this vote, breaking away from the free trade doctrines of the democratic party, would prefer the election of a republican. We can understand, too, that the republican party would not throw cold water on the movement.

But the origin of the vote lies deeper than this. Organized labor is becoming a power in this country which will claim recognition in the future. It will fight its battles at the ballot box instead of by foolish strikes and boycotts. Until its demands are met by one or the other of the dominant parties, it will vote for its own candidates. No one can question its right to do so. No one can dispute the advisability of settling these questions at the polls. It is the true way to settle them. Neither the laboring man or the employer can be benefitted by a strike. The more intelligent of the laboring men are realizing this, and will welcome all efforts to decide such questions at the ballot box.

A VISIT of the President of the United States to any State of the Union, in his official capacity, is an event of no small moment. It is fitting that Massachusetts, as she has always done, should give the President and his bride a hearty and cordial welcome. This was done on Monday by Governor Robinson, representing the State, and Mayor O'Brien, representing the city of Boston. President Cleveland for the time is president of the whole country. He was assured of that beyond any doubt, by the hearty reception given him, as well by the party who elected him and the party who voted for Blaine. The visit to Boston, short though it was, was made especially notable in that Mrs. Cleveland accompanied him, and the kind words spoken by our citizens can but assure the President of their cooperation in all that he may desire towards the prosperity and welfare of the country.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. Stone carried Haverhill by 741 votes; Gen. Cogswell lost it by 259 votes. Mr. Stone carried Bradford by 98 votes; Gen. Cogswell lost it by 3 votes. Very suggestive figures.—Haverhill Gazette.

Very suggestive, truly, and very discreditable to the republican party of Haverhill and vicinity. Such a cutting of the regular nominee, on account of the inability of Haverhill to nominate their candidate, is nothing to brag about. Don't the Haverhill republicans expect that these things will be recalled at some future time in other parts of the district? They don't harmonize very well with the promises made by Mr. Wardwell at the Congressional Convention.

It has been well said that if the labor people had voted in the remainder of the state as they voted in Essex county, Mr. Ames' vote would have been far different from what it was. This is surely noticeable; it is also noticeable that the vote for Ames, in this county, and as to that matter for the entire republican ticket, came from voters who had not voted with the republican party for the past few years. Ames' vote in Peabody was not the vote of what has been considered the republican party. It represented many labor votes, some of whom voted only the head of the ticket, others the entire republican ticket, except for Congress.

The defeat of the rumsellers' nominee, for district attorney, is a warning and a rebuke to the republican party. In neglecting to endorse Hurlburt it missed a great opportunity.—Marblehead Messenger.

Perhaps it did. But the encouragement given to do so, in the hope that the democratic party would return the compliment, was not very great. If the republican party did not endorse Hurlburt at the convention they certainly did at the polls. The democrats never elected Hurlburt, and never would have done so without the aid of republicans.

It is rather too bad that this district did not send Mr. Switzer as a republican companion for Mr. Cook of Gloucester in the Senate from Essex county. Danvers did well her part, giving Switzer 231 over his democratic opponent. But our neighbors in Peabody slaughtered him for some reason or other; which will not be likely to help Peabody's cause when she comes to seek the nomination for one of her citizens. —Danvers Mirror.

If the Mirror wants to discover the reason for the defeat of Mr. Switzer, it will find it in the result of the election in the wards of Lynn which are in this district. Mr. Switzer lost every ward therein in his own city. When this is true, the Mirror cannot expect him to carry Peabody, which is a democratic town. The vote for Ames here is nothing to go by. The labor people here voted for Ames; in Danvers they voted for the labor candidate for governor. They voted here for Newhall—whether they did in Danvers we are not aware. The strong vote for Newhall in South Peabody, among the republicans, where he is well known, added much to his vote in Peabody. While we are about it, wasn't there something said in the convention about Mr. Switzer being able to beat Newhall in every ward in the city of Lynn, and wasn't that given as a reason why he should receive the nomination? And wasn't the large vote of Switzer in Danvers, running ahead of his ticket, the result of a trade with the opposition? There is no necessity for Peabody to feel that she did not do as well for Mr. Switzer as could reasonably be expected. The voters did not know him—they did know Mr. Newhall. We want, also, to dispose of the assertion made several times that the Frye men here cut Mr. Switzer. It is not true. There was the best of feeling among the Peabody delegation, after it was found Mr. Frye could not be nominated, towards the nominee of the convention. The delegation had confidence in what was told them by Lynn and Danvers, that Mr. Switzer was the strongest man who could be nominated, and that he would beat the democratic nominee in Lynn. How far that was true, the result has shown.

Essex county furnished Ames with 4,000 majority. The Danvers Mirror says there is no free trade mugwumpery in this section, and the Mirror is about right. There are mugwumps enough, but they didn't count for much beside the protection votes of the labor men, added to the republicans, who voted for Ames.

A large number of children enjoyed a supper at the South church last Thursday evening. They were entertained with music and literary selections after the supper.

Mr. Geo. C. Pierce, whose illness we have mentioned in the past, is very low at his home this morning. The attending physician has no hopes of his recovery and he has been unconscious since Sunday. Major Lewis Allen is also very low and expected to live only a few days.

Mr. Parker Lynch, on Oak street, who, after two years' suffering from blood poisoning, had his hand amputated about a week ago, died at his home on Oak street last Monday morning. He was a carpenter by trade and about 75 years of age.

Holten Lodge I. O. O. F. worked the initiatory on two candidates last night, and will work the first degree next Tuesday evening. It is probable that a delegation from Holten Lodge will visit West Lynn Lodge on the 24th to see the third degree dramatized.

Work is progressing finely at the Methodist church and it is intended to re-dedicate the church on Sunday, Nov. 28 or the first Sunday in December. Bishop Foster has been invited to deliver the address and all the former pastors will be invited to be present.

The report of Chief of Police Peasley for the month of October is as follows: Whole number of arrests 40, of which 23 were for drunkenness; malicious mischief, 9; larceny, 2; breaking glass, 2; gaming, 2; assault, 1; keeping liquor, with intent to sell, 1; whole number of lodgers, 30.

A gentleman representing the Driver's Union ice company of Boston, was in town last week. They contemplate building more icehouses in Essex County and were looking at our ponds. The agent said he could get better railroad accommodations at Georgetown.

Miss Ellen W., youngest daughter of John A. Lord, was united in marriage, last evening at the home of her parents, to Mr. Howard W. Barnard, son of the Boston stable-keeper. Rev. G. A. Hall, of the South church, performed the ceremony. They will reside in Cambridge.

The young hoodlums serenaded a non-union man on Midway street last Thursday night with tin pans and tin whistles They also stoned Henry Dockham, a carpenter, in the employ of M. S. Clark. About 9 30 o'clock the same evening some one threw a stone through a dining-room window of Baldwin's hotel. Peabody is a fly town.

Speaking of "the light of other days," how rapid has been the change from pine knots to tallow dips, from tallow dips to whale oil, from whale oil to lard oil and camphene, from these to kerosene, and from gas to electricity—all within one lifetime. If the light of the future goes on at the same rate, darkness will be a thing of the past,

The trustees of Essex Agricultural society held their November meeting at Plummer hall, Salem, on the 9th inst. The meeting was very fully attended and very interesting throughout. Our townspeople will be glad to know that, by unanimous vote, the next Annual Fair of the society will be held in Peabody, and no town in the county offers greater facilities for a successful fair than our own. The reports of committee on field crops were made and the premiums awarded. Reports were also made by the librarian, the treasurer and the auditors; their reports show a deficiency in the receipts of the last show at Newburyport of more than fifty dollars, the dinner alone costing the society one hundred and eighty-four dollars more than the receipts from the sale of tickets. The premium list was revised and approved for another year. The trustees as usual dined at the Essex house and pronounced the dinner fully up to the standard. Mr. Gilbert L. Streeter was re-elected treasurer for another year.

Wednesday Evening, Nov. 10 1886,

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We announced last week the decease of Rufus Sargent, the architect of our Town Hall, at Palatka, Florida. The Newburyport Herald of last week has an extended obituary of this gentleman, who was so well known in town, and from which we quote:

Mr. Sargent was born in West Amesbury (now Merrimac) in January, 1812, and was consequently in his 75th year. He removed to Newburyport in 1840, and his first work here as an architect was furnishing plans for the Universalist church on Middle street. Many public buildings and private residences in this city were built or remodeled from plans furnished by the deceased, and in Essex county and Rockingham county, N. H., he was widely known as an architect and contractor. Among the more prominent buildings are the Sutton library building, the town hall and several churches in Peabody; the new jail in Salem; a church and academy at Hampton, N. H.; several public buildings and costly residences at Portsmouth, and Mrs. Sutton's residences at Peabody and Centre Harbor, N. H. For several years past he has been engaged on out-of-door work, and more recently he has been engaged in drawing plans and superintending the construction of buildings for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. Last summer the deceased spent several weeks in Newburyport hoping to recuperate, but it was plainly noticeable that the Florida climate did not agree with a man of his years. Mr. Sargent was a very capable man, a thorough mechanic, kind friend and neighbor, and in his family a most devoted husband and father. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

Last Sunday Rev. G. A. Phinney, of the Methodist church, received a check for $40 and the following letter:

Holten Lodge No. 104 I. O. O. F.

PEABODY, MASS., Nov. 4, 1886.

Rev. G. A. Phinney.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find check for forty dollars to defray the expense of a memorial window in the M. E. Church of Peabody, and we beg you to accept this gift of Holten Lodge No. 104 I. O. O. F. in memory of our late esteemed brother and friend, JAMES S. PAUL. Yours respectfully,

EBEN I. KIMBALL,
Secretary.

The following reply to the above has been received by the Lodge:

PEABODY, MASS., Nov. 8, 1886.

Dear Brethren of Holten Lodge:

Your check to cover expense of memorial window for our late brother, JAMES S. PAUL is received, and I wish to thank you officially for your charity. My relations with Holten Lodge have been so pleasant in my brief ministry in this town as to secure my unbounded confidence and highest respect. I extend fraternal greeting.

Sincerely yours,
GEO. ALCOTT PHINNEY.

Next Sunday morning, at the 10 o'clock service, the mission at St. John's church will be opened by Rev. Father McKenna, of the order of St. Dominic. There will be extra music by the choir. Thursday morning, at 7.30 o'clock, an anniversary requiem mass will be said for the late Mrs. Timothy Mullane. The children of the church will receive the sacrament of confirmation Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 1.

Mr. John Huntoon, at one time a cook for the late Chauncy Holman of this town, now mate of the steamer Enos, met with a severe accident at Huntington, West Virginia, recently. He was attempting to check a boat which the Enos had been using as a lighter when his right leg was caught in a coil of rope and the flesh torn from the bone by the tightening of the line. He is now in a hospital.

The slander case of John Perkins against Mrs. M. O. Stevens is now practically settled. When the case came up in the lower court about eight months ago, the judge threw it out and Mr. C. H. Simonds, attorney for Perkins, took exceptions to the Supreme Judicial Court. The case was called there last week and Simonds waived the exceptions, and the decision of the lower court that there was no case stands affirmed.

The first institute of the season by the Essex Agricultural society will be held at Georgetown on Thursday, Dec. 9th. In the forenoon the meeting will be addressed by Hon. James J. H. Gregory of Marblehead. Subject,—"Improvement of meadow and swamp lands." In the afternoon Hon. Asa T. Newhall, of Lynn, (Senator elect) will speak on vegetable culture.

John Frizzell, for being drunk and assaulting officer Torr and Miller, was fined ,$1 and costs for the former and held for the grand jury in the latter in the sum of $600.

One of our town officials, who wanted to be a farmer, hired a small piece of land in the rear of a Main street residence. Now this small farm was well stocked with fruit trees full of fruit, and this fact soon became as well known to the boys who passed by on their way to school as it was to the town official. Both watched the orchard with a great deal of interest and the boys commenced to take their share of the fruit before it was ripe, and then the owner's share after it was ripe. That was the way it continued all summer and into the fall, till our t. o. could figure up his only return for six dollars invested in an orchard was about a peck of wind-fall apples which came from a neighbor's tree and fell his side of the fence. Now he wants to join the West Peabody Farmer's Club to relate his experience this winter.

George Stevens has made some changes in his store the past week of convenience to the public as well as to himself. He has put a fine show window, enclosed in a glass casing, at the side next to Warren Trask's, and devoted his other windows to the display of fruit. His stock of fruit is also kept in the centre of the store, more convenient for access by the ladies, who are not compelled to come to the Foster street entrance, where the cigars and tobacco are sold. These improvements have been needed for some time and make his store still more popular with the ladies. He always keeps the freshest and best fruit and confectionery, and invites all our readers to continue their patronage, which he will endeavor to deserve.

The following is the vote for Senator in the 5th District, with the exception of Wenham:

The cases of Welch and Scully, charged with rioting in the superior court, did not come up this term. Last Saturday Patrick Crowley, who murdered his wife on Memorial day, plead guilty to manslaughter and was sentenced to five years in state prison, one day solitary confinement. Patrick McNamara who bit off a portion of Tom Skidd's lip, on Memorial day, was sentenced to the House of Correction for six months. Ephraim Provo, driver of S. B. Winn's beer team, was fined $350 and costs amounting to $397.43.

The sheriff of Essex county and his deputies united, on Wednesday, in presenting one of their number, the popular Capt. S. A. Johnson of Salem, who was recently married, with an elegant silver tea service of six pieces with salver. The pieces are gold lined, satin finish, elegantly chased and engraved, and can be seen in Daniel Low's window. When our venerable high sheriff should see fit to retire there is no one more competent to take his place than Mr. S. A. Johnson.

Two Peabody ladies came out of Frank Cousins' dry goods store on Essex street Saturday afternoon, when the crowd in the vicinity of the Bee Hive mistook one of them for Mrs. Cleveland and took off their hats and cheered. This was a very natural mistake, because if Mrs. Cleveland came to Salem, the first place Mrs. Endicott would take her to do her shopping would be the Bee Hive.

President Cleveland and his lovely young wife visited Boston on Monday. We regret we were unable to accept the very cordial invitation extended us to breakfast with them at the Vendome. The President will have to wait till we visit Washington, but while he is waiting he might send us a commission as post master or something of that kind to keep our spirits up.

Mrs. Dick, the medium who has been stopping in town of late, claims she has received a communication from the spirit world in which she has been told that in Europe there is a secret organization who are sworn with great oaths to destroy this country, and that the great fires in Farmington and Belfast, Me., originated from that source and are only a beginning of many to follow.

The 21st assembly of Lieut. Col. Henry Merrit Camp No. 8, sons of Veterans, was held in Creamer Hall, Salem, last evening. There was somewhere about forty couples formed the Grand March and circle. They intend running dances every two weeks, and they extend a cordial invitation to all to come and help them, and they will do all in their power to make it pleasant and agreeable.

ARTICLE 47.

WILLIAM G. WEBBER & CO.,

ESSEX & WASHINGTON STREETS.

Keeping pace with Dry Goods fluctuations requires not only boldness of operations but fine calculation. In a healthy business like ours large shipments are constantly arriving to be quickly disposed of. Fashions changing and prices depreciating has driven us to the expedient of Quick Sales and Small Margins for self production. Still, with proper management, even this system is profitable, which we delight in giving our patrons the benefit of it. It has now become with us an established fact, and we mean to stick to it. ARTICLE 47 means Forty-seven articles, each a distinct Bargain for this week, commencing to-day.

ARTICLE 1.

Commencing with

SILKS AND PLUSHES.

Article 1. A regular quality of Black Silk at 75 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 2.

A regular $1,25 Black Rhadame for $1.00 per yard.

ARTICLE 3.

The balance of a lot of Cheney's American Silks in good colors at 75 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 4.

A beautiful quality Faille Francais, the new materials for ladies black silk costumes, at $1.25 per yard.

ARTICLE 5.

A full line of colors, beautiful shades of Faille Erancais at $1.50 per yard, nothing that approaches them elsewhere in the city.

ARTICLE 6.

A beautiful quality 24-inch Black Satin Rhadame at $1.50 per yard.

ARTICLE 7.

Commences with

BLACK GOODS.

We offer you makes that are fashionable and from the best houses in the world. Article 7 is a lot of Black Cashmeres, very fine 40 inches wide, at 50 cents per yard. We venture to say that you cannot match the quality to-day at the price in another store in New England — yet possibly you might.

ARTICLE 8.

10 pieces Black Sebastopool Cloths at 87 1-2 cents per yard, regular price everywhere $1.00.

ARTICLE 9.

A Heavy Camels Hair Diagonal, wide width, 75 cents, now 50 cents for this sale.

ARTICLE 10.

Black Cashmere (Cloth finish) 46 inches wide 75 cents; should be $1.00. Our man in Black goods says he can get a dollar for it. We don't want him to; 75 cents is the price.

ARTICLE 11.

Black Tricot Clotes at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00. No one else gives such values for the prices.

ARTICLE 12.

A score of fancy weaves in Black Dress Goods, a direct importation, the very choicest in the market, 75 cents, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

ARTICLE 13.

A lot of Black Flannels, 36 inches wide, fine quallty, worth 50 cents, price 25 cents. A lot one year ago just like them lasted only two days.

ARTICLE 14.

Commences with

COLORED DRESS GOODS.

Article 14. 100 pieces Pin Check Tricotines at 50 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 15.

20 pieces Sebastopool Cloth, beautiful shades, late received, ordered last spring, 87 1-2 cents per yard.

ARTICLE 16.

20 pieces Homespun suitings, wide and heavy, at 37 1-2 cents per yard, better than the lot offered last week at this price.

ARTICLE 17.

Beautiful Combination Dresses for $10.00 and $12.50 a pattern.

ARTICLE 18.

FLANNELS FROM AUCTION.

Flannels from 6 1-4 cents to 50 cents per yard, bought at auction cheap, as the cheapest goods, as the best, come and see them.

ARTICLE 19.

BLANKETS.

Real California Blankets, $6.50 up to $14, and Blankets down as low as 95 cents a pair. We sell more comforters than all the rest of the stores in Salem combined, so the manufacturers say.

ARTICLE 20.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

If you have shopped in Salem the past year we know you have bought your Handkerchiefs of us.

See other papers for balance of enumeration. Each and every article of the 47 is meant to be sufficiently corroborative of our system, viz: QUICK SALES AND SMALL PROFITS.

OVER WORKED Women

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.

A large treatise on Diseases of Women, profusely illustrated with colored plates and numerous wood-cuts, sent for 10 cents in stamps. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Frederick Douglass and his white wife are a great success socially in London.

Forty-two new ice factories have been started in the south during the past nine months.

Miss Hester Clarke, of Marion, Ala., says if she lives to see Christmas she will be 123 years old.

Rosa Bonheur has received a wild mustang as the latest addition to her Fontainebleau menagerie.

P. T. Barnum is to give a new schoolhouse, built on new plans, to the town of Bridgeport, Conn.

The Harlan family will hold a reunion next year on the 200th anniversary of their establishment in America.

President Cleveland, it is said, usually wears a flower on his coat lapel now, which he never did before he was married.

A professional beggar shipped $76 in nickels, dimes and quarters from Sioux Falls, D. T., to her husband in Minneapolis.

Philadelphia housekeepers, tired of vain efforts to get good servants, are now experimenting with colored help from the south.

The Austrian government thinks of introducing the tricycle into its postal service, and experiments to that effect are now being made.

George H. Boughton, the artist, has gone to the Hebrides, and there, as he writes, "I hope to get the last particle of London soot blown clean out of me."

A hospital has been erected at Baldwinville, Mass., and dedicated to the treatment of epileptic children. It is the only institution of the kind in the world.

An Unprecedented Accident.

One would have thought it impossible that there should be an unprecedented accident; but it is said that the catastrophe on Loch Fyne, by which 7 persons lost their lives recently, had never occurred before. It has been the custom of the bailies of Glasgow to attend the annual "monster blasts" in the great Crarae quarries on that loch, and this year the custom was observed. Seven tons of powder were fired at once, dislodging, it is believed, some 80,000 tons of granite, and after the stone had fallen the visitors strolled into the quarries to see the result.

Some 300 ladies and gentlemen were standing about talking, when one after another was observed to fall apparently dead, till nearly a hundred bodies were stretched on the stone. They were at once carried out by the quarrymen; but it was found that 7 were dead, and that 30 more were more or less injured, a few severely. The visitors had been asphyxiated by the sulphurous vapor caused by the blast, the shortest among them feeling it first and most severely. One witness, who fainted but recovered, testified that the sensation was "rather pleasant than painful." No blame attaches to any one, the vapor having been retained longer than usual by the horseshoe shape of the quarry, which stops the breeze on three sides.—London Spectator.

Property That Goes Cheap.

"You don't catch me paying full price for furniture and carpets," observed a thin man, who wore crape on his hat, as he stood in with a crowd at a down-town resort in Chicago, last evening. "I've got a better thing, and as my house is nearly all furnished I don't mind giving the scheme away. Perhaps you have noticed that every now and then a murder or a suicide occurs in a hotel here. Well, that's just my persimmons. Such things are more dreadful to the average hotel keeper than the day of judgement. The room where the tragedy occured is always ripped up immediately, and the carpet, furniture, bedding and everything carted out and new stuff put in. I have just kept track of these sad occurrences, and by presenting myself at the office early I have made a low bid and taken the property at my own figure. What's a few spots on things when you can furnish your house elegantly for nothing almost? There's only one thing that I need now, and I can get along without that, of course, but still I would like to have it. I have a parlor where a murder was committed, a dining room where a man shot himself, and three suicide bedrooms, one of them a cut-throat, but I have no library. If some gentlemen will kindly spoil a hotel reading room for me I'll be pretty well fixed."—Chicago Herald.

Largest Woman in the World.

Winnie Johnson, who is on exhibition in Cincinnati, is probably the largest woman in the world. She is five feet eight and a half inches in height, measures three feet around the upper arm, four feet five inches around the thigh, eight feet nine inches around the bust, and is said to weigh 733 pounds. Winnie is a black woman.

Bitten by a Cottonmouth.

Rosa Fenton, an Arkansas girl, was bitten in the forefinger by a cottonmouth snake. She shook off the serpent, ran to the wood shed, seized an ax, chopped off the finger, tied her handkerchief tight around her wrist, and, telling her mother to pour whisky down her throat, fainted. She is all right now.

Mrs. Mark Hopkins.

The wealthiest woman in California is Mrs. Mark Hopkins, the widow of one of the four original founders of the Central Pacific railroad. Her fortune is estimated at $40,000,000. She divides her time between San Francisco and Great Barrington, Mass.—New York Graphic.

Broke Up the Party.

A citizen of Holyoke, Mass., was drinking at a bar the other day with three companions, when his wife came in, joined the drinkers, and ordered drinks for all hands. It is said that no more effectual way of breaking up a drinking party was ever known in that section.

A Cool-Headed Girl.

Recently a New York girl of 13, who had taken lessons in "First Aid to the Injured," was in Fallsburg, N. Y., when a boy was thrown from a wagon and his leg broken. She at once put her knowledge into use, set the leg, and he is recovering fast.—New York Sun.

Delayed by Fallen Leaves.

Railroad trains running through woods are more or less delayed at this season of the year by leaves that are drawn to the track by the suction of the trains. They are ground under the wheels, and the moisture thus pressed out makes the rails slippery.

The New Certificates.

The Harrisburg (Pa.) Independent notes one advantage in the new silver dollar certificates: "They will enable liberal people to drop a dollar into a church contribution plate or box without attracting attention by the ring of its fall."

Mr. Gladstone has but three fingers on the left hand, the fore finger being gone.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."

CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

PETER RESTORED.

DR. JOHN HALL'S NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VII of the International Series for Sunday, Nov. 14—Golden Text, "He Saith Unto Him, Feed My Lambs," John xxi, 15—Lesson Text, John xxi, 4-19

The pupils are to be reminded of the facts going before this lesson on two lines: (1) Christ's resurrection and appearance twice to the whole company of the disciples (v. xiv). It may be said: How did they fail to recognize him at once? The answer is twofold. In the resurrection "we shall be changed," though the same individuals. Jesus was the type of our resurrection. And secondly, Jesus was able to make himself known or to remain unknown, as to the disciples on the way to Emmaus, as he pleased. For his own reasons he sometimes left them to find him out by what he said and did. In a sense it is so still with disciples. Jesus is providing for, or teaching, or even chastening them, and they do not at first recognize him.

(2) The previous career and character of Peter need to be recalled. Probably the oldest of the little company, he was the most prompt and forward. He was notably a man of impulses, not waiting to raise and settle questions of principle, but acting on the "spur of the moment." This led him, as it will lead any one, into mistakes. He had professed undying attachment to Christ (Matt. xxvi, 35), and then denied him thrice. That very morning he was as truly penitent as he had been inexcusably self-confident, and no doubt he had many a time recalled his sin and shame, and desired an opportunity to confess to Christ and get his forgiveness. But he was not alone with him. How the message, "tell my disciples and Peter," must have melted his heart! These facts we must remember if we would secure a connected view of the truth set out in our present lesson. A group of disciples had been fishing all night on the lake in vain. Doubtful of what was to come and needing to secure bread, Peter had gone back to his calling.

V. 4. Morning came; they were nearing the shore. A man stood there, but the disciples did not recognize him. This was doubtless part of his plan. (See Luke xxiv, 16.) Yet his language must have roused their attention as he says, "Children," etc. Are there any Christians hard pressed for means to live? How many do suffer thus! Jesus is not unmindful of them. Many would make better way if they listened for his voice and cast the net at his bidding. "No;" they have caught nothing.

V. 6. It is said that fish can be seen in numbers in the lake at times. His words then, "Cast the net," etc., would not seem so strange to them. They did so, and their net was so filled with fish as to make it too heavy to be lifted into the boat: it was drawn ashore (v. 11.)

Specially devoted to Jesus and quick with the instinct of affection, John (v. 7) whispers to Peter—one can fancy with mingled awe and joy—"It is the Lord." Ah! here is an opportunity to show that he is no longer recreant, that the Lord is dear to him beyond expression. When he hears this he snatches his fisher's coat (he was probably in partial clothing, as men prepared for such work), and flings himself into the water. It was an impulse again, but on the good side—far better than the blow with the sword at the man's ear (John xviii, 10). He meant to welcome Jesus, to show his joy and love.

V. 8. Meantime their little boat—the one they were all in, being only about 100 yards from land (a cubit is roughly about eighteen inches), so that the voice and directions from the shore could be well heard—had neared the land. ("A little ship" is misleading; it is "the little ship.") They who were in the boat, failing to get the net on deck, dragged it to land. Again the care of Jesus — miraculous, undoubtedly—provides for them.

V. 9. There is a fire of coals and "fish on it" being prepared for eating, and bread. He who fed the 5,000 is the same in power and resources for the little company.

V. 10. The Master tells them to bring of the fish which they had caught. He and they are to rejoice together through all their future over the souls gathered into the gospel net, some of them directly by him, some through their agency under his direction.

V. 11. Simon Peter on the land already obeys, "went up and drew the net to land." The contents are described, and it is noted that rich as was the "take," the net bore the strain and was not broken. The number is mentioned, probably to explain the wonder of the net not breaking.

V. 12. The sympathy of Jesus with the disciples and his treatment of them as brethren are now seen. He says, "Come and break your fast" (Revision). They all had the firm conviction that it was their Master. He spake with authority, mingled no doubt with gentleness; yet none had courage to call for a direct avowal. Then he

(V. 13) comes and gives them—helps them to—bread—they had none of this—and fish likewise. Of his identity they had no doubt. This is, the evangelist says

(V. 14), "the third time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples." (Appearances to individuals are omitted in the count.) See the other two cases—one where Thomas was absent, the other eight days after, when he was present (last lesson). Up till now Jesus has treated them all alike in the interview. Now he deals with Peter just as we saw him deal with Thomas. He forgets nothing that is to be remembered for his people's good. He perfectly adapts the lessons to the nature of the learner. So after they had broken their fast, Jesus

(V. 15) puts a question to Peter, which must have brought up many a sad thought. But it is often for our good to have our past errors and sins recalled. "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" He had conveyed as much as this when he said, "Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I." Then he was self-confident, impulsive and self-conscious. Now he is not so. He is penitent. He remembers his folly and does not repeat it. He can truly say that he does love his Master, but he makes no comparison between himself and them. "Thou knowest that I love thee." Then the Master gives the command. "Feed my lambs." "Thou didst wander from the fold; thou hast been brought back. Remember the lesson and labor for the strayed and wandering." Read his epistles and you will see that he did not forget this direction.

V. 16. Again the Master puts the question, but dropping any reference to the objectionable element of comparison; again he gets an affirmative reply, but Peter using again a different word for "love" from Christ's. The direction is now given, "Feed my sheep." How he remembered this you may see by studying I Peter v, 2, 4. This figure Peter could well understand. He remembered the discourse of John x, in which Jesus said, "the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Perhaps our Lord spoke to the heart of Peter thus: "You are to be an under shepherd; you may after all have it laid on you to be like me and lay down your life. That may come to you in stern necessity which in a moment of impulse you volunteered." This view is rather favored by vs. 18, 19, and falls in with the idea that our Lord was not giving any special power to Peter as to the future, but teaching him in view of the guilty past.

V. 17. That the sin of Peter in denying shaped the form of this dealing with him is clear from this, "Peter was grieved * * * third time," and he made his reply emphatic and full of feeling, "Lord, thou knowest all things" (the way our Lord was teaching him now showed that); "thou knowest that I love thee." The commission is repeated, "Feed my sheep." Be a shepherd to them; warn them; love them. Peter was so. No one gives more faithful cautions against temptations.

Vs. 18, 19 are entirely in the line of the view given. They make a gentle, kindly intimation of that martyrdom which Peter volunteered prematurely, but which the Master sent later, in the right time, and one can fancy Peter saying, "After all I am glad I shall have to die for one so noble and so forgiving."

The teacher will show how fit this lesson was at this point. The apostles were to be fishers of men. But of themselves they could catch none. Under Christ's orders the net will be full, and it will not be broken. In the supper of the Lamb the joint fruit of Christ's and his fellow laborers' toils will be gathered together. To Peter the lesson was specially fit, in view of the past. Self-confidence was his snare. Christ twice uses a word for "lovest" stronger than Peter's own word. "Do you really love me as a friend, or is it only talk, as before?" So Peter appeals to our Lord's omniscience. Then the hint comes that in loving and following Christ, Peter shall have Christ's experience and really carry out all that he had volunteered, then from his own over-confidence and pride, but at last under the impulse of genuine consecration to Jesus, his Lord. The words do not give Peter special and peculiar powers for the future, but are meant to recall and save him from special temptations into which he had fallen already.—Sunday School World.

A DAILY CARRIAGE FAIR.

The Buckboard, the Volante and the Drosky in Central Park.

Central park has got to be a sort of daily carriage fair. Any afternoon that you choose to spend along the drive you will find samples of about all the vehicles known to the civilized world displayed upon the roadway. The buckboard has arrived. It was brought from Bar Harbor, where it is the native turnout, and people are not yet so familiar with it as to cease to laugh when it goes sagging and jouncing by. The volante, a vehicle generally supposed to be indigenous to Cuba, and to be seen nowhere else, is represented on the drive every fair afternoon. It belongs to a Cuban cigar manufacturer in William street.

The drosky turned up. It held a very splendid young swell whom no one recognized, and made a decided stir. The appearance of the drosky was preceded by that of the Russian sleigh, which made its appearance on our streets last winter, much to the glory of the irreverent small boy. English coaches are now very common on our drives. The most conspicuous is probably the real London hansom, imported by Freddy Gebhard's sister, Mrs. Fred Neilson. You are not a real swell if you do not own at least one English built turnout.

French carriages are also common. They are lighter than the English, though not as light as ours, but are more elegantly glazed, upholstered and finished than either. The English coaches are absurdly heavy. They seem built, like the "Wonderful One Horse Chaise," to last forever. When a London built family coach goes by, with the harness chains clanging, you have only to shut your eyes to believe that you hear a steam fire engine answering a third call. Since fashion began to return to town I have every day noticed several carriages whose inmates were only a woman servant and a pet dog. The dogs seem to enjoy their airing, but the servants always look awfully bored.—Alfred Trumble in New York News.

WOLF HUNTING IN AUSTRIA.

Chased by Whole Squadrons of Infuriated Brutes—Exciting Sport.

One generally waits to begin these hunts till the season is sufficiently advanced to render the animals infuriated by hunger and ready for anything. We used to start at 10 or 11 o'clock in the night, choosing a moonlit evening. Four of our swiftest horses were put to the sleigh whose management was confided to a prudent and steady old coachman who had been in my husband's service for ten years. All depends on the driver in these expeditions, for if he loses his head, and allows the frightened horses to run away during the chase, one stands a very good chance of being thrown off the low sleigh and devoured by the hungry animals one seeks to kill. A bundle of straw is tied behind the sleigh and allowed to drag in the snow, and you take with you a young pig tied in a strong canvas bag. You have occasionally to pinch the poor brute so that his squeaking may attract the attention of the wolves and make them pursue you in the hope of a hearty supper.

When once arrived on the white, smooth plain, the horses are started off at a gallop and you soon see whole squadrons of wolves making for you at full speed. Their fiery eyes glare in the semi-darkness like burning coals, and their low growling bay is enough to unsettle the courage of all novices. As soon as they are near enough you shoot them with ball cartridges, and it is not unusual to kill from 100 to 300 animals in one night. There is no excitement comparable to this, as one's life is continually hanging on a thread and the swiftness of the motion coupled with the delight of success when one sees the ugly beasts fall beneath the shots is enough to stir the tamest blood.—Vienna Cor. New York Tribune.

Elected "Coloneless."

At the recent reunion of the One Hundred and Eleventh Ohio Volunteer infantry at Weston, O., Mrs. Kate B. Sherwood of Toledo was elected "coloneless" of the regiment, the object being to honor the lady for her great devotion to the soldier cause. Mrs. Sherwood was the founder of the woman's relief corps, and the regiment of which she is "coloneless" was commanded by her husband during the war.—Kansas City Times.

The Electric Light Millionaire.

Charles F. Brush owns one of the largest and costliest stone residences in this country. He is determined that the walk leading through his grounds from the street to his front door shall describe a geometrical curve, and he has spent some hours of his busy days in instructing his workmen how to lay it, often getting down on his hands and knees in order to draw the line.—Harper's Weekly.

A Historical Cane.

Mrs. McNeil Potter has presented the New Hampshire Historical society with a cane made from a black walnut tree that in 1822 was utilized in the construction of a fort on Saginaw river, Michigan. The log remained undisturbed for sixty-four years.—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. L. D. Vinson, Cahier D. & I. R. R., has tried and endorses Red Star Cough Care.

The trees are almost leafless!

SPARKS.

At 11.45 o'clock last Friday night, as officers Flynn and Reagan were passing down Caller street, their attention was attracted to the unusually bright light in the upper part of the building owned by George Holman and occupied by John Boyle & Co. as a machine shop and Benjamin McKeen as a carpenter and woodworking shop. Satisfying themselves that there was a fire in progress, Flynn started for box 18 and blew his whistle to attract the attention of officer Torr who obtained the box key and turned in the alarm. Flynn then returned to the assistance of Reagan who had got into the building and found that the fire was in the part occupied by McKeen and consisted of two bags of cotton waste with some loose lumber. This was thrown into the street and all danger inside the building over when the department arrived. Hose 4 laid a line and wet down the burning waste. The fire was evidently incendiary.

Box 19 was pulled in at 3.48 Sunday morning, for what officers George Miller and Torr thought was a fire in Brown's stiffening factory on Tremont street, but which turned out to be the paste shop of Edward Cody on Irving street, Salem. Steamer 1, H. & L. 1, Hose 1, 3 and 4 responded, and were on the ground within ten minutes from the first stroke of the bell, but owing to there being no hydrant chucks on hand, could do nothing to save the building. The alarm was given in Salem just as the last strokes of the third round was being struck in Peabody, but it was fully ten minutes after the Peabody apparatus arrived before any part of the Salem department put in an appearance, and then the water service was so poor that a hydrant stream could not be put on the fire until the arrival of the steamers. The roof and walls of the shop fell in before any water was put on, but the stable and house were saved, the stable badly burned, however. Had there been a hydrant chuck that could be got at, the shop could have been saved by the Peabody department. Had it been dry the buildings of the Poor estate would have been in serious danger, as the sparks were falling on there in perfect showers. Hose 3 of Peabody got the first water by attaching to the chuck set by Hose 6 of Salem, and transferred to a steamer as soon as one arrived. The alarm worked perfectly in both of the above cases and calls out the firemen fully as well as the old system when all the bells and whistles in town joined in the racket. The loss is estimated at $4000, with an insurance of $3500. This place was burned Sunday morning, Jan. 31, at 2.35 o'clock. Both of these fires are supposed to be of incendiary origin. At one time it looked as though the whole corner of the street would go, but the wind blowing a gale from the southeast carried the flames away. The citizens of that section of Salem should petition for annexation to Peabody, or at least have some hydrants set for the Peabody department, as this is the fourth instance where this department has arrived at the scene in advance of the Salem firemen. There has been some criticism in regard to the ringing in an alarm for this fire, in Peabody, but it is the opinion of the majority that the officers did just the right thing, as the way the sparks flew Peabody property was endangered.

An incipient blaze in the coal office of Warren & Co., in Allen's block, was extinguished about 5.45 o'clock Saturday evening, by J. B. Reith of Steamer 2. A chimney had been burned out during the afternoon, and had heated a receiver in the office and this set fire to a number of boxes of stationery. Mr. Reith threw the burning boxes into the street.

The Relief Association will run a skating and dancing party in the rink on Thanksgiving eve, Wednesday, Nov. 24th. Tickets 25 cents, for sale by the members of the association.

The regular meeting of the Board of Engineers was held last Wednesday evening, when a large number of bills were approved. It was voted not to pay for horses used on the hose carriages unless in answering an alarm from some fire alarm box, or from the steamer house bell. This is a move to do away with the expense of running out the apparatus when the alarm strikes from causes other than fire, and it is a good move. Edward W. Larrabee was approbated as a member of Hose 5, in place of Walter Curtis, resigned. Charles F. McCarthy was approbated to Hose 3, in place of John F. Mahoney, resigned. Roswell Richardson was approbated to Hook & Ladder 1, in place of Frank D. Heylingberg, resigned. It was voted that each driver be allowed one Sunday off in each month, provided the substitute driver could be hired for $1.50 per day.

At the last meeting of Steamer 2 W. C. Munroe was elected an honorary member of the company.

At the regular meeting of Hose Company No. 5, held last week, Walter Curtis resigned as foreman, after a service of ten years in that position. Charles A. Wiggin was elected foreman of the company for the balance of the year.

The fire bug has been pretty busy this week in Peabody and Salem, confining his operations to Salem principally, however. Tuesday morning at 1.40 o'clock an alarm was given in Salem for a fire in the rear of the Salem Hospital on Liberty street, and as the flames spread rapidly a second alarm was given, calling out the companies in wards 3, 4 and 6, who soon arrived on the spot and laid lines of hose and were just getting water through when a third alarm was given, this time for a fire in the tannery and currying shop, owned by William P. Martin and occupied by William Reardon & Co. of Peabody, as a currying shop, situated on Dean street, Carletonville. Chief Hadley gave orders to the last three companies to pack up and get to the new fire as quickly as possible. He also telephoned to Chief Buxton of Peabody and Chief Goodhue of Beverly for assistance. Chief Buxton happened to answer the telephone bell himself and soon had the bell on the Steamer house ringing, this being the alarm for a fire in West Peabody or a call from out of town, and in less than two minutes Steamer 1 and Hose 1, with about 25 men was on the road and reported for duty in about ten minutes. The H. & L. truck was also sent for and arrived promptly, doing good service. The Steamer was set at the corner of Dean and Federal streets and soon had two powerful streams of water on the flaming structure. The boys fought their way into the face of the fire and soon had the pleasure of seeing it under control. When the Peabody firemen arrived there was only one stream on the blaze but the fire on Liberty street having been gotten under control the apparatus began work on the second fire, which under the torrents of water which were pouring into it, soon succumbed. The Peabody firemen were ordered to pack up after about an hour's work, and repaired to the bakery of John Hathaway, where a substantial collation was furnished. Mr. Frank Lord, at the corner of Dean and Federal streets, comes in for a share of the gratitude of the firemen for the timely refreshments furnished. It was 5 o'clock when the Peabody apparatus arrived home. The loss by the two fires is estimated at about $15,000. O. B. Chadwick & Co. had a policy placed through a Salem agency for $4000 on the Reardon place, $1000 of which was on machinery and $3000 on stock. Both fires are thought to be of incendiary origin, the Reardon fire being set in three places. William Reardon was burned out on Railroad Avenue, this town, on the morning of March 15 and met with considerable loss. The Beverly steamer arrived just as the Peabody department packed up.

The total amount of insurance on the shop of Edward Cody, burned Sunday morning, amounts to $7850, of which $7000 was on the shop and $850 on the barn.

The loss on the Liberty street fires amounted to $4500, with an insurance of $1500.

The insurance on the Martin fire was about $1300 on buildings, stock and machinery.

The new Beverly Farms H. & L. truck passed through town Tuesday forenoon, coming from the works of Pollard & Parker in Woburn.

Hose 1 reported to box 19 on Sunday morning in just 4 1-2 minutes from the pulling of the box. Distance, one mile.

Cards of thanks are published this week, by Steamers 1 and 2, on account of the late parade.

The regular meeting of the directors of the Relief Association will be held Thursday evening. z

Most of our readers are aware that the market is flooded with cheap watches as well as cheap jewelry and that unreliable dealers make every effort to work off this trash at the same price that is asked for genuine, staple goods. The most reliable and best known house in Essex County is Daniel Low's, corner of Washington and Essex streets, Salem. Mr. Low's reputation for honesty was made years ago, and the public who are in search of a watch or anything in his line will find everything just as he represents it. He has the largest line of watches to select from, and being a large buyer his price for extra quality of watches is no more than certain dealers ask for an inferior article. Call and see him and you will be more than satisfied.

Mrs. F. E. Varney, the New York Milliner, at 49 Market street, Lynn, is offering splendid inducements to Peabody people to come and see her style of work. She will make no charge for trimming for the next two weeks, and furthermore purchasers to the amount of $1.50 and over will have their fare paid from Peabody. We shall be surprised if her cozy little store is not filled during this time with her friends and customers. It will pay our readers to give her a call.

MUSICAL NOTES.

At St. John's church, during the "Mission" of two weeks to commence Sunday, Nov. 14, some special music will be rendered by the choir and include some choice selections, under the direction of Charles A. Clark, the organist and director. Next Sunday, at Vespers, Alois F. Lejeal's Vespers will be sung, and Miss Katie F. Linehan will sing Dudley Buck's Ave Maria. Sunday, Nov. 21, Mr. Thomas McGrath will sing "Pro peccatis" from the Stabat Mater. Nov. 28th, at Vespers, the closing service of the Mission, Lejeal's Vespers will be sung and Mrs. J. P. Fernald and the chorus choir will render the "Inflammatus" from Rossini's Stabat Mater.

Arrangements are being made by the Oxford League, connected with the Methodist church, to give a concert in their newly finished auditorium on the week following the re-dedication of the church. Several well-known local vocalists have volunteered their services, and it is expected that considerable financial assistance will be rendered by the entertainment.

Mrs. J. P. Fernald and the Hawthorne Male Quartette of Boston, together with a violinist and reader, give a concert in Dedham to-morrow evening. Mrs. Fernald also sings Thanksgiving night at Sacarrappa, Me., with the Rivals Concert Co.

The Salem Symphony Club, under the direction of F. Clayton Record, have begun rehearsals for the season. Mr. Joshua Phippen, Jr., will be president and Arthur R. Stone the treasurer of the organization.

We were led into an error in a statement in this column that the appearance of Miss Louise Elliot, last week, at Phippen's recital, was her first appearance in Salem. She sang in a recital with Mr. Charles A. Clark, in 1882, in that city, at which Mrs. George Upton also assisted.

R. L. Reinewald, leader of the New Eighth Regiment Band, has signed a contract with the directors of the Naumkeag Street Railroad for twelve weeks of continuous music at the Willows next season.

Mr. Frank O. Ditson, son of Oliver Ditson, the well-known music publisher, died last Wednesday, aged 37. He was with his father in the music business and was well known in society and musical circles.

The Musical Record (Boston, $1 a year) for November has for music, "Jack and Joe," words by Hunter MacCulloch, music by Carl Reinecke; "Proposal Apropos," words by MacCulloch, music by Fr. Curschman; "Florence Waltz," by Florence Norvell; "The Last Rose of Summer," arranged for the banjo by Curtiss; "Gallup," by L. O. Emerson; and "My Rest is in Heaven," words by Henry F. Lute, music by J. H. T.

Reinewald's new orchestra will play for the excursion and dance at the Danvers Skating Rink Friday evening, and at the opening of the Peabody Rink for regular sessions Saturday evening.

Miss Harford, of Boston, was the contralto of the Unitarian choir last Sunday; she also sang at the Barton Square church, Salem. Dr. A. M. Dudley sang tenor in the place of Mr. Andrew Fitz, who has been confined to the house for several weeks. Miss Harford, we learn, is a pupil of Charles R. Adams.

A musical entertainment, for the benefit of the W. C. T. U., will be given in the vestry of the South church next Wednesday evening, Nov. 17. Admission 20 cts. for adults, 10 cts. for children. The programme is composed of local talent, including singing by Mrs. S. P. Chase, piano and violin playing by Masters Walker and Melcher, singing by the Band of Hope under charge of Mrs. G. A. Phinney. In addition to the musical exercises, there will be readings by Miss Lina McPherson, and recitations by the children. Doors open at 7; to commence at 7.30.

The praise servrces, which were so successful at the Universalist church last year, will be resumed next Sunday evening in the vestry of that church, beginning at 7 o'clock. These services will be varied in character from week to week; the service next Sunday will be doctrinal.

John Doyle, of Lynn, has been engaged as Clarionet soloist in the new Eighth Regiment Band, under the direction of R. L. Reinewald.

The ladies of this town will not forget the art department in the store of W. G. Webber Co., or as to that matter, any of the departments in this popular store. The recent opening of the art department gave to the public the finest and richest display ever attempted in Salem — and is only another triumph to the long list which this firm have achieved. The store is fairly beseiged with purchasers from morning till night. This could not happen if the goods and prices were not a great attraction.

Mr. Harry Evitts, the well-known conductor of the shifter, came near being fatally crushed between two cars at Salem last Thursday. As it was he was considerably injured.

THE DRAMA.

"Adonis" enters upon the second month of its engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre this week, with no abatement in the crowded state of the houses, or of the enthusiasm that nightly greets Mr. Dixey and the fun, beauties and novelties of the "fascinating burlesque nightmare." It is evident that "Adonis" could successfully stay all winter, would circumstances allow; but the time is rapidly approaching when Dixey must leave for other triumphs.

This is what Nym Crinkle says of Mrs. Langtry's Pauline in "Lady of Lyons," which holds the boards at the Boston Theatre this week. "When she dropped her head on Claude's shoulder last night and murmured, 'My own dear love,' a sympathetic sigh went up from the front seats." She is the romantic ideal in appearance, at least, of Bulwer's delicious rodomontade. Lakes of Como glisten in her bland eyes and her pearly brow stands like Chillon over Leman's waters. Alabaster lamps are swinging and music in the midst of roses exhales while she croons. Bongereau, Titian, Paul Veronese—where are you? This is the pictorial glimpse. Don't speak of acting, for it will not occur to you. It all acts itself."

We cannot too strongly urge upon our readers the necessity of subscribing for a family weekly newspaper of the first class—such, for instance, as the Independent, of New York. Were we obliged to select one publication for habitual and careful reading to the exclusion of all others, we should choose unhesitatingly The Independent. It is a newspaper, magazine and review, all in one. It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial, and a political paper combined. It has 32 folio pages and 21 departments. No matter what a person's religion, politics or profession may be, The Independent will prove a help, an instructor, an educator. Our readers can do no less than to send a postal card for a free specimen copy, or for thirty cents the paper will be sent a month, enabling one to judge of its merits more critically. Its yearly subscription is $3.00, or two years for $5.00. Address, The Independent, 251 Broadway, New York City.

The elegant new hall in the remodeled hotel building is opened to the public for the first time today, Mr. J. B. Thomas having kindly allowed the use of it to the ladies of the Baptist Society for a fair. The main hall is 38x43 feet and is finished in ash with tinted walls. It has a seating capacity about 200. There are two handsome brass chandeliers with six lights each. There are also two fair sized ante-rooms leading from the main hall. The hall is well adapted to small dancing or social parties. Across the hall is a large dining room 32x27 feet, lighted with a chandelier of eight burners, the whole is heated by steam. To-day the place had a gala day appearance, a piano graced one corner of the room and on the south side was a long table containing useful and fancy articles for the fair. In the center was a temporary stage where an old folks' concert will be given this evening. In the supper room are tables etc., arranged for the sale of ice cream and cake. In one of the small ante-rooms is a doll's hospital, arranged in wards, and dolls with broken heads and limbs are ready to be waited upon by the neatly dressed doll nurses. The fair will continue through to-morrow evening.

Last Thursday T. T. Riordan pleaded guilty, in the superior court in Lawrence, to maintaining a liquor nuisance, and sentence was deferred till the January term of the court.

ASTHMA.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of
DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

The Lynn District Methodist Sunday School Convention will be held in the St. Paul church at Lynn, Thursday morning at 10 30 o'clock. A delegation from the Methodist Society will attend.

The next session of the New England Conference will be held at Leominster, April 14th, Bishop Walden, presiding. The New Hampshire conference will meet at Nashua, April 28th, Bishop Harris, presiding.

The moonlight party of the Morocco Dressers Assembly at the Danvers rink last Friday night was very successful, being attended by about 300 from this town and a larger number from Danvers. A special train was run.

An agent of the Standard Cab Company was in town Friday. The company are talking of starting a line of two-wheeled cabs for Salem, Peabody and Beverly. They will run to all parts of the town, day or night, for 25 cents.

Prof. Foster, of Iowa, predicts a great storm period, extending from Dec. 4th to the 17th, during which time will occur some of the most destructive winter storms of recent years. He advises everybody to be prepared. Who is Prof. Foster?

The windows in the Methodist church are now all taken. Of the remaining two, one will be in memory of the late John Grant, given by his daughter, Mrs. Joseph N. Burbeck; and the other in memory of Mrs. Abel Proctor, will be given by her daughters.

The rink opened very successfully last Saturday evening, and the attendance was very large considering the stormy weather. Mr. Thomas will continue the parties twice a week during the season, but this will not interfere with letting the rink at any time.

A large drove of frightened cattle, belonging to J. B. Thomas, took possession of the front yard of the South church, Saturday, till it looked like a stock yard at Brighton. The drivers soon had them turned and headed toward Mr. Thomas' slaughter house.

The North Essex Odd Fellows' Mutual Benefit Association is in a weak condition, and a meeting of the directors is soon to be held to devise means to keep it in existence. The association is one of the oldest in the field, being nearly twenty years of age.—Lawrence Eagle.

Special Agent Bancroft of the United States labor bureau at Washington is in Salem and Peabody, and visits each manufacturer, making inquiries as to the cause of the existing labor troubles, the number of men employed, and as to whether they wish to hire any of their old help back.

In a letter to the Boston Herald, W. H. H. Murray strongly asserts that if a show of hands could be compelled the people would discover that two-thirds of the Congregational clergy of New England have not believed for the past ten years in the old-fashioned hell as a place of torment. Hands up, gentlemen!

The laugh is on a certain business man this week, who, in his hasty departure for Boston the other day, dropped a memorandum book which was replete with his experience in "bucket-shop" transactions. His friends never thought of such a thing. It didn't tell how many times he had been "hung up."

A large audience greeted the Women's Relief Corps at Grand Army Hall, last night. Mrs. M. O. Stevens read a paper on the reminiscences of a hospital nurse. There were piano solos by Mrs. Sadie Woodbury, singing by Mrs. W. H. Jacobs and Mr. Ed W. Merrill, and readings by Mr. G. N. Winslow.

The County Commissioners have determined not to build the truant school, to be located in Lynn, till spring. Perhaps the Legislature will repeal the act requiring the school this winter, in which case they would have no authority to build at all. They have bought 56 acres of M. A. T. Newhall's farm, however, for $5000. This does not include any buildings.

Mr. D. B. Lord and his men have been employed for the past two weeks at Brown's pond. The bank facing Peabody has been rebuilt, giving it the appearance of a reservoir. This, with other improvements, will prevent the pond overflowing the banks and assist in maintaining a large supply of water.

If you contemplate giving a friend a picture of yourself for the holidays we desire to warn you right away, because then you avoid the rush and your face bears the pleasant expression that is pleasing to yourself and friends. Make your engagements, therefore, at once with Huzzey, the leading Salem photographer.

By vote of the Directors of the Warren National Bank, the Institution will be closed to-morrow afternoon, in respect to the memory of Lewis Allen, its late president. A committee was chosen this morning, to prepare appropriate resolutions to his memory. They will report at a meeting of the Directors, to be held to-morrow morning.

Mr. C. F. Hathaway, the baker, has just returned from an extensive business and pleasure trip through the West. During his travels he has visited St. Paul and other large places in Minnesota, inspecting the flour-mills and wholesale bakeries. He went into the Northwest as far as Dakota, and returned through the coal and natural gas regions of Pennsylvania.

The mothers of this town should know where their daughters are after nightfall. There is more immorality going on in this town than you are aware of. There is a club-room in a prominent block, made notorious by the scandals about a former occupant, where young girls, scarcely in their teens, often frequent. It is known to the police as well as the names of some of those who frequent it. It is a lamentable state of affairs, but we have spoken plainly because mothers should be warned of dangers to which their daughters are exposed.

Poet's Corner.

The Funeral.

I was walking in Savannah, past a church
decayed and dim,
When there slowly through the window came a plaintive funeral hymn;
And a sympathy awakened, and a wonder quickly grew,
Till I found myself environed in a little negro pew.
Out at front a colored couple sat in sorrow,
nearly wild;
On the altar was a coffin, in the coffin was a child.
I could picture him when living—curly hair, protruding lip—
And had seen perhaps a thousand in my hurried southern trip.

But no baby ever rested in the soothing arms of death
That had fanned more flames of sorrow with his little fluttering breath;
And no funeral ever glistened with more sympathy profound
Than was in the chain of teardrops that enclasped those mourners round.

Rose a sad old colored preacher at the little wooden desk—
With a manner grandly awkward, with a countenance grotesque;
With simplicity and shrewdness on his
Ethiopian face;
With the ignorance and wisdom of a crushed,
undying race.

And he said: "Now don' be weepin' for dis pretty bit o' clay—
For de little boy who lived dere, he done gone an' run away!
He was doin' very finely, an' he 'preciate your love;
But his sure 'nuff Father want him in de large house up above.

"Now he didn' give you that baby, by a hundred thousan' mile!
He just think you need some sunshine, an'
He lend it for awhile!
An' he let you keep an' love it till your hearts was bigger grown;
An' dese silver tears you're sheddin's jest de interest on de loan.

"Here yer oder pretty chilrun!—don't be makin' it appear
Dat your love got sort 'o 'nopolized by dis little fellow here;
Don' pile up too much sorrow on deir little mental shelves,
So's to kind o' set 'em wonderin' if dey're no account demselves!

"Just you think, you poor deah mounahs, creepin' 'long o'er Sorrow's way,
What a blessed little picnic dis yere baby's got to-day!
Your good faders and good moders crowd de little fellow round
In the angel-tended garden of the Big Plantation Ground.

"An' dey ask him 'Was your feet sore?' an'
take off his little shoes,
An' dey wash him an' dey kiss him, an' dey say: 'Now what's de news?'
An' de Lawd done cut his tongue loose; den de little fellow say:
'All our folks down in de valley tries to keep de hebbenly way.'

"An his eyes dey brightly sparkle at de pretty things he view;
Den a tear come, and he whisper: 'But I want my parents too!'
But the Angel Chief Musician teach dat boy
a little song;
Says 'If only dey be fait'ful dey will soon be comin' 'long.'

"An he'll get an education that will proberbly be worth
Seberal times as much as any you could buy for him on earth;
He'll be in de Lawd's big schoolhouse, widout
no contempt or fear;
While dere's no end to de bad things might have happened to him here.

"So my pooah dejected mounahs, let your hearts wid Jesus rest,
An' don't go to critercisin' dat ar One w'at knows de best!
He have sent us many comforts—He have right to take away—
To de Lawd be praise an' glory now and ever!
Let us pray."

Arcadia.

'Mid loveliness of earth and sky,
Once roamed a little maid and I
In Arcady.

Enchantment deep the pensive eve
Can with her lights and shadows weave
In Arcady.

A wandering spirit led our feet
Thro' regions wild and dim and sweet,
In Arcady.

Silent we watched the West unfold
Its glowing gates of living gold
In Arcady.

Night kissed the eyes of dying day,
And still we kept our dewy way,
In Arcady.

Till timidly eve's silver star
Glimmered 'mid tremulous depths afar,
In Arcady,

As if in Paradise we strayed,
I and this little fairy maid,
Thro' Arcady.

Ah! why remember lost delights,
The golden eves and purple nights,
Of Arcady?

They shot thro, life a sacred gleam,
Then vanished like a heavenly dream,
From Arcady.

The heart, recalling happier years,
Looks backward thro' a mist of tears,
To Arcady.

Baby falls and bumps its head,
Baby bawls, they think it's dead,
Mamma gets St. Jacobs Oil,
Rubs the baby; stops turmoil.

MUSICAL NOTES.

A piano and song recital will be given in Academy Hall, Salem, by Charles A. Clark and Mrs. J. P. Fernald, Tuesday evening, Nov. 30. The programme will be equally divided between the two performers, and will consist of a varied selection of short numbers from the works of the best composers. It has been decided to place the tickets, including reserved seats, at the low popular price of 25 cents, and they can be obtained personally of the artists, or at the store of E. V. Emilio in Salem, or D. P. Grosvenor in Peabody. The hall seats but three hundred people and sufficient encouragement has been already given to assure the success of the recital. It will be advisable for those who desire to attend to obtain their tickets in advance, as it is probable that none will be for sale at the door.

By desire Mr. Joshua Phippen Jr., will repeat his recital from the works of Liszt next Monday afternoon, at 4.30, in the Academy Hall, Salem. There will be no vocalist, but there will be additions from some other composers to fill up the hour. The tickets have been placed at 25 cents.

Andrew Fitz has resigned as treasurer of the Salem Oratorio Society, and Charles W. Ward has been elected in his place.

Frank W. Stanley sang tenor, and Miss Anna Hubon, of the Universalist choir, sang contralto at the Unitarian church last Sunday.

The Handel and Haydn season in Boston, begins December 26, when "The Messiah" will be given. On Sunday, February 27, Bach's mass in B minor (selections) will be heard for the first time in this city, and Hiller's "Song of Victory" will have its second hearing, and on Easter Sunday, April 10, "The Creation" will be given. Season tickets to last year's subscribers will be ready Monday, Nov. 22. The public sale will open the day after.

An informal musicale was given at the Tremont school of music, last Thursday evening, by Mr. Charles A. Clark, pianist, and Mr. Edward O. Thorndike, baritone. A fine program was rendered and the musicale was in all respects a marked success.

The vesper service at St. John's church last Sunday was held in the evening, at 7 o'clock, instead of at 3 P. M. as usual. Lejeal's Vespers were rendered by the choir, in which solos were given by Miss Alice Ducey and Mr. Thomas F. Horrigan.

Miss Katie F. Linehan will officiate as organist at the evening services of St. John's church, this week, with one or two exceptions, when Mr. Clark will be present.

A children's choir is being organized at St. John's church to officiate at the children's mass at that church.

The cantata of "King Rene's Daughter," whice was so finely produced at Union Hall, in Boston, on the 5th inst., will be repeated on the 22d, at Music Hall, with Mrs. Jennie Patrick-Walker, Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, Miss Mary H. How, Mrs. J. B. Phipps, Mrs. N. C Bradford; pianists, Madame Dietrich Strong, Mrs. Minnie Wood-Merrill; violin soloist, Miss Helen F. Turner; Miss Baxter, accompanist. There will be a grand chorus of one hundred voices, and Mr. C. B. Kendall will direct the entertainment. Seats are on sale at Music Hall box office.

The Boston Sunday Times is a very readable paper. Its musical editor is careful and conscientious, and musical people will find much to interest them in the paper. Its society news is brisk and racy, and altogether it is a sheet which deserves all the success it is receiving.

Miss Roberts of the Mendelssohn Ladies' Quartette, sang contralto at the Barton Square church, Salem, last Sunday.

A chorus of over twenty voices, under the direction of Eri Littlefield, gave an Old Folks Concert in the hall of J. B. Thomas' new building, last Wednesday evening. Music was also furnished by the Peabody Orchestra.

Mrs. S. P. Chase, of the South church choir, will sing at the Musical entertainment to be given in the South church vestry this evening.

Miss Louise Elliot, who sang in Salem recently at Mr. Phippen's recital, sings next week as soloist in the Cecilia Club of Boston.

We are in receipt of the 3rd Volume of the District Directory of Salem, Danvers, Beverly, Marblehead, Peabody and Wenham, by Henry M. Meek, which is a handsomely printed and valuable directory. The number of Peabody names is 4,882. There is added a directory of Wenham and the names of non-residents, who live during the summer at the Willows. The work contains a fine portrait of Gen. H. K. Oliver, and views of the old landmarks of Salem and vicinity. To the former plans of the Boston places of amusement and Mechanic Hall has been added a plan of the new Academy Hall and the Town Hall in Peabody. The directory has been compiled with all the care of previous editions, and is sold for the low price of $2.00.

EXPOSE OF THAT PRETENDED PUBLIC INVESTIGATION OF THE QUALITIES OF THE BAKING POWDERS.

It is no new thing with the Royal Baking Powder Company to publish in the newspapers reading notice advertisements which have the appearance of emanating from the editor's pen

Its most recent effort is an article from the Albany Evening Journal giving a pretended investigation as if made by the Journal of the qualities of the baking powders. The following from a later issue of the same paper (August 27, 1886) so plainly stamps the whole thing as simply an advertising dodge of huge proportions that we think the public entitled to the benefit of the expose, and accordingly give it below:

"The Journal has printed analyses and reports of various baking powders as reading notices or advertisements. It has not undertaken to say of its own knowledge which is the best powder in the market. Consumers must decide for themselves."

This piece of ingenious advertising on the part of the Royal Baking Powder Company may have had its origin in the evident disappointment of that Company with its extravagant but fruitless advertising efforts to beguile the public into believing that the cream of tartar used in other baking powders contains a large percentage of tartrate of lime, when it is a fact and well known to the commercial world that all the refiners who supply this country with cream of tartar are, and have been for a long time, in a combination under an agreement between them to produce only strictly pure, or ninety-nine per cent., goods.

The cream of tartar used in Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is refined by a new process which frees it entirely from tartrate of lime and every impurity, and is obtained in the pure crystals and ground in our own factory; the bicarbonate of soda is prepared expressly for us; and to insure uniform and absolute purity of our baking powder all the ingredients are subjected to searching chemical analyses, and none used unless proved to be perfectly pure.

Appreciating the fact that consumers have a right to know what they are using as food, we have for many years made known to the public all the ingredients of our powder. Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour used as a preservative, and does not contain ammonia, alum, lime, acid phosphates, or any adulteration whatever.

Has the Royal Baking Powder Company, with its much advertising, ever informed the housekeepers of the country all that enters into the composition of its powder? Or has it ever published a word openly in defence of the use of ammonia in baking powder? Information on these points might enable the public to form an intelligent opinion in regard to the merits of this much mooted question of baking powder supremacy, and we would have no misgivings as to the result.

THANKSGIVING DAY will be on Thursday, Nov. 25, all over the United States, as will be seen by the following:

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT.

It has long been the custom of the people of the United States, on a day in each year especially set apart for that purpose by their Chief Executive, to acknowledge the goodness and mercy of God, and to invoke His continued care and protection. In observance of such custom, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November instant, to be observed and kept as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

On that day let all our people forego their accustomed employments and assemble in their usual places of worship to give thanks to the Ruler of the universe for our continued enjoyment of the blessings of a free government, for a renewal of business prosperity throughout our land, for the return which has rewarded the labor of those who till the soil and for our progress as a people in all that makes a nation great. And while we contemplate the infinite power of God in earthquake, flood and storm, let the grateful hearts of those who have been shielded from harm through His mercy be turned in sympathy and kindness toward those who have suffered through His visitations. Let us, also, in the midst of our thanksgiving, remember the poor and needy with cheerful gifts and alms so that our service may, by deeds of charity, be made acceptable in the sight of the Lord.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this first day of November, in the year of our Lord, 1886, and of the independence of the United States of America the 111th.

[SEAL] GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President,
T. F. BAYARD, Secretary of State.

TEXAS RELICS.

Our old townsman, Mr. William H. Pingree, who remembers us occasionally with Texas papers, seems to be enjoying himself in his far away home as the following from the Georgetown Advocate will show: The Texas curios which have been at our office the past week belong to Mr. John W. Pingree, and were sent him by his brother, William Henry, late of Peabody, Mass. They consist of a wolf skin which he took from the animal which he shot and tanned himself, with an old single-barrelled shot gun, that has done duty in the Pingree family of hunters for about half a century, but a better gun for sending large shot was never manufactured. It was "fixed up" and sent him recently from this town, and soon earned the respect of the Texans for its superior qualities. None know or appreciate a good "pop" better than the inhabitants of this wild border state.

Concerning them he writes: "This is a prairie wolf, not a Cayote, as this is larger in proportion as a gray squirrel is larger than a red squirrel. It is the first one I shot with the gun after it arrived. It was the last moon, about ten o'clock P. M., he was coming down the railroad track; chum and I were sitting at the door front, he says 'There is a wolf.' I saw him and reached inside the door, and think he heard me for he stopped and I fired where I stood. The marks are in the hide. We did not find him that night as he ran about twelve rods up the track, and the boys found him in the morning, when I skinned him quick. If any one thinks it easy to shoot a wolf let him try it. The load consisted of 30 large shot and 1 1-4 inches of powder; there is no use of going for these varmints with squibs. I killed several others that moon sitting at the door of the engine house. These animals are well fixed with teeth; they set into each other like those of a saw and have long tusks like a dog, which are as sharp as needles. I have a wolf skin shot with a Winchester rifle at 400 yards. The shot went in by the short rib and came out at the right shoulder, and he then ran 200 yards; if it had been dark should have lost him, so you see how tough they are. This Winchester carries 100 grains of powder and 500 grains of lead in a cartridge about four inches long I have no tools for tanning and removed the flesh from the pelt with a piece of brick.

There are bear, deer, panthers, cougars, wild cats, and other large game in the mountains, but I have little time to hunt. I am well acquainted with the cowboys on both sides of the plain and they are at me all the time to go out and hunt; their ranches are just inside the foothills; they have lots of good horses and saddles, are rich, and fine men all of them."

He sends an antelope skin which he tanned himself, but given him by a cowboy who didn't place much value upon it, as they rarely tan them with the hair on. It is a very curiously marked skin, but the hair is short and coarse.

He sends a specimen of soap wood that resembles soap in touch; it grows plenteously in the vicinity and large quantities are dug and sent to England, for what purpose he knows not, but does know that it will clean silk and other fine fabrics and is a good substitute for soap to wash hands with. When powdered soft and put with water it will make a thick lather. The leaves are long like a flag, but are tough enough for basket making.

There is a specimen of Arizona wood, which the Mexicans call "coteo," pronounced coteer, which is very plentiful in Arizona and Mexico, and grows from six to twelve feet high. Southwest on rising land, or Round Top Hill, not so high as Red Shanks, and all made up of nothing but pebbles about the size of a hen's egg, none larger nor much smaller, nothing grows except a few spears of grass and this wood; right out of a heap of rocks, as it were. Light it with a match when dry and it burns like tinder, yet it is very hard but very useful for fuel. It is a regular candle. It grows on a straight stalk with little short leaves like a willow sprout in the spring, and has millions of sharp thorns on it a half inch long.

All these things are common in Texas but great curiosities in New England.

A young mother was taking her baby out for a ride in the little one's carriage yesterday, and on the way home she stopped and got a quart can of milk and set it in one corner of the carriage at the baby's feet. She had proceeded but a short distance when the cover came off the can and baby and her carriage robes were completely covered with the lacteal fluid.

Frank Cousins' Bee Hive was so busy last Friday that we could not get at the proprietor although he could be seen in the distance. And this is the way people rush every day in the week to Cousins' Bee Hive for the extra bargains he offers.

Repartee.

They were lunching one day,
In a handsome cafe,
And she happened to say,
As she noticed the way,
That he and ice cream were in unity,
"Can you eat ice cream with impunity?"
And he made the reply,
With a wink of the eye,
"No, but I can with a spoon."

But her triumph came soon;
As they left the saloon,
He gave her a good opportunity;
"And now, Bessie, dear,
As the weather is clear,
Can you take a walk with impunity?"
Her smile was as bright as the moon,
And deliciously shy,
Came the mocking reply,
"No, but I can with a spoon."

THE DRAMA.

The fiftieth consecutive performance of Adonis, at the Hollis Street Theatre, was given Tuesday night. Purchasers of seats were presented with a bust of Mr. Dixey, that will serve to recall for many a day the interesting occasion. With the new specialty, Bits, and other improvements introduced, Adonis runs its merry course nightly, to the delight of very large audiences.

It is safe to say that not one of the friends of the Jersey Lily have regretted her enforced absence from the stage of the Boston Theatre during most of the week past more than the beautiful actress herself. In accordance with the wish of the multitude that has been disappointed in not being able to witness her impersonation of Bulwer's heroine, The Lady of Lyons is announced for production every evening of the week and Saturday afternoon—the last of the Langtry engagement. At a special matinee on Wednesday, the star is to appear as Lady Ormande in that interesting drama of the time, A Wife's Peril.

Lotta, this week, at the Park. The little lady will stay one week less than was first announced, and on Nov. 29 Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau will produce "The Scapegoat," which has made a hit in New York.

"Harbor Lights" at the Museum is one of the greatest successes at this theatre for years. The new company all appear suited to each other and the interest in the play and the actors seems not to abate as the weeks roll on. Every evening and Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Harbor Lights will not be played on the New England circuit, and suburban people must come to the Museum if they wish to see it, as most certainly they do.

Wednesday with but four hours' notice Miss Annie Clarke assumed the role of Pauline and gave an impersonation of the character that was in striking contrast with the effort of Mrs, Langtry. The audience was, of course, small, but its enthusiasm was that of thousands. Miss Clarke was not allowed to begin her lines for several minutes, and altogether it was a welcome of which even she, who has received so many, may well feel proud.

The most noteworthy part of the Atlantic Monthly for December is its supplement, which contains Dr. Holmes poem at the 250th anniversary of Harvard University, and Mr. Lowell's oration, delivered on the same occasion. Miss Harriet Waters Preston has an amusing and carefully thought out criticism on The Church of England Novel. The two political papers in the number are an account of Mazzini as a man and a statesman, by Maria Louise Henry, and an article on The Dream of Russia, which is particularly timely in view of the recent encroachments of Russia in the East. Miss Murfree concludes her serial, In the Clouds, and Mr. Bishop brings The Golden Justice to a termination. Some criticisms and the Contributor's Club complete the number. The number, taken as a whole, is an unusually good one for a time when most publishers keep their best material for the opening of the new year. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The Cosmopolitan is a new and handsome monthly. It contains so many interesting articles for every member of the family; it has such beatiful illustrations; it is so neatly printed and bound, that every person who examines it is delighted with it. The subscription price is only $2.50, and an attractive premium besides. Send for a sample copy to Schlicht & Field, publishers, Rochester, N. Y.

D. Lothrop & Co. announce that, leading in the great literary movement toward lower prices and large sales, they have made, without reducing quantity or quality, an extraordinary reduction in the price of Wide Awake, the best illustrated young folks' magazine, 1000 quarto pages and 500 original pictures yearly, and will now receive subscriptions at the former wholesale price of only $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston, Mass.

The Season for November shows some admirable styles in winter garments, combining comfort with beauty and elegance. New needlework designs are given, and a new method of decoration in nail work is explained and illustrated. International News Co., 31 Beekman street, New York.

A CHALLENGE!

I hereby agree to forfeit ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS to the Lynn Hospital if I can not prove to the satisfaction of any three disinterested persons:

FIRST, that I am selling the genuine W. L. Douglas' $3.00 shoe and new goods for $2.75.

SECOND, that the McEllery shoe, which I am cutting to $2.85, is superior to the Douglas shoe. The only condition of this offer is that the agent of the Douglas shoe shall forfeit the same amount to the Lynn Hospital if I prove my claim.

I DARE HIM ACCEPT MY CHALLENGE!

From now on until my new Central Square store is ready.

I Shall Cut Specialty Goods to the Heart!

"THE IDEAL MAGAZINE"

for young people is what the papers call ST. NICHOLAS. Do you know about it.- how good it is, how clean and pure and helpful? If there are any boys or girls in your house will you not try a number, or try it for a year, and see if it isn't just the element you need in the household? The London Times has said, "We have nothing like it on this side." Here are some leading features of

ST. NICHOLAS

FOR 1886-87.

STORIES by LOUISA M. ALCOTT and FRANK R. STOCKTON, several by each author.

A SHORT SERIAL STORY by Mrs. BURNETT, whose charming "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has been a great feature in the past year of ST NICHOLAS.

WAR STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS. GEN BADEAU, chief-of-staff, biographer, and confidential friend of Gen. Grant, and one of the ablest and most popular of living military writers, will contribute a number of papers describing in clear and vivid style some of the leading battles of the civil war. They will be panoramic descriptions of single contests or short campaigns presenting a sort of literary picture-gallery of the grand and heroic contests in which the parents of many a boy and girl of to-day took part.

THE SERIAL STORIES include "Juan and Juanita," an admirably written story of Mexican life, by Francis Courtenay Baylor, author of "On Both Sides"; also, Jenny's Boarding-House." by James Otis, a story of life in a great city.

SHORT ARTICLES, instructive and entertaining, will abound. Among these are: "How a Great Panorama is Made," by Theodore R. Davis, with profuse illustrations; "Winning a Commission" (Naval Academy), and "Recollections of the Naval Academy"; "Boring for Oil" and "Among the Gas-wells," with a number of striking pictures; "Child Sketches from George Eliot," by Julia Magruder; "Victor Hugo's Tales to His Grandchildren," recounted by Brander Matthews; "Historic Girls," by E. S. Brooks Also interesting contributions from Nora Perry, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Joaquin Miller, H. H. Boyesen, Washington Gladden, Alice Wellington Rollins, J. T. Trowbridge, Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka, Noah Brooks, Grace Denio Litchfield, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, Mary Mapes Dodge, and many others, etc., etc.

The subscription price of ST. NICHOLAS is $3.00 a year; 25 cents a number. Subscriptions are received by booksellers and news dealers everywhere, or by the publishers. New volume begins with the November number. Send for our beautifully illustrated catalogue (free) containing full prospectus, etc. etc. THE CENTURY CO., New York.

THE CENTURY,

FOR 1886-87.

The Century is an illustrated monthly magazine, having a regular circulation of about two hundred thousand copies, often reaching and sometimes exceeding two hundred and twenty-five thousand. Chief among its many attractions for the coming year is a serial which has been in active preparation for sixteen years. It is a history of our own country in its most critical time, as set forth in

THE LIFE OF LINCOLN,

BY HIS CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARIES, JOHN G. NICOLAY AND COL. JOHN HAY.

This great work, begun with the sanction of President Lincoln, and continued under the authority of his son, the Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, is the only full and authoritative record of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Its authors were friends of Lincoln before his presidency: they were most intimately associated with him as private secretaries throughout his term of office, and to them were transferred upon Lincoln's death all his private papers. Here will be told the inside history of the civil war and of President Lincoln's administration,—important details of which have hitherto remained unrevealed, that they might first appear in this authentic history. By reason of the publication of this work THE WAR SERIES, which has been followed with unflagging interest by a great audience, will occupy less space during the coming year. Gettysburg will be described by Gen. Hunt, (Chief of the Union Artillery) Gen. Longstreet, Gen. E. M. Law, and others. Chickamauga, by Gen. D. H. Hill; Sherman's March to the Sea, by Generals Howard and Slocum. Generals Q. A. Gilmore, Wm. F. Smith, John Gibbon, Horace Porter and John S. Mosby will describe special battles and incidents. Stories of naval engagements, prison life, etc., etc., will appear.

NOVELS AND STORIES.

"The Hundredth Man," a novel by Frank R. Stockton, author of "The Lady or the Tiger," etc., begins in November. Two novelettes by George W. Cable, stories by Mary Hallock Foote, "Uncle Remus," Julian Hawthorne, Edward Eggleston and other prominent American authors will be printed during the year.

SPECIAL FEATURES

with illustrations, include a series of articles on affairs in Russia and Siberia, by George Kennan, author of "Tent Life in Siberia," who has just returned from a most eventful visit to Siberian prisons; papers on the Food Question, with reference to its bearing on the Labor Problem; English Cathedrals; Dr. Eggleston's Religious Life in the American Colonies; Men and Women of Queen Anne's Reign, by Mrs. Oliphant; Clairvoyance, Spiritualism, Astrology, etc., by the Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., editor of the Christian Advocate; astronomical papers; articles throwing light on Bible History. etc.

PRICES. A FREE COPY.

Subscription price, $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number. Dealers, post-masters, and the publishers take subscriptions. Send for our beautifully illustrated 24-page catalogue (free), containing full prospectus, etc., including a special offer by which new readers can get back numbers to the beginning of the War Series at a very low price. A specimen copy (back number) will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of

DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

SUBJECT OF HIS DISCOURSE: "THE ORCHARD ON THE HILL."

A Comparison of the Two Thieves Who Were Crucified Beside the Savior, the Believer and the Unbelieving—The Glory of the Middle Cross.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 14.—In the Tabernacle this morning the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., pastor, after expounding some passages of Scripture recording scenes in the life of Christ, gave out the hymn beginning:

> Rock of ages, cleft for me,
> Let me hide myself in thee.

The subject of the sermon was "The Orchard on the Hill," and the text Luke xxiii, 33: "And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left." Following is Dr. Talmage's discourse in full:

Just outside of Jerusalem is a swell of ground toward which a crowd is ascending, for it is the day of execution. What a mighty assemblage! Some for curiosity to hear what the malefactors will say and to see how they will act. The three persons to be executed are already there. Some of the spectators are vile of lip and bloated of cheek. Some look up with revenge, hardly able to keep their hands off the sufferers. Some tear their own hair in a frenzy of grief. Some stand in silent horror. Some break out into uncontrollable weeping. Some slap their hands in delight that the offenders are to be punished at last. The soldiers with drawn swords drive back the mob, which presses on so hard. There is fear that the proceedings may be interrupted. Let the German legion, now stationed at Jerusalem, on horseback dash along the line and force back the surging multitude. "Back with you" is the cry. "Have you never seen a man die before?"

Three crosses in a row. An upright piece and two transverse pieces—one on the top, on which the hands are nailed, and one at the middle, on which the victim sat. Three trees just planted. Yet bearing fruit—the one at the right bearing poison, and the one at the left bitter aloes; the one in the middle apples of love. Norway pine and tropical orange and Lebanon cedar would not make so strange a grove as this orchard of Calvary. Stand and give a look at the three crosses. Just look at the one on the right. Its victim dies scoffing. More tremendous than his physical anguish is his scorn and hatred of Him on the middle cross. This one on the right turns half around on the spikes to hiss at the one in the middle. If the scoffer could get one hand loose, and He were within reach, he would smite the middle sufferer in the face. He hates Him with a perfect hatred. I think he wishes he were down on the ground, that he might spear Him. He envies the mechanics who, with their nails, have nailed Him fast. Amid the settling darkness and louder than the crash of the rocks hear him jeer out these words: "Ah! ah! you poor wretch, I knew you were an imposter! You pretended to be a God and yet you let these legions master you." It was in some such hate that Voltaire, in his death hour, because he thought he saw Christ in his bedroom, got up on his elbow and cried out: "Crush that wretch." What had the middle cross done to arouse up this right hand cross? Nothing. O, the enmity of the natural heart against Christ! The world likes a sentimental Christ, or a philanthropic Christ, but a Christ who comes to snatch men away from their sins—away with Him! On this right hand cross to-day I see typified the unbelief of the world. Men say: "Back with Him from the heart, I will not let Him take my sins. If He will die, let Him die for Himself, not for me." There has always been a war between this right hand cross and the middle cross, and wherever there is an unbelieving heart, thus the fight goes on. O, if, when that dying malefactor perished, the faithlessness of man had perished, then that tree which yields poison would have budded and blossomed with life for all the world! Look up into that disturbed countenance of the sufferer and see what a ghastly thing it is to reject Christ. Behold in that awful face, in that pitiful look, in that unblessed death hour, the stings of the sinner's departure. What a plunge into darkness! Standing high upon the cross on the top of the hill, so that all the world may look at him, he says:

"Here I go out a miserable life into a wretched eternity!" One! Two! Three! Listen to the crash of the fall, all ye ages! So Hobbes, dying after he had seventy years in which to prepare for eternity, said: "Were I master of all the world I would give it all to live one day longer." Sir Francis Newport, hovering over the brink, cried out: "Wretch that I am, whither shall I fly from this breast? What will become of me? Oh, that I were to lie upon the fire that never is quenched, 1,000 years to purchase the favor of God and to be reconciled to Him again! Oh eternity! Oh eternity! Who can discover the abyss of eternity? Who can paraphrase upon these words: "Forever and forever?"

That right hand cross—thousands have perished on it, in worse agonies. For what is physical pain compared to remorse, at the last, that life has been wasted, and only a fleeting moment stands between the soul and its everlasting overthrow? Oh God! let me die anywhere rather than at the foot of that right hand cross. Let not one drop of that blood fall upon my cheek. Rend not my ear with that cry. I see it now as never before—the loathsomeness and horror of my unbelief. That dying malefactor was not so much to blame as I. Christianity was not established, and perhaps not until that day had that man heard the Christ. But after Christ has stood almost nineteen centuries, working the wonders of His grace, you reject Him. That right hand cross with its long beam overshadows all the earth. It is planted in the heart of the race. When will the time come when the spirit of God shall, with its ax, hew down that right hand cross, until it shall fall at the foot of that middle cross, and unbelief, the railing malefactor of the world, shall perish from all our hearts? Away from me, thou spirit of unbelief! I hate thee! With this sword of God I thrust thee back and thrust thee through. Down to hell; down most accursed monster of the earth, and talk to the millions thou hast already damned. Talk no longer to these sons of God, these heirs of heaven.

"If Thou be the Son of God." Was there any "if" about it? Tell me, thou star, that, in robe of light, did run to point out His birthplace? Tell me, thou sea, that didst put thy hand over thy lip when He bid thee be still? Tell me, ye dead, who got up to see Him die? Tell me, thou sun in mid heaven, who for Him didst pull down over thy face thy veil of darkness? Tell me, ye lepers who were cleansed, ye dead who were raised, is He the Son of God? Aye! aye! responds the universe. The flowers breathe it, the stars chime it, the redeemed celebrate it, the angels raise up on their thrones to announce it. And yet on that miserable malefactor's "if" how many shall be wrecked for all eternity! That little "if" has enough venom in its sting to cause the death of the soul. No "if" about it. I know it. Ecce Deus! I feel it thoroughly—through every muscle of the body, and through every faculty of my mind, and through every energy of my soul. Living I will preach it, dying I will pillow my head before its consolations—Jesus the God.

Away then, from this right hand cross. The red berries of the forest are apt to be poisonous, and around this tree of carnage grow the red, poisonous berries of which many have tasted and died. I can see no use for this right hand cross, except it be used as a lever with which to upturn the unbelief of the world.

Here, from the right hand cross, I go to the left. Pass clear to the other side. That victim also twists himself upon the nails to look at the center cross—yet, not to scoff. It is to worship. He, too, would like to get his hand loose; not to smite, but to deliver the sufferer of the middle cross. He cries to the railer cursing on the other side: "Silence! between us is innocence, is agony. We suffer for our crimes. Silence!" Gather around this left hand cross, Oh, ye people! be not afraid. Bitter herbs are sometimes a tonic for the body, and the bitter aloes that you grow on this tree shall give strength and life to thy soul.

This left hand cross is a repenting cross. As men who have been nearly drowned tell us that in one moment, while they were under the water, their whole life passed before them, so I suppose in one moment the dying malefactor thought over all his past life. Of that night when he went into an unguarded door and took all the silver, the gold, the jewels, and as the sleeper stirred he put a knife through his heart. Of that day when, in the lonely pass, he met the wayfarer and regardless of the cries and prayers and tears and struggles of his victim he flung the mangled corpse into the dust of the highway or heaped upon it the stones. He says: "Oh, I am a guilty wretch; I deserve this. There is no need of my cursing. That will not stop the pain. There is no need of blaspheming Christ, for He has done me no wrong; and yet I cannot die so. The tortures of my body are outdone by the tortures of my soul. The past is a scene of misdoing; the present a crucifixion; the future an everlasting undoing. Come back, thou hiding midday sun! Kiss my cheek with one bright ray of comfort. What! no help from above—no help from above—no help from beneath? Then I must turn to my companion in sorrow, the one on the middle cross. I have heard that He knows how to help a man when he is in trouble. I have heard that He can cure the wounded. I have heard that He can pardon the sinner. Surely, in all His wanderings up and down the earth he never saw one more in need of His forgiveness! Blessed one! I turn to thee! Wilt Thou look for the moment away from Thy own pangs to pity me? Lord, it is not to have my hands relieved or my feet taken from the torture. I can stand all this, but oh! my sins! my sins! my sins! they pierce me through and through. They tell me I must die forever. They will push me out into the darkness unless Thou wilt help me. I confess it all. Hear the cry of the dying thief: Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom. I ask no great things. I seek for no throne in heaven, no chariot to take me to the skies; but just think of me when this day's horrors have passed. Think of me a little—of me, the one now hanging at Thy side—when the shout of heavenly welcome takes Thee back into Thy glory, Thou wilt not forget me, wilt Thou? Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom. Only just remember me."

Likewise must we repent. You say: "I have stolen nothing." I reply: "We have all been guilty of the mightiest felony of the universe, for we have robbed God—robbed Him of our time, robbed Him of our talent, robbed him of our services. Suppose you send a man west as an agent of your firm, and every month you pay him his salary, and at the end of ten years you find out that he has been serving another firm, but taking your salary: would you not at once condemn him as dishonest? God sent us into this world to serve Him. He has given us wages all the time. One half of us have been serving another master. When a man is convicted of treason he is brought out; a regiment surrounds him and the command is given: "Attention, company. Take aim! Fire!" And the man falls with a hundred bullets through his heart. There comes a time in a man's history when the Lord calls up the troop of his iniquities, and at God's command they pour into him a con-concentrated volley of torture. You say: "I don't feel myself to be a sinner." That may be. Walk along by the cliffs, and you see sunlight and flowers at the mouth of the cave; but take a torch and go in, and before you have gone far you see the flashing eye of a wild beast or hear the hiss of a serpent. So the world seems in the sunlight of worldliness; but as I wave the torch of God's truth, and go down into the deep cavern of the heart—alas! for the bristling horrors and the rattling fangs. Have you ever noticed the climax in this passage of Scripture: "The heart is deceitful." That seems enough. But the passage goes on and says: "The heart is deceitful above all things." Will you not say that is enough? But the passage goes on further and says: "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." If we could see the true condition of the unpardoned before God, what wringing of hands there would be! What a thousand-voiced shriek of supplication and despair! But you are a sinner, a sinner. I speak not to the person who sits next to you, but to you. You are a sinner. All the transgressions of a lifetime have been gathered up into an avalanche. At any moment it may slip from the cliffs and crush you forever. May the Lord Almighty, by His grace, help us to repent of our sins while repentance is possible.

This left hand cross was a relieving cross. There was no guess work in that prayer; no "if" in that supplication. The left hand cross flung itself at the foot of the middle cross, expecting mercy. Faith is only just opening the hand to take what Christ offers us. The work is all done, the bridge is built strong enough for us all to walk over. Tap not at the door of God's mercy with the tip of your fingers, but as a warrior, with gauntleted fists, beats at the castle gate, so with all the aroused energies of our souls let us pound at the gate of heaven. That gate is locked. You go to it with a bunch of keys. You try philosophy. That will not open it. A large door generally has a ponderous key. I take the cross and place the foot of it in the lock, and by the two arms of the cross I turn the lock, and the door opens.

This left hand cross was a pardoning cross. The crosses were only two or three yards apart. It did not take long for Christ to hear. Christ might have turned away and said: "How darest thou speak to me? I am the Lord of heaven and earth. I have seen your violence. When you struck down that man in the darkness I saw you. You are getting a just reward. Die in darkness—die for ever." But Jesus said not so, but rather: "This day thou shalt be with me in Paradise;" as much as to say, "I see you there; don't worry. I will not only bear my cross, but help you with yours."

Forthwith, the left hand cross becomes the abode of contentment. The pillow of the malefactor, soaked in blood, becomes like the crimson upholstery of a king's couch. When the body became still, and the surgeons feeling the pulse said one to another: "He is dead," the last mark of pain had gone

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem,

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds-Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skyl lights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in al branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bosuley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated courtesy whether anything is red ornot.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE RECENT case of alleged boycott, tried at Plymouth, and of local interest because of its connection with Chas. Harrington & Co., has become of general moment on account of the issues involved. It has been reported fully by papers in this vicinity and elsewhere—the arguments of the learned counsel furnishing food for extensive comment. Both sides may claim a victory, but it is evident that a conspiracy such as was described by the indictment was not proved to the satisfaction of the jury—hence their failure to agree on a verdict.

We doubt if the case ever again comes to trial. It is doubtful, too, if any boycott will be attempted, similar to that described in the case. The charge of the judge has shown just how far the Knights of Labor can go, without being amenable to law, and inasmuch as, under his charge, such efforts would be just as effectual, whatever is done by local assemblies would be done within the limits of the law, as set forth by Judge Brigham.

Since the labor troubles began here, we think there has been a great change in the views of the Knights of Labor, regarding the methods to be pursued. It is safe to say that if they had entertained the same views, and acted in accordance with them, before the trouble, there would have been in this town no labor disturbances.

The right of a manufacturer to do business as he likes, to hire what men he chooses, and to refuse to employ others whom he does not want, would seem to be a self evident proposition. It is equally self evident that the men have the same right to refuse to work for or with any party they desire, or under any conditions which they may consider obnoxious or oppressive. If they fail to convince their employers of the justice of their course, it is their misfortune, and it is on them that the burden of loss of employment must fall.

When, however, they leave the plane of reason, and attempt to enforce any demand, or grievance, or fancied grievance, by threats of violence, or by attempts to injure the business of another, they forfeit the respect and sympathy of good citizens, and hold themselves amenable to the laws of the land. The boycott as it has been practiced in this state and elsewhere, is unjustifiable, whether in the hands of the workman or the manufacturer. If the business of A is to be disturbed because of no fault of his, because of a labor disturbance in another state, a thousand miles away, perhaps, there should be a law to prevent it if we have not already one.

According to the charge of the judge, if the parties against whom the indictment was brought visited the Plymouth factory for the purpose of obtaining information to lay before the local assembly that the machinery of the latter might be directed against this firm according to their methods of procedure, the defendants would not be liable. How far, in this case, the officers of the local assembly might be liable, in case they disturbed the business of the firm in question, might be another matter, and probably would be.

The lesson of the trial is a renewed evidence that a peaceable settlement of labor troubles is earnestly to be desired. In such settlements both the manufacturers and laborers should cooperate. The Knights of Labor will learn to discard many of the objectionable methods, in the employment of which they have brought upon them the hostility of the manufacturers and their sympathizers. They have learned in this town, that organization may be met with organization, and that any and all attempts at violations of law must and will be punished.

THE DECISION of the Supreme Court in the recent case of the barber at Worcester, regarding the keeping open of shops on the Lord's day, is of considerable importance. There is no more or no less law on the Statute books since the decision of Judge Gardner. The law regarding the Lord's day is no more stringent than before. It has been regarded, in accordance with the growing liberality of public sentiment, as a dead letter in many points. Certain exceptions to the strict construction of the law have been ruled allowable by the authorities in most places—and in this ruling public opinion has sustained them. Among such exceptions has been the keeping open of barber shops—it being considered an act of necessity, and, as it was decided by a judge of the lower court in Boston, whatever a man can do for himself he may have done for him by another person.

The decision of the Supreme Court is of special moment as showing that this liberal construction of the law is not in harmony with the rulings of the court. Coming at this time, when the matter has been brought before them as a test case, it leaves no room for doubt as to the disposition of such cases, should prosecutions be made. It does not follow, because of this decision, that the authorities must of necessity enforce the Sunday law in all its entirety; that will doubtless depend upon public opinion in different localities. But it does follow that when an enforcement of the laws in this respect is demanded by the authorities, no defence is possible. The decision of the court is so clear that obedience to the law is the only thing feasible or possible.

The judge after citing the old laws, says: "Looking at the two sections together, it would seem that the exception of works of necessity and charity did not refer to keeping shops open on the Lord's day, but that it was limited, in accordance with its own language, to work and labor. If the qualifications in section 2 extended to keeping open shops on the Lord's day, we should expect to find the same qualifications in section 9, as to keeping open shops on Saturday evenings, not finding it in section 9, the inference is strong that the phrase, works of necessity and charity was not intended to qualify or refer to keeping open shops in section 2.

* * * * *

"Keeping open a shop or workhouse on the Lord's day for the purpose of doing business with the public indiscriminately, is an offence in itself. The Legislature intended by this statute to keep the ordinary places of traffic, business and work closed on this day, so that persons who desired to relax from labor and business and attend to private and public worship, might not be disturbed by those who chose to pursue their worldly business and avocations in open shop.

* * * * *

"We are not called upon to pass on the question whether it is a work of necessity to cut hair and shave beards on the Lord's day. This question does not arise in the present case. We construe the statute to mean that the law prohibits the keeping open a shop, warehouse or workhouse for the purpose of doing business therein, on the Lord's day; and that it is immaterial what that business may be."

The gist of the matter lies in the last sentence; "and THAT IT IS IMMATERIAL WHAT THAT BUSINESS MAY BE." This is very broad and leaves no room for any exception, where business of any kind is coducted, or sales of any kind made.

Those who have rebelled against the manner in which the Sunday laws have been allowed to remain a dead letter, who have made attempts in various ways and in various localities, to compel their enforcement, will be pleased at the decision of Judge Gardner. If they see in it an encouragement to prosecute violations of the Sunday law, and with the aid of the authorities see to it that this law is rigidly obeyed, they will win the applause of the opponents of the law as well. For as Gen. Butler has said, the only true method of bringing about the repeal of an obnoxious law is to enforce its enactments.

We are by no means in sympathy with any efforts to Westernize the Lord's day. It should be honored as a day of rest—as it has been so regarded by our fathers. At the same time we are in favor of such a liberal construction of the law as shall harmonize with public sentiment in Massachusetts, regarding the opening of such places and shops as have been considered a convenience and necessity. No harm, that we can see, has come from the manner in which the law has been enforced here and in our neighboring city. But much convenience, not only of our citizens, but of the travelling public, has been subserved thereby.

But that some exceptions to the old law, as its exists, may be legally made,—and an attempt to have such will undoubtedly be presented to the next legislature—we shall hope to see the law enforced literally. Judge Gardner says in regard to the keeping open of shops or places of business on the Lord's day that with that portion of the law "necessity or charity" has nothing to do, but that it is immaterial what business is done. It takes them all in. No druggist can do any business on that day. It is of no avail, in the words of the Judge, that the medicines he sells are a necessity. That is immaterial. "It is immaterial what business is done." The sale of medicine is as much a business as the sale of a cigar. Only the former has been considered a necessity, which according to Judge Gardner, has nothing to do with that part of the law. The livery man, who keeps open his place of business, and does business on the Lord's day, is liable under the law, and the patron of the livery man would be also liable, under another section of the same law, unless his conveyance was for the purpose of riding to church, or doing an act of necessity or charity. He must not ride for pleasure, nor can he do this even in his own private team, without being liable under the law.

The baker or butcher must not do business; nor can any shop where eatables or provisions are dispensed except licensed inns, be allowed to be kept open. The news dealers can not keep open their shops for the sale of newspapers, whether Sunday papers or other papers. Whether they might deliver them at private houses might be, perhaps, a question.

As we said at the outset, this is not a new law. But the recent decision emphasizes its provisions—gives a clear basis on which to rest in prosecuting offences against it, and shows the necessity either of repealing the Sunday law entirely—leaving to public opinion the regulation of laws pertaining to the observance of the Lord's day, or of changing the law to conform with its mode of observance at present in Massachusetts. Very few of those who have advocated the closing of the shops now open on the Lord's day are not themselves guilty—on some Sunday, of some violation of the old blue law at present on our statute book. Any prosecution of offenders against this law, save an impartial one, is persecution. One shop must not be closed and others be allowed to remain open. The barber must not be closed up, and the baker or the shop keeper allowed to continue his business. The livery man must not be closed up and the barber be allowed to keep open his shop. Business is business, and it is immaterial what that business is, according to Judge Gardner.

Last evening as the 5.15 train for this town was leaving the Eastern Railroad station in Boston, a neatly dressed gentleman entered the last car and took a seat in the centre. By the time Chelsea was passed a large number of passengers had left the car, and a brakeman, who had probably been struck with the benevolent look of the gentleman, walked down to his seat, swung his leg over the arm and produced an envelope containing a large ticket, and said, "Can't I sell you a ticket to our ball, it is for the benefit of us brakemen, so if we get hurt there will be a fund to help us out of trouble. It don't take place till January, but we got the tickets out early, so as to sell as many as we can?" "How much is the ticket?" inquired the benevolent looking gentleman. "One dollar" said the breakman, "and there is a coupon attached which is good for half fare on any road entering Boston, on the day before and after the ball." "I will take one," said the gentleman, and he handed the young man a dollar and put the ticket in his overcoat pocket. "What is your name?" said the brakeman. "I am GOVERNOR ROBINSON," was the quiet remark. The brakeman swung himself off the arm of the seat, colored up, and said something about he didn't know,—he guessed—well, anyway I con—consider it an honor to sell a ticket to the Governor, and then he bolted for the door and was afterwards seen pointing out the Governor to his companions.

The trial of Peter McGeough of Lynn and William B. O'Keefe of Salem, charged with "boycotting" the firm of Charles Harrington & Co., tanners, of this town, by unlawfully interfering with the sale of their goods, was on trial at Plymouth before Judge Brigham last week. The indictment sets forth the facts that, through the instrumentality of defendants, Charles Harrington & Co. were prevented from selling, and F. F. Emory of Plymouth from using the leather of the parties first named. District-Attorney Bumpus appeared for the Commonwealth, assisted by Henry P. Moulton and Geo. P. Ives of Salem. B. F. Butler, assisted by Frank L. Washburne, appeared for the defendants. The case was given to the jury last Saturday, and after being out three hours and a half they reported they were unable to agree, standing seven to five for conviction. This case has attracted a great deal of attention and been reported largely in papers outside the state as well as those near home.

DEATH OF MAJOR ALLEN.

We have to record the passing away, Monday evening, of a long and useful life—a life of upright and honorable deeds, the life of a useful citizen. The oldest man in town, Major Lewis Allen, has gone to his rest. To say that his death has been unexpected would be to state what is not true. He has been gradually sinking since he was confined to his house over a year ago. This was but natural, and that he has been able to live to such a ripe old age, in the full possession of his faculties, shows a vigor of constitution, together with a care, in the past, of his material body which few men of this generation possess. As was said by Gen. Oliver, at his ninetieth birthday, "Octogenarians are few, and nonagenarians are fewer still, and the thinning out of our ranks is, I hope, but an increase of the countless hosts that throng the realms where time and years are unknown, and where

> Everlasting spring abides
> And never withering flowers."

If ever these words could be truly said of any one, they could be said of Major Lewis Allen. More than his allotted years have been filled to the brim with usefulness—with right and true acts and loving deeds. His business was begun and ended here. As his wordly possessions increased he became the originator of many improvements of value to the town, as well as to himself. It was considered a foolhardy experiment when he erected on the Square the old "Allen's Block." But he heeded not the advice of those who would have a town take no step forward, but trusted to his own judgment, which proved wiser than them all. When he bought the first corner lot of land, where his block was built, he purchased it of Capt. Richard Jacobs, paying for the same $500. The money was paid over in a grocery store, and there were present many of the wise heads of the town to witness the transaction. When it was all completed and Mr. Allen was passing out, it was remarked to Capt. Jacobs, "You have made a pretty sharp bargain with that young man." Mr. Allen heard it, and turning back, said, "You must remember, gentlemen, that this is a corner lot, and I am yet a young man." Such men as Mr. Allen are a credit and an honor to any town. The value of their enterprise will last long after they have gone.

Major Allen was one of the pioneers in the leather industry in this town. He was born in the town of Weston, July 26, 1794. His father died when he was four years old; he then went to live with his grandfather Allen, and remained there till his mother married John Manning. While a lad he went to Boston and worked some six months at the baker's trade, but not liking the business he came to Salem and apprenticed himself to his father-in-law, John Manning, where he remained until he was 21. It was customary at that time to give a young man a "freedom suit" when he became of age, but this his employer was too poor to do, so that he was obliged to enter life entirely on his own resources. At the age of 23 he married Nabby Kent Hooper, daughter of Greenfield Hooper, and lived in Salem two years. In 1817 he came to this town and began business for himself, having but $47 as his worldly possessions when commencing.

He bought the house where the new block now stands, and at first did business in the lower part of the house, his mother living in the upper part. In 1827 he opened a store in New York with one Richardson and Henry King. The other partners were also interested in shipping, and as Mr. Allen thought he did not know as much about that as the shoe business, he decided to sell out his interest in the firm which he did in 1832. He also had a store in Zanesville, Ohio, being there in partnership with a man named Parker. This was continued for ten years. But during all this time he continued his residence and business in this town. He built the old Allen's block in 1830 and retired from business in 1842.

In his business as a shoe manufacturer he came into business dealings with many of our aged residents, some of whom have preceded him to the other side, and others remember his business as it was then conducted. In all his dealings then as afterwards, he was the soul of integrity and honor. It can truly be said of him that "his word was as good as his bond." This integrity and honorable dealing led the citizens of the old time to entrust him with many of their interests. He was their Selectman and Assessor several years; he was chosen afterwards County Commissioner and sent to the Legislature for the years 1837-8-9, where he was chairman of the Committee on Towns.

To our younger residents, Major Allen has became familiar from his connection with the Warren National Bank. He was one of the first petitioners for the bank, was one of its first directors, being chosen in 1832, and was chosen President October 28, 1850. This position he has held with credit to himself and the bank, gaining the respect and esteem not only of those of the bank with whom he came daily in contact, but of the patrons of the bank with whom his intercourse was no less courteous and friendly. He was the true gentleman in all his dealings with his fellow men. His connection with the bank continued as long as his health would permit. No memory will be more cherished by this institution than their visit to Major Allen on the occasion of his ninetieth birthday, July 26, 1884. At that time he was presented by C. Warren Osborne, Esq., in behalf of the directors, with a massive gold headed cane, the Major remarking that even at that age he had not been compelled to use a cane, but under these circumstances should consider it an honor to do so. At that time letters were read from Gen. Henry K. Oliver and Hon. Alfred A. Abbott—both life long friends of the Major, but both being unable to be present to extend to him personal congratulations. They both have preceded him to that shore whither from them and others of his kindred a welcome has long awaited him.

At the time of his anniversary to which we have alluded, he was able to visit the bank daily, and sign his name in a firm hand to the bills of the Warren National Bank. His signature was so familiar to the people that it seemed hard to recognize the bills of the bank without it. It was a familiar signature outside of the town; known and recognized no more than he was honored by the business men with whom he came in contact in his business as President of the Bank. Shortly after his anniversary it became evident that the duties of President, which had been lightened during the last years of his office by the kind and valued assistance of C. Warren Osborne, the Vice President, could not be longer performed. He resigned as President, Jan. 1, 1886, and C. W. Osborne was chosen in his stead. His last day at the bank was June 16, 1885; he came down with great effort, for a few hours, however, during August of the same year, after which time he has not left his house. Mr. Allen was one of the incorporators of the Warren Five Cents Savings Bank, and Vice President from that date until his death.

Mr. Allen was a member of the Masonic Fraternity—and we believe the oldest Mason in town, having joined that Order in 1821. In 1871 he was Trustee of the Peabody Institute, serving six years until 1877. In his younger days he joined the Danvers Artillery, was chosen Captain of a Salem Company, and was afterwards promoted to Major, which commission he held for five years, when he resigned. His last military duty was escorting Gen. Lafayette from Marblehead to Salem in a great rain storm.

In his private and family relations, Major Allen has always manifested that kindness and consideration which marked his intercourse with others. In no way has this consideration been shown in a more marked manner than during his last illness. In spite of suffering and pain, and great feebleness, he has shown a patience which made it a pleasure to minister to his wants. Not a murmur has escaped his lips. He has studied to relieve his attendants from unneccessary labor and watchfulness. What else could be expected than that "the end of that man is peace."

Major Allen was conscious up to within a few hours of his demise. Though his body was feeble, his mind was as clear as ever. He manifested great interest in all matters pertaining to local affairs, and had read to him each day the Boston Journal and other papers. No matter of local or general import escaped his notice, and he was especially interested in the outcome of the labor troubles in this town.

Major Allen was twice married, his second wife being Miss Eunice Emerson of this town. Both have preceded him to "that other country." He leaves three children, Mrs. Abbie, wife of Edward D. Trask; Lewis E. Allen; and Miss Helen, who has lived with her father and ministered to him during his long illness. Mr. Allen's age was 92 years, 3 mos. 20 days. His funeral will take place to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from his late residence in South Peabody.

OBITUARY.

The decease of Capt. George C. Peirce, which took place last Thursday, removes from our midst one of Peabody's best known and useful citizens. The dropping out from the body politic of any man whose influence and character, as was that of Capt. Peirce, was always exerted for truth and right, is a loss to the community. But Capt. Peirce was a useful citizen in another way. He had built up and established here a business which was exclusively his own—a business which has given employment to many people, and which needed his care and energy and experience to make a success. This town needs just such citizens. Its industry is too much concentrated in one line of business. Branches of business which will call to a town different classes of workmen, which furnish a variety of employment, and take its citizens out of the old ruts of one kind of manual labor, are so far a help to the growth of a town in intelligence. In so far as the business of Capt. Peirce was in this way an addition to the business capacity of the town, it was a helpful source of emolument, and the removal, by death, of its founder and supporter is an inestimable loss to the community. Particularly is this so when the success of the business was so dependent upon the forethought and watchful care of its head.

The manufacture of cork soles was a new industry at the time Mr. Peirce established his factory or workshop in this town. This was in 1859, and the work was all done by hand. The first cork soles in this vicinity were made by Peter Holmes & Co., of Boston, and dispensed to the public through the druggists. So much of a luxury were they at that time that they were sold at $1.00 a pair—a great contrast to the low price at which they are sold at retail now, to say nothing of the price at wholesale, which is obtained by the manufacturer. Instead of being an article of luxury they are now a thing of every day use. Capt. Peirce was one of the pioneers in this business. The sewing machine at that time was unknown, and Capt. Peirce related the consternation with which their introduction was regarded by his female employes, who had been in the habit of taking all their work home. But when they found that they could earn with the use of the machine double their former wages, their surprise was very apparent. The cork used by Mr. Peirce was mostly obtained by him through New York importers, from Oporto, in Portugal. The machines used in the preparation of the cork for soles are specially constructed for the purpose, and many of them were designed by Mr. Peirce himself. The soles made comprised every variety, from those covered with the finest of lamb's wool, which can be made into elegantly embroidered slippers for household wear, to the ordinary every day soles, which can be bought at a mere nominal sum. From the employment of three girls, which was the full complement of his help at the outset, he has employed of late years over fifty people, and his goods have been distributed through the medium of wholesale dealers, into every state in the Union.

Capt. Peirce had been confined to his house since Sept. 12th. He was taken ill July 6th—having on that day over heated his blood, from the effects of which he never recovered. During the month of August he visited the seashore in the hope that the breezes of the salt water would renew his energies, and recuperate his system. But it seemed in vain. His work was done; and this he realized from the beginning of his illness. He talked calmly and philosophically about his approaching end, was cheerful and patient through it all, and was ready to be called hence if it was the will of his Heavenly Father. He was rational and conscious till within a short time of his death—desired to be taken into the confidence of the physician in attendance and to know just what was being done, the remedies used, and the method of their anticipated operation. He was unconscious at the last, and passed away calmly and quietly, as if dropping into a peaceful slumber.

Capt. Peirce was in no sense a public man—yet he had a warm interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the town, and served her citizens in many capacities where his good judgment and experience commended him to them. He was interested especially in the fire department, being one of the first members of the old Volunteer hand engine company, and for several years its foreman. In 1868 he was chosen Chief Engineer of this town, succeeding in this capacity the late John V. Stevens. He was one of the committee appointed by the town on the introduction of water, and at the time of his death was a member of the committee appointed at last town meeting to see about a new hose carriage for Dublin.

Mr. Peirce's character was above reproach. In his business dealings with his fellow men, he was a man in whom perfect confidence was reposed. He was one of the few honorable business men—honorable in his dealings with his employes, and respected by the large firms with whom he had done a successful business for many years. By none, however, was he more respected and loved than those with whom he was in daily intercourse.

Mr. Peirce was born in the town of Medford. His age was 72 years, 6 months, 9 days. His title of Captain was obtained by his connection with the old Danvers Light Infantry. He leaves a widow, one son, George O. Peirce, and a daughter.

His funeral, which was observed Sunday at his late residence, was an unusually large one. Sympathizing friends and neighbors filled the house to overflowing, until there seemed hardly room for more. The fire department turned out in a body and accompanied his remains to their last resting place. The floral tributes were many and beautiful—a pillow of rare exotics, a design from the Fire Department, one from the late employes of Mr. Peirce, as well as others from the near relatives of the deceased. The services was conducted by Rev. F. W. Sprague, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. B. Hervey of Taunton, and Prof. Harmon of Tufts College—both former pastors of the Universalist church of this town where Capt. Feirce was an attendant. Rev. Mr. Sprague read selections of scripture, offered remarks and read an appropriate poem of Whittier. He was followed by Revs. Harmon and Hervey in feeling tributes, the latter of whom offered prayer. The remains were deposited in Harmony Grove Cemetery.

Our item on the town official farmer last week, brought out the following experience of two of our young professional men, who reside not far from the shadow of Bushby's hill. The young men secured an orchard, and among the products of the same were six barrels of Lawrence pears. Visions of large profits floated through the mind of one of them and not content with making a trade with a local dealer he visited the great metropolis of Boston and there dickered with a Friend street Hebrew, who would take six bushels if they would pick out the best and send him. Six handsome new boxes at an expense of 15 cents each were procured, and after considerable work six bushels of fine pears were selected from the six barrels. It was hard work, but the prospect of great wealth was before them, nothing less than two dollars a bushel would satisfy their greed, and thus they encouraged themselves about their work. They were neatly covered with burlap on the top to prevent any inquisitive expressman from sampling them, and started bright and early over the road in Munroe & Arnold's big team. It was a rough road and the pears were a little softer than they thought and when they reached their destination they were a "sight to behold," in fact they were so soft that the Hebrew merchant refused to take them and after the vain attempt of a commission house to sell them, it was given up as a bad job. Since then the young men have sat down to figure profits, like this: Six boxes, 90 cents; express, 75 cents; total, $1.65; profit—well, they haven't arrived at that point yet, and the partnership is dissolved.

A party of gentlemen, from New York and Brooklyn, visited Greenville, N. J., last Thursday, and witnessed a test—the Enos Elevated Electric Railway system, with the Daft motor. As this enterprise originated in this town, it may be of interest to some of our readers to know the opinions as expressed by some of the leading New York papers. The Tribune says, "The insufficiency of horse-power as a means of transportation was practically illustrated by the collapse of a carriage, which carried eight of the visitors, breaking down before it reached the scene of experiments, so that the minds of the occupants were in a receptive mood when the electric railway was finally reached. The car was run up and down the track around a sharp turn and on a steep grade. It was easily controlled and stopped at any point." The Times says, "The car moved without a jerk and was run at varying speed up the track and back at a high rate of speed, and stopped as if it had hit a feather bumper." The Sun says, "The car was handled with great ease and precision and was stopped with surprising quickness when going at a high rate of speed."

We are pleased to see that Mr. F. D. Tarlton, our leading dry goods merchant, is so far recovered from his recent painful accident as to again be at the store.

Mr. Chas. A. Basford has recently purchased, to breed with his carrier pigeons, several that have made over 700 miles. One pair went from Charleston, S. C., to Boston.

A GOLDEN CHANCE

FOR PURCHASERS OF Winter Dress Goods.

A tremendous break in prices owing to the unprecedented warm season.

Last week we anounced a sale of Dress Goods, such values as were never offered before. This week we have made another purchase of the Gilbert Manufactory Goods, Not one style of which have we shown before this season, and we place on our counters to-day for the first time 100 pieces of the Geo. H, Gilbert Manufacturing Co.'s finest qualities of Dress Goods, at from one-third to one-half early season prices.

We quote one lot of 12 pieces Figured Novelties, early season's price $1.50, price to-day 50 cents per yard; these goods make a beautiful Street Costume or House Dress, and is the greatest sacrifice we have ever known in desirable goods.

35 pieces Combination Dress Goods, Stripes and Plaids to match, at 50 cents per yard, are now being shown at the other stores at $1 and $1.25 per yard.

20 pieces Diagonal Mixtures and Stripes at 50 cents per yard, the regular price of these goods has been 90 cents a yard all the season, this presents an exceptional opportunity to buy staple Dress Fabrics at 50 cents on the dollar.

The last but not least in this purchase is over 50 pieces Homespun Dress Goods, 54 inches wide, all plain colors, Fine Pure Wool, sold early in the season at $1.25 per yard, we offer the choice of the whole purchase at 50 cents a yard, This lot includes Navys and Greys so desirable and scarce at this time.

Visit our store to-day and for days to come for these great leaders in Desirable Dress Goods at 50 cents on the dollar, and you will not be disappointed. Opened this morning.

Book Notices.

Sixty years of a busy journalist's life at Washington are epitomized in Maj. Ben. Perley Poore's forthcoming book. One of the admirers of the Major recently said that "at a judiciously ripe period of life the Major stopped growing old, and since then, like some of the choice Madeira of which he writes with so much feeling, he has only been accumulating bouquet and flavor." Maj. Poore has been one of the best known and one of the most knowing men in Washington society for a half a century. His is the sunny temperamen delighting in bright, social intercourse Yet his connection with daily journalism and his position in the U. S. Senate placed him always in the thick of political affairs and social gossip. He was ever in the Washington "Swim," breasting the waves with jovial vigor, and never failing to hear or see what was said and done. The Major could never be very solemn, and in his ripened sketches of Washington life every phase reminds him of half a dozen amusing anecdotes. He has a rare gift in telling a story, and his anecdotes are inexhaustible. His book will not only add lustre to his fame as a writer, but is of so unique a chararter and so intensely interesting in matter that it will prove a valuable contribution to the literature of the country. It has mirth for the mirthful, wit for the witty, information for all, and we doubt if it has been equalled by any subscription book since the war. It is being issued by the well-known house of Hubbard Bros, Boston, Mass., and sold exclusively by subscription. Capt. R. F. Dodge, of Beverly, is agent for this vicinity.

THE FIRST KEEN TWINGE.—As the season advances, the pains and aches by which rheumatism makes itself known, are experienced after every exposure. It is not claimed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a specific for rheumatism—we doubt if there is, or can be, such a remedy. But the thousands benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, warrant us in urging others who suffer from rheumatism to take it before the first keen twinge.

The Premium Engraving issued by Peterson's magazine—that paragon of lady's books—for getting up clubs for 1887, is of very great beauty. It is a first-class line-and-stipple engraving, executed in the highest style of art—size, 21 inches by 27—called Mother's Darling, and would be an ornament, framed, for any parlor. Peterson for 1887 is to be greatly improved, many new writers coming to the front in it. Six copyright novelets will be given, by such first-class writers as Mrs. John Sherwood, Edgar Fawcett, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Frank Lee Benedict, Mrs. M. V. Spencer and that rising New Orleans delineator of creole life, the author of Creole Blossoms, etc., etc. Another of the premiums is the Book of Beauty, illustrated with steel engravings. Another is an extra copy of the magazine. You can earn any of them. or all, by raising clubs for Peterson. Specimens of the magazine sent, gratis, to those wishing to get up clubs, if written for in good faith. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A prominent farmer of Bowling Green, Howard County, Md., Mr. J. T. Ridgely, said his four children were sick with sore throats and coughs at the same time. Red Star Cough Cure cured them in a week. No opiates.

Among the notable features of the Magazine of American History for the new year will be a series of studies, by writers of the higheat eminence, on the rise, progress, and development of journalism in this country, embracing personal sketches and portraiture of the chief editors of the century. Another series of studies to be introduced into this popular periodical the coming winter will bear the general title of The Benefactors of New York, and will include sketches of men who have contributed to the growth and grandeur of the metropolis through its institutions, whether of learning, art culture, charity. or traffic.

HAY FEVER.—For several years I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. At the suggestion of Covert & Cheever, druggists, I obtained Ely's Cream Balm and used a portion of it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. Smith, Clinton. Wis.

The December number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine closes the twentieth volume. The opening article is A Moravian Village, by Leut. H. R. Lemly U. S. A., who describes sympathetically the village of Salem, N. C. Mr. Powell's fifth number of Leaves from My Life deals with Lord Beaconsfield, Barry Cornwall and Alfred Domett. How Virtue Triumphed is a pleasant short story by Mrs. Angeline E. Alexander; and Some Famous Paintings by Raphael shows three of the great master's works in outline. There is plenty of Miscellany in the shape of short articles and sketches, and several very beautiful full-page reproductions of paintings by well known artists.

The papers, Good Cheer, Housewife, and Country Home, issued monthly by the H. C. Watson Publication Co. of Greenfield, Mass., are priceless publications and should, in our opinion, be in every family in the country. They are each edited in an able manner and furnish that variety of useful and interesting reading which is so much desired in the home especially during the long winter evening.

from his face. Peace had smoothed his forehead. Peace closed his eyes. Peace closed his lips. Now you see why there were two transverse pieces on the cross. for it has become a ladder into the skies. That dying head is easy which has under it the promise: "This day thou shalt be with Me in Paradise." Ye whose lips have been filled with blasphemy, ye whose hands for many years have wrought unrighteousness, ye who have companioned with the unclean, ye who have scaled every height of transgression, and fathomed every depth and passed every extreme of iniquity—mercy! mercy!

The dying thief rejoiced to see
That fountain in his day;
And there may I, as vile as he,
Wash all my sins away.

I have shown you the right hand cross and the left hand cross; now come to the middle cross. We stood at the one, and found it yielded poison. We stood at the other, and found it yielded bitter aloes. Come now to the middle cross, and shake down apples of love. Uncover your head. You never saw so tender a scene as this. You may have seen father, or mother, or companion, or child die, but never so affecting a scene as this. The railing thief looked from one way, and saw only the right side of Christ's face. The penitent thief looked from the other way, and saw the left side of Christ's face. But from where you sit to-day, in the full blaze of Gospel light, you see Christ's full face. It was a suffering cross. If the weapons of torture had gone only through the fatty portions of the body, the torture would not have been so great, but they went through the hands, and feet and temples; the most sensitive portions. It was not only the spear that went into His side, but the sins of all the race—a thousand spears—plunge after plunge, deeper and deeper, until the silence and composure that before characterized Him gave way into a groan, through which rumbled the sorrows of time and the woes of eternity. Human hate had done its worst, and hell had hurled its sharpest javelin, and devils had vented their hottest rage, when, with every nerve of His body in torture, and every fibre of His heart in excruciation, He cried out: "My God, my God! why hast thou forsaken me!"

It was a vicarious cross. The right hand cross suffered for itself, the left hand cross for itself, but the middle cross for you. When a king was dying a young man cried: "Pour my blood into his veins, that he die not." The veins of the young man were tapped and the blood transferred, so that the king lived, but the young man died. Christ saw the race perishing. He cried: "Pour my blood into their veins, that they die not."

My hand is free now, because Christ's was crushed. My brow is painless now, because Christ's was torn. My soul escapes, because Christ's was bound. I gain heaven, because Christ for me endured the horrors of hell. When the Swiss were many years ago contending against their enemies, they saw these enemies arrayed in solid phalanx, and knew not how to break their ranks; but one of their heroes rushed out in front of his regiment and shouted: "Make way for liberty." The weapons of the enemy were plunged into his heart, but while they were slaying him of course their ranks were broken, and through that gap in the ranks the Swiss marched to victory. Christ saw all the powers of darkness assailing men. He cried out: "Make way for the redemption of the world." All the weapons of infernal wrath struck Him, but as they struck him our race marched out free.

To this middle cross, my dying hearers look, that your souls may live. I showed you the right hand cross in order that you might see what an awful thing it is to be unbelieving. I showed you the left hand cross, that you might see what it is to repent. Now I show you the middle cross, that you may see what Christ has done to save your soul. Poets have sung its praise, and sculptors have attempted to commemorate it in marble, and martyrs have clung to it in the fire, and Christians dying quietly in their beds have leaned their heads against it. This hour may all our souls embrace it with an ecstasy of affection. Lay hold of that cross, sinner! Everything else will fail you, Without a strong grip on that you perish. Put your hand on that and you are safe, though a world swing from beneath your feet. O, that I might engrave on your souls ineffaceably the three crosses, and that if in your waking moments you will not heed, then that in your dream this coming night, you might see on the hill back of Jerusalem the three spectacles: the right hand cross showing unbelief dying without Christ, the left hand showing what it is to be pardoned, while the central cross pours upon your soul the sunburst of heaven at it says: "By all these wounds I plead for thy heart. I have loved thee with an everlasting love. Rivers cannot quench it. Floods cannot drown it." And while you look, the right hand cross will fade out of sight, and then the left will be gone; nothing will remain but the middle cross, and even that in your dream will begin to change, until it becomes a throne; and the worn face of Calvary will become radiant with gladness; and instead of the mad mob at the foot of the cross will be a multitude kneeling. And you and I will be among them. But no! we will not wait for such a dream. In this our most aroused mood we throw down at the foot of that middle cross sin, sorrow, life, death, everything. We are slaves; Christ gives deliverance to the captive. We are thirsty; Christ is the river of salvation to slake our thirst. We are hungry; Jesus says: "I am the bread of life." We are condemned to die; Christ says: "Save that man from going down to the pit; I am the ransom." We are tossed on a sea of trouble: Jesus comes over it, saying: "It is I, be not afraid." We are in darkness; Jesus says: "I am the bright and morning star." We are sick; Jesus is the 'balm of Gilead.'" We are dead; hear the shrouds rend and the grave hillocks heave, as He cries: "I am the Resurrection and the Life; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." We want justification; "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." We want to exercise faith; "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." I want to get from under condemnation; "There is now, therefore, no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus." The cross—He carried it. The flames of hell—He suffered them. The shame—He endured it. The crown—He won it. Heights of heaven sing it, and worlds of light to worlds of light all round the heavens cry: "Glory! glory!"

Let us go forth and gather the trophies for Jesus. From Golconda mines we gather the diamonds, from Ceylon banks we gather the pearls, from all lands and kingdoms we gather precious stones, and we bring the glittering burdens and put them down at the feet of Jesus and say: "All these are thine; Thou art worthy." We go forth again for more trophies, and into one sheaf we gather all the scepters of the Cæsars, and the Alexanders, and the czars, and the sultans, and of all royalties and dominions; and then we bring the sheaf of scepters and put it down at the feet of Jesus and say: "Thou art king of kings, and these Thou hast conquered." And then we go forth again to gather more trophies, and we bid the redeemed of ages, the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, to come. And the hosts of heaven bring crown, and palm, and scepter, and here by these bleeding feet and this riven side, and by this wounded heart, cry: "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power unto the Lamb, for ever and ever."

WALKING IN THE LIGHT.

DR. JOHN HALL'S NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VIII, for Sunday, Nov. 21—The Golden Text will Be Found in the First Chapter of I John, Verse 7. Lesson Text, I John, i, 5-10.

It is frequently objected that Christian teaching is too much about what we should believe and too little about what we should do. When this letter was written by John he was quite old, and the truth had been tried for a long time among men. It is easier to profess belief than to do right, and no doubt many affect belief who act badly. One of the great advantages of studying a lesson like this is that it shows how true believing is followed by right acting, and that the believing is the means of bringing out the good living.

Some of our lessons have been historical. Some have been statements of truth to be received. This is in a good degree experimental. It teaches the actual feelings of believers, the practical religious life of men. Probably there were men teaching at this time in the name of Christianity that they were personally sinless; for every truth that God reveals, the devil and men guided by him will twist and misrepresent. May the Spirit of God help us to see and hold each truth in its fullness and in its proper place to other truths! Then we have a true, living and symmetrical "body of divinity," as the good men of other days were wont to say. Having asserted in the strongest way that it was Jesus the Son of God that he had declared unto them, and this in order that they might be really happy (v. 4), he proceeds to show how this declaration believed ought to act on the life of the believer.

V. 5. From Jesus John had learned the character of God. He was the revealer of the Father, the brightness of his glory, the very image of his person. He, Jesus, had taught men that God is light, with no darkness in him. Heathen gods were men overgrown, with jealousies, passions, crimes set down to them, as one sees in reading even the classics at school. Think of what they counted Jupiter, Mercury, Bacchus, not to speak of demigods, to be! "God is light." There is no darkness of sin or of ignorance in him. He is the infinitely Holy One. Now

(V. 6) if we profess to be in his fellowship, in sympathy with him, as children with a father, as soldiers with a leader, as friends with a friend, and yet walk in darkness, ignorance and sin, "we lie, and do not the truth." This is plain. The darkness is not that of grief, sorrow or doubt, but of wrong. It points to "deeds of darkness." The profession, if not attended by practice, is hypocrisy and lying. On the other hand

(V. 7), if we are walking "in the light"—not of intellect, education, science or even moral courage, but the ways of God according to his nature (as in v. 5)—we have fellowship one with another—for the aim is a common one and such walking is against selfishness—"and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth," or is cleansing us, from all sin. This does not refer so much to pardon, which is full, free and complete, as to the moral effect of the death of Christ on us. Of course, that moral effect implies the pardon, or, in other words, justification goes before sanctification. Here is one who says: "I was lost; Jesus came after me and saved me. To do it he had to shed his blood. Through that blood I get pardon. I love him for shedding his blood for me, and because I love him I am trying to quit sin and to be holy." That man is being cleansed by the blood. He is walking in the light. He loves the holy Redeemer, the image of God, and because he loves him he is trying to keep his commandments. Get this fixed in the mind.

V. 8. If we say that we do not need to try, that we are perfect, sinless, we are cheating ourselves, putting a false view before our own minds and showing that whatever we may know about other things, "the truth" about God and his salvation has not possession of us. It may be about us, in our hands; it is not shaping our thoughts nor affecting our hearts. Let us not say this, but own the facts of our forgetfulness, folly and inconsistency. Then we shall carry out, for we shall feel the need of, the words in

V. 9. We are children—often rebellious and wayward—of God. If we feel the wrong and own it to our Father, "confess it," two things will follow: (a) He will forgive. That is faithfulness in him. He has promised it and he will keep faith. See Ps. xxxiv, 4, 5. That is justice. Jesus Christ has made atonement. The law is fulfilled and honored. God is just and yet pardons a believer his sins. See Rom. viii, 3, 4. (b) He will cleanse us from all unrighteousness. He does not deal with us as with filthy matter, but as with polluted minds. When it is our way sincerely to own sin to God and beg his forgiveness, we watch against sin; we beg his grace to strengthen us against it, and he gives the grace. So we become pure, holy and Christlike. True humility thus goes with true religion. But with self-righteousness pride goes, and hence

V. 10 puts it strongly, "If we say we have no sin," etc. Why, he sent Christ to save us as sinners! It is as sinners he invites us to confess. If we deny that we give him the lie, and his word—which is based on this very fact—is not in us. See Ps. li, 1-12 for illustration of all this.

V. 1. The aged and loving apostle calls the Christians he addressed "My little children." He is telling them these things to keep them from sinning, not to make them easy in sin. "Ah! but," their hearts reply, "we have sinned, oh, so much!" The closer the truth comes to us through holy men the more we shall feel this. So he replies, "If any man sin," here is his relief, we have an advocate with the Father, a representative, a friend, a pleader, one who is fit and entitled to plead for us, for he is "the righteous." We have offended God, but he never displeased him at any time. And

(V. 2.) not only is he righteous in himself, but he is the propitiation for our sins. (See Heb. ix, 15.) He came for this; he suffered as our substitute; he is the "Lamb slain" for us; the Shepherd giving his life for the sheep. Nor was it for you and me—an apostle and a handful of believers—but for all the world, without distinction of race, rank or character, for the chief of sinners as well as for the moral and humane. No human being can justly stand aloof and say, "There is no hope for me in Christ."

V. 3. And if we wish to be clear that we know him, here is the way: we are anxious to keep his commandments. That was the way with the twelve. They knew Jesus in part; they followed him. So with us. The knowledge is not of the head only, it is of the heart also. It is like the knowledge a child has of his mother.

V. 4. He that saith, no matter how loud or public his profession, I know him, and does not obey him, is a liar, etc., as in i, 8. On the other hand

(V. 5), he that keeps the Saviour's words, in memory and in life, in him is the love of God perfected. To put it plainly, in him it has done its work. It has won him from sin, it has drawn him to God. If this is not the case with a professor, it is thrown away on him. "By this we know that we are one with Christ," children of God. So

(V. 6) "He that saith," makes a profession, that he is in Christ ought to walk as Christ walked. See the gospel for this. See Heb. vii, 25. Christ is holy and came to put away sin. A man who truly believes in him will not keep sin, but will try to walk as he walked, be an imitator of Christ. It may be put thus to a child: A man says, "I am of one mind with John B. Gough," and he goes on drinking! Who will think much of his profession?

The following points may be emphasized:

1. "There is none like unto thee, O Lord, among the Gods."
2. Jesus is the revealer of God, and means to make us like God.
3. We are in the way to this when we trust him.
4. We are to confess him, but it is to be a genuine, true confession.
5. Its truth is shown by our life.
6. Christ is the model, pattern, example.
7. He is more than God's son, more than a holy teacher; he is a Saviour, and he saves not by merely teaching us and setting us an example, but by dying for us.
8. Love to him is the spring of good living.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The Young Peoples' Society of Christian Endeavor, connected with the Rockville Congregational Church, celebrated their first anniversary last evening. The body of the church was comfortably filled, a large number of strangers being present. The exercises were in charge of Mr. Orlando F. Newhall, and consisted of reports of the progress of the societies in different places, by representatives sent there for the purpose, interspersed with singing by the congregation. The reports showed the society to be in a very prosperous condition and steadily growing. Among the churches represented were Central, North and Chestnut Street of Lynn, Crombie Street and Tabernacle of Salem, Washington Street and Dane Street of Beverly, Maple Street Danvers, South Church and West Church of Peabody. Mr. Newhall spoke for South Peabody.

Among the speakers was Rev. G. A. Hall, of the South Church, who said he hardly needed an introduction as he felt at home—there were so many familiar faces before him. This society has many warm friends with us, who will ever watch over its welfare. I cannot speak to you of my long years of experience, but as I look back over the brief time of my ministry I remember, with the greatest tenderness, words that came from hearts which seemed to hold a deal of sympathy, and the words of one old friend, as I bade him good-by, I shall always remember, "As thy days so shall thy strength be." And it has given me encouragement in my work. So it is with me now, I can give you no new words, but can speak words to encourage you and stimulate you in Christian work. This night of enjoyment marks the completion of one year of your work and finds you looking forward to, I trust, years of Christian endeavor. God bless you in the good work. What is grander than young people starting out in Christian work, and it is a mighty work for the youth to take hold of. Let the inspiration of youth possess you; life is before you, and linked together with Christ, there is sure victory. Be full of courage, as you are young soldiers in the service of Christ, and if you persevere you will accomplish a good work. We work in His strength and He will make it His victory. Remember you are fixing your characters for life in your youthful days, and in the end you will look back with pleasure upon them.

Rev. Mr. Strong, of Beverly, spoke particularly upon the subject of prayer in the society meetings, urging all to not neglect this part of their meetings, as it afforded great opportunities. Pray for some object continually. Make your meetings a training school in prayer, and they will be a great blessing. At the close of the remarks the congregation were invited to adjourn to the vestry where the young ladies had prepared a bountiful supply of ice cream and cake, which was much injoyed amid social converse. It was a pleasant way to celebrate an anniversary.

The fair of the Rockville Society, at the church vestry last Wednesday and Thursday evening, was very successful. The vestry was prettily trimmed with flags and evergreen and the tables were arranged very neatly. The spelling-match created considerable sport and the best speller proved to be Miss Ivy Williams and she received the prize loaf of cake. The Musical and Literary entertainment, Thursday evening, was well patronized and helped swell the receipts, which, as a whole, was quite gratifying to the ladies under whose auspices it was held.

SPARKS.

Eighty members of the fire department, under command of Chief Engineer Buxton, attended the funeral of the late ex-chief engineer, George C. Peirce, which took place from his residence on Aborn street, Sunday afternoon. The floral offerings were beautiful, among them being an elegant floral pillow sent by the Peabody Fire Department, composed of rare flowers. Among the roses were Marechal Neil, Perle de Jardin, Souvenir de Malmaison, Niphetos, Catharine Mermet, Glaise de Dijoi and others. In the center of the pillow was an engineer's hat front, composed of white carnations, bordered with crimson king carnations, and lettered in purple immortelles with the initials of the Peabody Fire Department. On the sides were bouvardia, tuberoses, camellias, violets, stevia and the elegant flowers of the "Eucharis Amizonica." The edges were fringed with the fine fronds of the Adiantum Farleyinsis. It was over two feet in length. The pall bearers were ex Chief Engineer D. S. Littlefield, ex Assistant Engineer D. B. Lord, ex Fireman Eben S. Howard, who served in the Volunteer Engine Company under command of Capt. Peirce, Assistant Engineers A. E. Johnson, H. A. Southwick and W. W. Reed of the active department. The firemen turned out in dark clothes, regulation caps, and white gloves. Quite a number of the old veteran firemen were also in the line. The remains were placed in the receiving tomb at Harmony Grove.

The Directors of the Relief Association held their regular meeting last Thursday evening and transacted considerable business. A meeting of the association was called for this evening to elect a Director, representing Hose 5, in place of Walter Curtis.

The engineers have made arrangements with Henry N. Batchelder for a pair of horses to be kept at the Central station during the winter, and they will be put in this week probably.

Get your tickets for the Skating and Dancing party, to be held at the skating rink, next Wednesday evening, Thanksgiving Eve. It costs only a quarter and will help out the fund of the association greatly.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Mr. Edward Lucy, rusher of the Atlantic polo team, while playing at the rink yesterday, ran into Mike Boyle and broke his (Lucy's) leg.

Mr. Daniel Richards, who died at Danvers, Mass., on Friday, was born at Atkinson, N. H., Jan. 12, 1808, and was a son of Abraham Richards. He had held a number of offices, was prominently connected with banking, and president of the National Bank of Danvers for 47 years. He was also a director in the Warren Bank of this town, for a number of years.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Lynn and Boston Railroad, held recently, the following officers were elected: President, Amos F. Breed; Treasurer, E. Francis Oliver; Superintendent, Edwin C. Foster; Directors, A. F. Breed, A. A. Breed, P. A. Chase, Isaac Stebbins, William B. Pearmain, William Sprague, John Reed, Thomas P. Proctor, E. F. Oliver.

Mr. John Thompson, son of Nicholas Thompson, on Harris street, died at his home after a long illness, of consumption. For many years he was employed by Nathan Bushby at farming, and he also worked in the highway department. During the past four months he has spent a good deal of his time with his brother-in-law, Mr. Philip Coleman. He was 28 years of age, honest and industrious.

Rev. Mr. Sprague, we regret to learn, has been under the weather for some days with a severe cold, and although occupying his pulpit and officiating at Mr. Peirce's funeral, he was able to do so with great difficulty. He was obliged to decline an invitation to be present and speak at the meeting of the Liberal Club last evening, on account of his illness. We hope soon to see him in his accustomed good health.

The Boston Sunday Globe next Sunday, Nov. 21st, will have several pages devoted to subjects pertinent to Thanksgiving. How to prepare an A1 Thanksgiving dinner at moderate expense will be told by a score or more of the lady readers of the Globe, in addition to all the regular popular features of the Sunday Globe. Every housekeeper in New England should buy a copy of the Sunday Globe. Leave your orders with your newsdealer to-day.

Throughout the world, this week is recognized by the Young Men's Christian Association as a week of prayer. This season had its origin in a resolution adopted by the International Convention of American Associations held in Albany, N. Y., in 1866, and has been observed every year since at the recommendation of the subsequent conventions. At the Methodist church next Friday evening the subject of prayer will be made a special service.

Mr. H. F. Lawrence recently secured while hunting for antique furniture at Marblehead, a large blue ware platter in good condition, representing the landing of Lafayette. Mr. Lawrence makes the picking up of these relics almost his entire business, and includes the whole of Essex county in his travels. During a recent visit to Boston, Mrs. Secretary Whitney bought two "White House" plates for Mrs. President Cleveland, which came from Mr. Lawrence's collection.

The extract of de-nicotized tobacco, prepared by J. H. Battis, is really a valuable preparation for sprains, bruises, rheumatism, neuralgia, etc. In another column is published some testimonials from people living in the vicinity, who can testify to the benefits derived from its use. They are people who are known, and this is only a small portion of those who are willing to give their names to Mr. Battis. The remedy is for sale by Spaulding and is worthy of a trial.

If things continue as at present, within a few years, there will be a network of horse railroads connecting every neighborhood from Quincy and Hyde Park and Dedham, all the way round by Waltham and Woburn, to Danvers, Peabody and Salem. One of the more important of the contemplated enterprises of this character is the extension of the old Stoneham and Melrose line to Main street in Melrose, and through that street to Malden, and thence by way of Everett to Lynn.

Mr. H. A. Dodge has returned from a two weeks' trip to Maine.

There is a case of scarlet fever at Chas. Porter's, on Holten street.

Union Post 50 G. A. R. have been invited to attend a camp fire at Marblehead.

J. S. Crehore & Co. have taken Mr. C. W. Osborne's currying shop on Railroad Avenue.

Eugene T. McCarthy, Esq., has been on a business trip to the Western part of the state for the past week.

A hearing will be given by the Selectmen, Thursday. Dec. 2, on the petition of the Danvers Street Railway to extend their tracks on Liberty street.

At St. Paul's church, Friday evening, a missionary meeting will be held, at which Rev. F. Courtney, of Boston, Rev. J. B. Weeks of Milford, and Rev. C. E. Barnes, of New Bedford, will speak.

The Oxford League of the Methodist church met at the home of Peter Sim, last Thursday evening, and listened to a very interesting sketch of Mr. Sims recent visit to Scotland.

The school committee have voted to adopt Yaggy's Anatomical Study and Lippincott's Gazette for the High school, and Barnes' Text-books on Physiology and Hygiene for the Grammar schools. They, also, have voted to put a new furnace in the Rockville school.

A two weeks' mission is being held at St. John's church, in charge of Rev. Father McKenna, of Louisville, Ky. This week is especially devoted to the women, and next week will be for the men. There are services at 6 and 8 A. M., and at 7.30 P. M. each day.

There seems to be no doubt but that the Boston & Maine railroad propose to build the belt line from this town to Boston. Surveys are being made through the upper section of Lynn. Already a portion of the Saugus Branch Railroad has been double tracked, and it will not be many months before the entire branch will have a second track. Between Flax and Sluice Ponds an embankment 70 feet high will be erected, the largest piece of work of its kind along the whole line. The land damages are not estimated to be large, save at West Lynn.

An exchange publishes a comparison of the number of men employed at the present time with that of the number who left their places at the commencement of the great lock-out July 12. The sum total of the article reads that on that date 2,113 men went out and that 1,714 are now at work and that the amount lost in wages is nearly one half million of dollars. These figures look well, but they are not generally credited among the men, and they say that if the article emanated from any other source more credence would be attached to it.—Salem Telegram.

Camp-meeting John Allen, well known in this town, now 91 years of age, has taken up his residence in Boston. He was recently burned out in the fire at Farmington, Me. To a Record Reporter, he said, "I lost two houses and almost everything in them. I feel worst about the loss of my papers. I had the manuscript of an autobiography which I have been compiling for 20 years, my certificates and minister's license and a lot of valuable papers, all of which are destroyed. I have come to Boston to spend the rest of my days with my married daughter. I am 91 years old, but don't feel my years. What's the use of being despondent? Why, I never had so much ready money in my pocket before in my life."

An Autumn S. S. concert was held Sunday evening at the South vestry, the most interesting part being that presented by the members of the primary class, under the direction of Miss Floyd. The little ones sang, and spoke with great distinctness, and, though the hall was crowded, nearly all the voices could be heard. The platform and desk were trimmed with grain, corn and evergreen, and a dish of fruit was displayed upon one of the tables. Several members and classes of the main school took part, and Mrs. Chase sang, "What Shall the Harvest Be." The pastor made a brief address at the close of the exercises by the children.

At the regular meeting of the school teachers, held Monday afternoon, the subject was Primary Methods. A brief paper was read by J. K. Cole, after which a general discussion followed. The principal points discussed were the importance of getting the children to express ideas, both by talking and writing, and the best method of teaching reading. In connection with the former, it is a matter to be deplored that, as a rule, teachers talk so much and allow the pupil to talk so little; and it is coming more and more to be the rule, instead of the exception, that very young pupils are taught to express their ideas by writing. A good deal of interest was manifested in the discussion, which was informal, and participated in by a good number. At the next meeting, Nov. 29th, Prof. Hagar, of Salem, is expected to give an informal talk.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Danvers Mirror acknowledges itself in error in regard to Peabody defeating Mr. Switzer. And it thinks it knows a man, a farmer, who can defeat Mr. Newhall next year. All right, bring him out, brother Shepard!

The decision of the trustees of the Agricultural society to hold their cattle show in Peabody next year, which means, also, for two years, is of interest to our people. There is no place in the county where there are so good transit accommodations, as in Peabody. The Fair here will be a big success. We have plenty of room for display of products, plenty of room for the auditors to hear the annual address, plenty of room for a dinner, and a caterer who can provide for the inner man in satisfactory agricultural style.

Harry Moulton, who travelled with him (Spaulding) early in the campaign, left him when he saw he was in the service of republicans, when he supposed he was in the labor movement.—Essex Banner.

That's rich! So that is what Moulton, the chairman of the committee to manage Spaulding's campaign, left him for. That is probably the reason why Moulton, as chairman, agreed that Spaulding should speak in Ipswich, in Gloucester and in Peabody, all at the same time. That is probably the reason why Moulton, as chairman, hired a hall in Haverhill for Spaulding, booked him for that place, and then turned over the hall to French. The Essex Banner had better let up on Moulton. The less said about his connection with Spaulding, in the late campaign, the better for Moulton.

Incendiary fires at Salem, Tuesday, have caused the aldermen to offer a reward of $5000, the full limit allowed by the law for the arrest or conviction of the incendiary.—Milford Gazette.

Take off one cipher and it will be nearer correct.

If four candidates, as is probable, run for mayor of New Bedford, it matters little that the whaling business is dull. It will revive under another form at once.—Boston Record.

One of the candidates is Robert W. Taber, Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F., of the state of Massachusetts. The Grand Master of this Order is now Hon. Wm. M. Hill, who has been mayor of Salem; it will be a coincidence if Grand Master Taber, for that will be his title next year, should be mayor of New Bedford.

The Executive Board of D. A. 77 have issued for publication an address to the public. They claim that the statement in the Shoe and Leather Reporter in regard to the number of men employed in the shops of Salem and Peabody is grossly exaggerated; that the men are not becoming disorganized; that out of those who originally came out at the time the circular was posted, only 100 have returned. They state that many of the employes are obtaining work elsewhere, and claim that it shows that if the manufacturers here do not wish Knights to make their leather, those in other places do. They say the Organization is determined to protect their men.

Gen. Butler, in his argument at Plymouth, although told by the Judge that the troubles here, or the causes of the troubles, had nothing to do with the case of boycott, persisted in getting certain points before the jury. In his statement regarding matters here, he was as incorrect as he usually is. As to his dates and statement of facts, he was all mixed up.

The Newburyport and Amesbury horse railroad have transferred a large interest in their stock to Charles Odell, of Salem. Several improvements will be at once made in the road.

There have been numerous assaults by the hoodlum elements, on employes of the leather district. While in a joyful mood they whiled away the passing moments by heaving brickbats and stones at the men as they were returning from work. These people naturally objected to such innocent amusement and registered their disapproval by turning at their tormentors and threatening to shoot. Their humor extended to Chairman Southwick and he was escorted to his home. One of these days there will be some one that will go behind the returns, and some of these funny fellows will find themselves in the police station.

Marriages.

In Salem, Nov. 13, by Rev. Fielder Israel, Mr. Archibald McDonald to Miss Sarah McDonald, both of Danvers.

Deaths.

In Peabody, Nov. 8, Mary Collins, 63 yrs.
Nov. 8, William J. McCarthy, 21 days.

Poet's Corner.

My Mother.

Still to my cheek in dreams are pressed
Those lips that kissed me first of all,
Those eyes that watched my infant rest
In fadeless memory on me fall.

Those hands, that voice, I ne'er forget,
That smile—each look, and touch, and tone
Survives, a lingering sweetness yet
Of the dear life that gave my own.

Her love that soothed my earliest cry
I could not thank so long ago;
Who sang my softest lullaby
I was too young and weak to know.

No wakening reason taught me then
To prize my mother at her best,
And find her most my angel when
She held me helpless on her breast.

So grew my debt in long arrears,
Till time was lent to learn her worth
Though more than fifty patient years
Beyond the morning of my birth.

Then came the change. I watched the bed
Of her who o'er my cradle smiled.
The anxious love on weakness shed
Was mine—and she was now the child.

Her weary head had done with thought,
Her weary heart with care and fear;
I kissed her, but she knew me not;
I called her, but she could not hear.

There was no pain in that farewell
For her. I bore my grief away,
And wiped the secret tears that fell
In silence with the falling day.

That evening saw her breathing cease;
And round her, as a babe caressed,
Closed soft, like hovering arms, the peace
Of Him her faith had long confessed.

O presence missed, but undestroyed!
I trace thee to the world unseen;
And love will find thee, though the void
Be wide as heaven and earth between.

My mother still! thine image sweet
Will all my life like light attend,
And thou wilt know me when we meet
Where joy's pure sunshine has no end.
—Theron Brown, in Youth's Companion.

Thanksgiving Day.

BY JULIA H. THAYER.

A sacred pause amid the din
And turmoil of a world of care,
The rush of life, the grinding mart—
And lo! a Nation bowed in prayer.
Lord, put our worldly fears away,
And grant a true Thanksgiving Day;

A silence filled with holy awe,
A consciousness of love divine
That closes every murmuring lip,
And shows how bright our favors shine.
Oh, for a grateful heart to say
This is indeed Thanksgiving Day!

A cool retreat where heated Toil
May wear upon his aching breast,
For just one short and tranquil hour,
The soul-reviving flower of Rest.
O pearl of blessings! let thy ray
Extend to all Thanksgiving day!

A trysting place at which the past
And present once again unite,
To hold communion, close and sweet,
With olden dreams of fond delight.
Let not a grief-worn memory stay
In sight of this Thanksgiving Day.

A mount apart, whose summit gleams
Above the vapors sharp and clear,
Above the poisonous mists of earth,
Within a Heavenly atmosphere.
Lord, meet us there, we humbly pray,
In pitying love Thanksgiving Day.

To Her.

[Impromtu, with some roses.]

These flowers hang their heads, because, you see,
I kissed them e'er I let them go to thee,
And that they get their message straight, I send
This note, their sweet confusion' to amend,
But if, perchance, in this I've been too free,
Return the flowers and the kiss to me,
And let no thought of pity thy soul fill,
Send back the roses when and how you will,
The kiss, I prithee, do more kindly treat
And give it to me, darling, when we meet.
—Sheffield Phelps, in Life,

Nemesis.

Compress a little snowball, boy:
Aye make it round and tight,
And leave it in the frosty air,
To harden over night.

And as the gruff boy-hating man
Goes in the morning by,
From ambush safe draw back your arm
And bang him in the eye.

At the masquerade ball in Adin las week, St. Jacobs Oil took the first prize. Nothing strange in this, as it is highly prized in every family where used—especially in ours.—Bieber, Cal., Mountain Tribune.

Hay Fever.—For several years I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. At the suggestion of Covert & Cheever, druggists, I obtained Ely's Cream Balm and used a portion of it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. Smith, Clinton. Wis.

ADVICE TO PARENTS

THE THEME OF REV. DR. T. DE WITT TALMAGE'S SERMON.

How Children Ought to be Brought Up. Sins that Are Inherited—If You Do Not Live Right Yourselves, You Cannot Expect Your Children to Do So.

Brooklyn, Nov. 21.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning on the subject: "What is to Become of Our Children?" The opening hymn begins:

Come, let us join our friends above
Who have obtained the prize;
And on the eagle wings of love
To joys celestial rise.

After expounding from Genesis xlix, Jacob's wonderful discrimination of the characteristics of his sons, the preacher took for his text Genesis xliv, 30: "Seeing that his life is bound up in the lad's life," and delivered the following discourse:

These words were spoken by Judah as descriptive of the tenderness and affection which Jacob felt toward Benjamin, the youngest son of that patriarchal family; but they are words just as appropriate to many a parent in this house—since "his life is bound up in the lad's life." I have known parents that seemed to have but little interest in their children. A father says: "My son must look out for himself. If he comes up well, all right; if he turns out badly I cannot help it. I am not responsible for his behavior. He must take the same risk in life that I took." As well might the shepherd throw a lamb into a den of lions and then say: "Little lamb, look out for yourself!"

It is generally the case that even the beast looks after its young. I have gone through the woods on a summer's day, and I have heard a great outcry in a bird's nest, and I have climbed up to see what was the matter. I found out that the birds were starving and that the mother bird had gone off not to come back again. But that is an exception. It is generally the case that the old bird will pick your eyes out rather than let you come nigh its brood. The lion will rend you in twain if you approach too nearly the whelps; the fowl in the barnyard, clumsy footed and heavy winged, flies fiercely at you if you come too near the little group, and God intended every father and mother to be the protection and the help of the child. Jesus comes into every dwelling and says to the father or mother: "You have been looking after this child's body and mind; the time has come when you ought to be looking after its immortal soul." I stand before hundreds of people with whom the question morning, noon and night is: "What is to become of the child? What will be its history? Will it choose paths of virtue or vice? Will it accept Christ or reject him? Where will it spend eternity?"

I read of a vessel that foundered. The boats were launched; many of the passengers were struggling in the water. A mother with one hand beat the waves, and with the other hand lifted up the little child toward the lifeboat, crying: "Save my child! Save my child!" The impassioned outcry of that mother is the prayer of hundreds of Christian people who sit listening this morning while I speak. I propose to show some of the causes of parental anxiety, and then how that anxiety may be alleviated.

I find the first cause of parental anxiety in the inefficiency and imperfection of parents themselves. We have a slight hope, all of us, that our children may escape our faults. We hide our imperfections, and think they will steer clear of them. Alas, there is a poor prospect of that! There is more probability that they will choose our vices than choose our virtues. There is something like sacredness in parental imperfections when the child looks upon them. The folly of the parents is not so repulsive when the child looks at it. He says: "Father indulges in it; mother indulges in it; it can't be so bad." Your boy, 10 years of age, goes up a back street smoking his cigar—an old stump that he found in the street—and a neighbor accosts him and says: "What are you doing this for? What would your father say if he knew it?" The boy says: "Oh, father does that himself!" There is not one of us this morning that would deliberately choose that his children should in all things follow his example, and it is the consciousness of imperfection of our part as parents that makes us most anxious for our children.

We are also distressed on account of the unwisdom of our discipline and instruction. It requires a great deal of ingenuity to build a house or fashion a ship, but more ingenuity to build the temple of a child's character and launch it on the great ocean of time and eternity. Where there is one parent that seems qualified for the work there seem to be twenty parents who miserably fail. Here is a father who says: "My child shall know nothing but religion; he shall hear nothing but religion; he shall see nothing but religion." The boy is aroused at 6 o'clock in the morning to recite the Ten Commandments. He is awakened off the sofa on Sunday night to see how much he knows of the Westminster catechism. It is religion morning, noon and night. Passages of Scripture are plastered on the bedroom wall. He looks for the day of the month in a religious almanac. Every minister that comes to the house is told to take the boy aside and talk to him and tell him what a great sinner he is. After a while the boy comes to that period of life when he is too old for chastisement, and too young to know and feel the force of moral principle. Father and mother are sitting up for the boy to come home. It is nine o'clock at night—ten o'clock—it is twelve o'clock—it is half past twelve, and they hear the night key jingle in the door. They say he is coming. George goes very softly through the hall, hoping to get up stairs before he is accosted. The father says, "George, where have you been?" "Been out!" Yes, he has been out, and he has been down, and he is on the broad road to destruction, for this life and the life to come. Father says: "There is no use in the Ten Commandments; the catechism seems to me to be an utter failure." Ah, my friend, you make a very great mistake. You stuffed that child with religion until he could not digest it; you made that which is a joy in many households an abhorrence in yours. A man in midlife said to me: "I can't become a Christian. In my father's house I got such a prejudice against religion I don't want any of it. My father was one of the best men that ever lived, but he had such severe notions about things, and he jammed religion down my throat, until I don't want any of it, sir." There have been some who have erred in that direction.

There are households where mother pulls one way and father pulls the other. Father says: "My son, I told you the first time I caught you in a falsehood I would chastise you, and now I am going to do it." Mother says: "Don't, let him off this time." In some families it is all scolding and fretfulness with the child; from Monday morning to Saturday night it is that style of culture. The boy is picked at, and picked at, and picked at. Now you might better give one sound chastisement and have done with it, than to indulge in the perpetual scolding and fretfulness. There is more health in one good thunderstorm than in three or four days of cold drizzle.

Here is a parent who says: "I will not err on the side that parent has erred, in being too strict with his children. I will let mine do as they please. If they want to come in to prayers, they can; if they want to play at cards, they can; they can do anything they please—there shall be no hindrance. Go it! Here are tickets for the opera and theatre, son. Take your friends with you. Do whatever you desire." One day a gentleman comes in from the bank to his father's office and says:

"They want to see you over at the bank a minute." Father goes into the bank. The cashier says: "Is that your check?" Father looks at it and says: "No; I never gave that check. I never cross a 't' in that way; I never make the curl to a 'y' in that way. It is not my check; that's a forgery. Send for the police." "Ah," says the cashier, "don't be so quick; your son did that." The fact was that the boy had been out in dissipating circles, and $10 and $50 went in that direction; and he had been treated and he had to treat others; and the boy felt he must have $500 to keep himself in that circle. That night the father sits up for the son to come home. It is 1 o'clock before he comes into the hall. He comes in very much flushed, his eyes glaring and his breath offensive. Father says: "My son, how can you do so? I have given you everything you wanted and everything to make you comfortable and happy, and now I find, in my old age, that you are a spendthrift, a libertine and a drunkard." The son says: "Now, father, what's the use of your talking in that way? You told me I might have a good time and to go it. I have been acting on your suggestion, that's all." And so one parent errs on one side, and another parent errs on the other, and how to strike a happy medium between severity and too great leniency, and train our sons and daughters for usefulness on earth and bliss in heaven, is a question which agitates every Christian household in my congregation. Where so many good men and women have failed, it is strange that we should sometimes doubt the propriety of our theory and the accuracy of our kind of government.

Again, parental anxiety often arises from an early exhibition of sinfulness in the child. The morning glories bloom for a little while under the sun, and then they shut up as the heat comes on; but there are flowers along the Amazon that blaze their beauty for weeks at a time; but the short lived morning glory fulfills its mission as well as the Victoria Regia. There are some people who take forty, fifty or sixty years to develop. Then there are little children who fling their beauty on the vision and vanish. They are morning glories that cannot stand the glare of the hot noon sun of trial. You have all known such little children. They were pale; they were ethereal; there was something very wonderfully deep in the eye; they had a gentle foot and soft hand, and something almost supernatural in their behavior—ready to be wafted away. You had such a one in your household. Gone now! It was too delicate a plant for this rough world. The heavenly gardener saw it and took it in. We make splendid Sunday school books out of such children, but they almost always die. I have noticed that, for the most part, the children that live sometimes get cross, and pick up bad words in the street, and quarrel with brother and sister, and prove unmistakably that they are wicked—as the Bible says, going astray from the womb, speaking lies. See the little ones in the Sabbath class, so sunshiny and beautiful, you would think they were always so, but mother, seated a little way off, looks over at these children and thinks of the awful time she had to get them ready.

After the boy or girl comes a little further on in life the mark of sin upon them is still more evident. The son comes in from a pugilistic encounter in the streets, bearing the marks of a defeat. The daughter practices positive deception, and the parent says: "What shall I do? I can't always be correcting and scolding, and yet these things must be stopped." It is especially sad if the parent sees his own faults copied by the child. It is very hard work to pull up a nettle that we ourselves planted. We remember that the greatest frauds that ever shook the banking houses of the country started from a boy's deception a good many years ago; and the gleaming blade of the murderer is only another blade of the knife with which the boy struck at his comrade. The cedar of Lebanon, that wrestles with the blast, started from seed lodged in the side of the mountain, and the most tremendous dishonesties of the world once toddled out from the cradle. All these things make parents anxious.

Anxiety on the part of parents also arises from the consciousness that there are so many temptations thrown all around our young people. It may be almost impossible to take a castle by siege—straightforward siege—but suppose in the night there is a traitor within and he goes down and draws the bolt and swings open the great door, and then the castle falls immediately. That is the trouble with the hearts of the young; they have foes without and foes within. There are a great many who try to make our young people believe that it is a sign of weakness to be pure. The man will toss his head and take dramatic attitudes and tell of his own indiscretions, and ask the young man if he would not like to do the same. And they call him verdant, and they say he is green and unsophisticated, and wonder how he can bear the Puritanical straight jacket. They tell him he ought to break from his mother's apron strings, and they say: "I will show you all about town. Come with me. You ought to see the world. It won't hurt you. Do as you please, it will be the making of you." After a while the young man says: "I don't want to be odd, nor can I afford to sacrifice these friends, and I'll go and see for myself." From the gates of hell there goes a shout of victory. Farewell to all innocence; farewell to all early restraints favorable to that innocence which once gone never comes back. I heard one of the best men I ever knew, 75 years of age, say: "Sir, God has forgiven me for all the sins of my lifetime, I know that; but there is one sin I committed at 20 years of age that I never will forgive myself for. It sometimes comes over me overwhelmingly, and it absolutely blots out my hope of heaven."

Young man, hear it. How many traps there are set for our young people! That is what makes parents so anxious. Here are temptations for every form of dissipation and every stage of it. The young man when he first goes into dissipation is very particular where he goes. It must be a fashionable hotel. He could not be tempted into these corner nuisances with red stained glass and a mug of beer painted on the sign board. You ask the young man to go into that place and he would say: "Do you mean to insult me?" No; it must be a marble floored barroom. There must be no lustful pictures behind the counter; there must be no drunkard hiccuping while he takes his glass. It must be a place where elegant gentlemen come in and click their cut glass and drink to the announcement of flattering sentiment. But the young man cannot always find that kind of a place; yet he has a thirst and it must be gratified. The down grade is steeper now, and he is almost at the bottom. Here they sit in an oyster cellar around a card table, wheezing, bloated and bloodshot, with cards so greasy you can hardly tell who has the best hand. But never mind; they are only playing for drinks. Shuffle away! Shuffle away! The landlord stands in his shirt sleeves with hands on his hips, watching the game and waiting for another call to fill up the glasses. It is the hot breath of eternal woe that flushes that young man's cheek. In the jets of gaslight I see the shooting out of the fiery tongue of the worm that never dies. The clock strikes twelve; it is the tolling of the bell of eternity at the burial of a soul. Two hours pass on, and they are all sound asleep in their chairs. Landlord says: "Come, now, wake up; it's time to shut up." Push them out into the air. They are going home. Let the wife crouch in the corner, and the children hide under the bed. They are going home! What is the history of that young man? He began his dissipation at the Fifth Avenue hotel, and completed the damnation in the worst grog shop in Navy street.

But sin even does not stop here. It comes to the door of the drawing room. There are men of leprous hearts that go into the very best classes of society. They are so fascinating—they have such a bewitching way of offering their arm. Yet the poison of asps is under the tongue and their heart is hell. At first their sinful devices are hidden, but after a while they begin to put forth their talons of death. Now they begin to show really what they are. Suddenly, although you could not have expected it, they were so charming in their manner, so fascinating in their address, suddenly a cloud, blacker than was ever woven of midnight or hurricane, drops upon some domestic circle. There is agony in the parental bosom that none but the Lord God Almighty can measure—an agony that wishes that the children of the household had been swallowed by the grave, when it would be only a loss of body instead of a loss of soul. What is the matter with that household? They have not had the front windows open in six months or a year. The mother's hair suddenly turned white; father, hollow cheeked and bent over prematurely, goes down the street. There has been no death in that family—no loss of property. Has madness seized upon them? No! no! A villain, kid gloved, patent leathered, with gold chain and graceful manner, took that cup of domestic bliss, elevated it high in the air until the sunlight struck it, and all the rainbows danced about the brim, and then dashed it down in the desolation and woe, until all the harpies of darkness clapped their hands with glee, and all the voices of hell uttered a loud ha! ha! Oh, there are scores and hundreds of homes that have been blasted, and if the awful statistics could be fully set before you, your blood would freeze into a solid cake of ice at the heart. Do you wonder that fathers and mothers are anxious about their children, and that they ask themselves the question day and night: What is to become of them? what will be their destiny?

I shall devote the rest of my remarks to alleviation of parental anxiety. Let me say to you, as parents, that a great deal of that anxiety will be lifted if you will begin early with your children. Tom Paine said: "The first five years of my life I became an infidel." A vessel goes out to sea; it has been five days out. A storm comes on it; it springs a leak; the helm will not work; everything is out of order. What is the matter? The ship is not seaworthy, and never was. It is a poor time to find it out now. Under the fury of the storm the vessel goes down, with 250 passengers, to a watery grave. The time to make the ship seaworthy was in the dry dock before it started. Alas for us, if we wait until our children get out into the world before we try to bring upon them the influence of Christ's religion! I tell you, the dry dock of the Christian home is the place where we are to fit them for usefulness and for heaven. In this world, under the storm of vice and temptation, it will be too late. In the domestic circle you decide whether your child shall be truthful or false—whether it shall be generous or penurious. You can tell by the way a child divides an apple just what its future history will be. You ought to oversee the process. If the child take nine-tenths of the apple, giving the other tenth to his sister, if he should live to be one hundred he will be grasping and want the biggest piece of everything. I stood in a house in one of the Long Island villages, and I saw a beautiful tree, and I said to the owner: "That is a very fine tree, but what a curious crook there is in it!" "Yes," said he, "I planted that tree, and when it was a year old I went to New York and worked as a mechanic for a year or two, and when I came back I found that they had allowed something to stand against the tree; so it has always had that crook." And so I thought it was with the influence upon children. If you allow anything to stand in the way of moral influence against a child on this side or that side, to the latest day of its life on earth and through all eternity it will show the pressure. No wonder Lord Byron was bad. Do you know his mother said to him, when she saw him one day limping across the floor with his unsound foot: "Get out of my way, you lame brat!" What chance for a boy like that?

Two young men come to the door of sin. They consult whether they will go in. The one young man goes in and the other retreats. Oh, you say, the last had better resolution. No, that was not it. The first young man had no early good influence; the last had been piously trained, and when he stood at the door of sin discussing the matter he looked around as if to see some one, and he felt an invisible hand on his shoulder saying: "Don't go in! Don't go in! Whose hand was it? A mother's hand, fifteen years ago gone to dust. A gentleman was telling me of the fact that some years ago there were two young men who stopped at the door of the Park theatre in New York. The question was whether they should go in. That night there was to be a very immoral play enacted in the Park theatre. One man went in; the other stayed out. The young man who went in went on from sin to sin and through a crowd of iniquities, and died in the hospital of delirium tremens. The other young man, who retreated, chose Christ, went into the Gospel, and is now one of the most eminent ministers of Christ in this country. And the man who retreated gave as his reason for turning back from the Park theatrethat night that there was a voice within him saying: "Don't go in; don't go in." And for that reason, my friends, I believe so much in Bible classes. But there is something better than the Bible class, and that is the Sunday school class. I like it because it takes children at an earlier point; and the infant class I like still better, because it takes children before they begin to walk or to talk straight, and puts them on the road to heaven. You cannot begin too early. You stand on the bank of a river flowing by. You cannot stop that river, but you travel days and days toward the source of it, and you find after a while where it comes down dropping from the rock, and with your knife you make a course in this or that direction for the dropping to take, and you decide the course of the river. You stand and see your children's character rolling on with great impetuosity and passion, and you cannot affect them. Go up toward the source where the character first starts and decide that it shall take the right direction, and it will follow the path you give it.

But I want you to remember, O father! O

ASTHMA.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of

DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

JOHN'S VISION OF CHRIST.

DR. JOHN HALL'S NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson IX of the International Series for Sunday, Nov. 28—Golden Text, "I am He that Liveth, and was Dead"—Rev. i, 18—Lesson Text, Rev. i, 4-18.

No more important lesson than this has been studied, and the difficulty will be to bring into the fixed limits even a brief notice of the many great truths here touched. The teacher will explain at the outset that the whole book is a letter, and while the "seven churches" are formally addressed, the entire book is an epistle to the whole church throughout the world.

A second thing the teacher will bear in mind, namely, that the bold imagery of the book—and this lesson has much of it—is to be traced to foregoing scripture. The Old Testament is therefore the standard by which we are to interpret many of the symbols of the book. Indeed, it presents and completes the unity of Revelation; for while man begins in Paradise, from which his sin drives him, he is seen in the end of Revelation again in Eden, and holding converse with God without temptation and without sin.

Our lesson naturally divides itself into the introduction, the description of Jesus and the message he sends; but for the purpose of the class, it will probably be better to take it up verse by verse.

V. 4. John, the friend of Jesus, the life-long preacher, the writer of the gospel, the sufferer for the truth, the aged disciple, is well fitted to receive and deliver the message of the Church's Head. The "seven churches" in Asia represent, while they are one by one, no doubt, truly described, the conditions of the whole Church in all time. Asia—sometimes called Proconsular Asia—includes only a small part of the continent now so described. It is the Asia referred to in I Peter i, 1; Acts ii, 9; vi, 9. "Grace and peace" are in the usual New Testament blessing. "Mercy" is inserted in the Epistles to Timothy. The description from him "which is," etc., can only apply to God the Father, the "I Am," who is "from everlasting to everlasting." See God's description of himself to Isaiah, Isa. xli, 4; xliv, 6. The "seven spirits" cannot be angels or creatures of any sort, or they would not be placed between the Father and the Son in this account. The lamp of the tabernacle, the sacred and perfect number seven, found in the same connection in Zech. iv, 2, 6, and the fact that the gift of the Spirit are sevenfold in Isa. xi, 2, explain this language. The perfect, sevenfold work of the one divine Person we have brought before us. It is the idea of I Cor. xii, 4, "diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." This Spirit is given through Christ; hence Rev. iii, 1; iv, 5, and v, 6.

V. 5. Jesus is the faithful witness to God's character and law, concerning all eternal things, from God to men. Jesus himself often employed the word "witness." He is the "first-begotten from the dead"; for though there were resurrections before his (Lazarus, e. g.), they were only temporary, and the last enemy came again. But Jesus "dieth no more," and his rising is the ground of all other triumphant resurrections He is "prince of the kings of the earth"; as he said, "all power is given," etc., Matt. xxviii, 18. (Ps. ii, 2; cx, 5.) Then comes the doxology, in which Christ's great work is owned, running on into v. 6. Mark the order—love, washing, making kings and priests, etc. We are to give this glory to Jesus now and forever. We are—all believers—now, kings and priests unto God. (Peter ii, 9.)

V. 7. Christ came once in lowliness. He will come again in glory, "with clouds" of awe-inspiring darkness. The idea is of terror to his enemies, as we see by the next words, "they which pierced him" "wail," etc. To the saints his coming is joyful; it is terrible to unpardoned sinners. Read carefully Ps. lxlvii, 2, from which perhaps this idea comes. But John and all believers rejoice in his coming and in all he does. So "Even so, Amen."

V. 8. The divine Being describes himself at greater length, as in v. 4, taking the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, alpha and omega—"the beginning and the ending"—to represent his eternity, and repeating the language of v. 4, adding "the Almighty." Of this supreme cause of all, Jesus is the representative; and while men reject him now, and in so doing reject the Almighty, when he comes again it will be to assert and vindicate divine right, and his enemies will quail before him. (See Zech. xii, 10.)

V. 9. John now describes himself in language which could apply to no other John than the apostle. "Brother"—how he puts himself on a level with the ordinary believers! All were there suffering for the truth, hence "companion in tribulation;" but all had joy and strength in the kingdom and patience of Jesus. He was an exile in Patmos, a rocky isle in the Ægean sea. The government of Domitian was trying to put down Christianity. The cause of his banishment was for "the word of God" and the witness he was bearing to Jesus. They could place him on the bare, bleak rocks, but they could not rob him of his joy.

V. 10. The "Lord's day" first occurs here as a phrase, and soon came into general use. It is a good description of the "first day of the week," the day of his rising. He was "in the Spirit"—not merely as all God's people are "in the Spirit" (Gal. v, 16, 17,) but specially taught, helped and comforted. When God's people suffer for him, he gives them blessed compensation. Notice the significance of the description—the Lord's day, house, supper, people, service. For the voice, as of "a trumpet," see Num. x, 2; Ps. lxviii, 33.

V. 11 gives instructions to write the communications now to be made to him and send them to the seven churches named. There were doubtless many more than these, but probably these are chosen to represent to the future the dangers, duties, encouragements and hopes to be kept in mind by all God's people in their various conditions. The history of the church shows the need of such revelation. We do not take the commission to include only the epistles to each, but the whole revelation to the end.

V. 12. The speaker is seen among "seven golden candlesticks," the description as in the Septuagint of Ex. xxv, 31 (Heb. ix, 2), reproduced in Zech. iv, 2

(V. 13), and representing the churches, many in number, dependent for the light they give out on him who is in the midst. A candlestick by itself gives no light. It holds up the light. Failing in this it is useless. (See Eph. v, 11.) The preciousness of the church is represented by the "golden," as in v. 13, Rev. iv, 4, xxi, 21. Gold is rarest and most valuable of all the metals.

John knew "the son of man," hence "like unto," though his "garment down to the foot," representing rank, and his "golden girdle" showed more dignity (Gen. xxxvii, 3), and differed from his appearance in his humiliation. It is meant to show his glory. (See Dan. x, 5; Isa. vi, 1.) Men toiling were girt about the loins, but dignified persons were girt about the breast. (See Rev. xv, 6. Compare also Isa. xi, 5 and Eph. vi, 14.)

V. 14. The "white hair" of this verse corresponds to the "wool" of Dan. vii, 9, and represents not age, but dignity. The eyes are as in Dan. x, 6. They penetrate and consume. (See Rev. xix, 11, 12.)

V. 15. No covering is mentioned for the feet. There is no defilement in the streets of heaven. The idea is shining, glittering. (See Rev. x, 1.) The "sound of many waters" is from Ezek. i, 24. The idea is of awe-inspiring sound, not joyful.

V. 16. As a wreath held in his hand were the "seven stars," and the sword, sharp and two-edged, is in allusion to such passages as II Sam. xviii, 8; Isa. i, 20; and in Isa. xlix, 2 we see the basis of the symbol. Some of the fathers found the Old and New Testaments in the "two-edged." More likely it is the piercing sharpness that is meant. (See Heb. iv, 12.)

V. 17. "His countenance" suggests the angel in Matt. xxviii, 3. (See Rev. x, 1.) It is clear that it was never meant that the painter or sculptor should represent the appearance of Jesus. It is not a figure to strike the senses that is presented, but one to impress and teach the soul. So John felt the impression (V. 17), and "fell at his feet as dead." (See for parallels Ex. iii, 6; I Chron. xxi, 20; Isa. vi, 5; Dan. viii, 17; Acts x, 4.) It is an involuntary act, not willing worship. There is comfort for him, however, in the kindly "right hand" laid on him, and the words "fear not," as in Isa. vi, 7, in Dan. x, 12 and in Matt. xvii, 7 to the three disciples, of whom John was one. His touch revives. The claim "I am the first and the last" could only be the language of a divine being. (See Isa. xli, 4, xlviii, 12.)

V. 18. The knowledge of Jesus dying and rising again, and having power over the unseen world and over death, was the solid comfort to John, as it is to all God's people to this day and forever. (See I Tim. vi, 16.

The length to which the explanation has necessarily gone prevents any full statement of points to be dwelt upon. The following, however, are indicated: The need of knowing all scripture; the completeness of the Bible; the responsibility and dignity of the Church; the glory of Jesus Christ, her King; the terrible guilt and consequences of rejecting him, and the certainty and glory of his coming again.—Sunday School World.

The Brachionigraph.

A patented invention, called the brachionigraph, is claimed to render the art of writing possible in the absence or uselessness of the hand. It is therefore serviceable in cases of writers' cramp and of paralysis of the fingers. The instrument is of simple construction, and consists of a long, light strip of iron, curved so as to be easily adapted to the ulnar border of the forearm. This splint is sewn into a casing of supple leather material, shaped so as to form a kind of gauntlet or sleeve for the forearm. The gauntlet is fastened to the forearm by an ingenious arrangement of screw hooks and studs, allowing of an adjustable degree of pressure. The bar or splint carries at its lower end a mechanism with a universal joint by means of which a pen may be held in any desired position. With this instrument the act of writing is performed by the muscles of the arm and shoulder, while those of the digits and thumb are thrown completely out of use. It is easy to acquire the necessary dexterity in the use of the invention for legible "handwriting."—Scientific Journal.

Henry George's Literary Work.

Henry George, unlike Mr. Howells, is not a methodical worker. "I write when the mood seizes me," he said, "sometimes getting off a mass of copy but often vey little. My works, particularly 'Progress and Poverty,' were the hardest labors I ever performed. Many a time I've sat down with a whole chapter mapped out in my mind and been unable to get beyond the first sentence in expression. Yet when I was a newspaper man I could reel off 'takes' as fast as any of them. But it is one thing to write for the hour and another for the years, so to speak. I regard journalistic work as the most valuable training a literary man can possibly have. It is, I think, more important than a college career, though I can't say so from experience, as I never went to college."—New York Tribune.

Why the Women Are Pleased.

The women of the United States seem especially gratified at the compliment paid their sex by the superintendent of the bureau of engraving and printing in selecting the vignette of Martha Washington to adorn the new $1 silver certificates. Mr. Graves has received a large number of congratulatory letters from the friends of the women's movement all over the country; but the present superintendent deserves only the credit of selection, for, as a matter of fact, neither the vignette of Martha Washington nor that of Gen. Grant, which is on the $5 notes, has been engraved expressly for this purpose. They were chosen during the administration of Casilear in the bureau of printing and engraving, and have been waiting for years to be used.—Washington Letter.

Originated in a Kneipe.

During the same year I spent a few days in Bonn, Germany. In a "kneipe" I noticed in the centre of the table a thick cord, the same as you find in some of the old restaurants for call bells. To the cord was fastened a fox's tail, and whenever any one told a dry story or related an exploit that seemed doubtful there was a call for "Fox," and a junior student, who acted as waiter, or fag, as the English call it, pulled the fox's tail and rang a bell. I was told this custom had existed for fully 200 years.

Now if that doesn't explain the origin of the chestnut bell call me stupid.—Philadelphia News.

The Deepest Artesian Well.

The deepest artesian well in the world is at Pesth. It has reached the depth of 3,120 feet, and is not yet finished. At present it yields water of the temperature of 158 degs. F. It is intended it shall reach such a depth that the water shall have a temperature of 176 degs. F. The well supplies 176,000 gallons of water daily.—Exchange.

Within the last few years 45,000 trees have been planted in the streets of Berlin, Prussia.

Mr. Geo. Deuterman, New York city, suffered nearly a month with a severe cough, and having tried several remedies without relief, finally used Red Star Cough Cure which, he says, proved "speedy and effectual."

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

Unknown to Others

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared with the greatest skill and care, by pharmacists of education and long experience. Hence it is a medicine worthy of entire confidence. JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE ATTITUDE of the Salem Gazette, regarding Mayor Raymond of that city, has undergone a change. While we think that paper shows good judgment in favoring the reelection of Mayor Raymond, it is curious to observe the evident animus of its friendship for him at this time.

An attempt has been made, in the opposition to him, to include opposition to the present police force, and some aspirant for the mayoralty evidently sees in such an attempt an opportunity to work on the feelings, and possibly capture the votes of some who have not favored the rigid enforcement of the law in the late disturbances. Those who do not favor the enforcement of law are a small proportion of Salem's voters. They are entitled to little respect or consideration. But that there is a possibility of a few such votes being controlled by the opposition is enough for the Gazette. Because the Manufacturers' Association are pleased with the course of Mayor Raymond and the present government, all the past sins of Mayor Raymond, be they red as crimson, are made whiter than snow.

We believe in Mayor Raymond. We hope he will be renominated and reelected, but not solely because of his action in the labor riots. He did his duty in the late trouble—he did it promptly and impartially, but we are not prepared to say, and do not believe it to be true that any man chosen Mayor of Salem would have done otherwise at this juncture. In the discharge of his duty he has had and has to-day no more ardent supporters than members of the organization of the Knights of Labor. The same is true here. We do not believe that any board of Selectmen, chosen by our citizens, would have done other than their duty in the late troubles here. Rev. Mr. Spaulding is a member of the Knights of Labor—he was in favor of settling the trouble by arbitration—he was not in favor of the manufacturers importing outside help—yet, when it came to, the protection of these men whom the manufacturers employed, when it came to the enforcement of the law, and the suppression of violence, Mr. Spaulding was a unit with the rest of the board.

The same is true of the police. The officer who was foremost in quieting the severest disturbance, whose praises were in everyone's mouth at the time for his courage and daring, is understood to be a member of the Knights of Labor.

Mayor Raymond of Salem, and the board of Selectmen here, are entitled to all the credit they deserve for their action in the riots. But there has been nothing in these acts, that we can see, that should elevate them to the place of heroes, or call upon them the adulation of the multitude. No man, or body of men, who would do otherwise under the circumstances, would be worthy of any position within the gift of the voters of this town or Salem To our judgment, the action of Mayor Raymond and the city government of Salem, in enforcing the law regarding the sale of intoxicating liquors, a thing that has not been done in Salem for years, whether under a license or no license vote, is an act far more deserving the applause and support of the voters. This is true because it came to be a farce in that city whether the vote on the liquor question was one way or the other. It has been a surprise to the rumsellers that they could not do just as they pleased. They had always done so. For this, if for no other reason, Mayor Raymond and the city government deserve a hearty reelection.

We are glad, however, to see the Gazette support Mayor Raymond, because the views of the Gazette on the labor troubles, and those held and advocated by His Honor before the Manufacturers' Committee, are entirely opposite. Mayor Raymond believed, and we presume believes to-day, that the difficulty could have been peaceably and honorably settled at the outset. He tried, by every known argument, to induce the manufacturers to stop the importation of foreign labor. At the same time he assured them that the law must be enforced and peace and order prevail. For this latter assurance he has obtained the everlasting gratitude of the Salem Gazette.

WHEN Chester A. Arthur was placed on the republican ticket with the lamented Garfield, the convention deemed his accession to the presidency an extremely improbable event. Identified with the machine politics of the state of New York to such an extent as to render him obnoxious to the better element of the party, he was placed on the ticket under similar conditions which made Andrew Johnson the standard bearer with Abraham Lincoln. It was done for the purpose of carrying a doubtful state for the republican party.

When Gen. Garfield became the victim of the assassin's bullet, during the long months in which the whole nation watched, as it were, by the bedside of Garfield, few of the republican papers failed to impress upon their readers the mistake that had been repeated by the Convention. They saw in Arthur a counterpart of Johnson, and they hesitated not to express their regret at the possibility of his being called to the highest office within the gift of the nation.

It was a trying time for Arthur during the long waiting. It has been said that he made a mistake in not stepping at once forward, and assuming the reins of government—that had he done so the American people would have sustained him. Yet we think his attitude during this interregnum was more commendable than any other action would have been. When it was seen that Gen. Arthur realized the grave responsibility of his position, shrinking with becoming modesty from assuming the office which he could not avoid, the tone of the press became softened. They began to see what was good in Arthur coming to the front. They gave him their sympathy, and in this they had the co-operation of the country.

We believe Gen. Arthur came to the presidency with a full understanding of his position, and a coscientious determination to do his whole duty. How that duty was performed is a matter of history. Cutting away from many of his former associates, he gave the nation an administration which will compare favorably with the more illustrious presidents, who preceded him. Scarcely known at Washington when he came there, he was the most popular man when he left the office. He was popular because he maintained the position with dignity—because he was easily accessible, and because of a purpose to give the country a clean administration.

He was the choice of a large portion of his party for a re-nomination at the hands of the republican convention, and in the judgment of many of the party he could have been elected. His death leaves but one living ex-president of the United States. The nation will ook back upon him and his administration with respect and pride, feeling that he turned adverse circumstances into the good of the country, and became a fitting successor to the man for whom the nation was so suddenly called to mourn.

THE DEATH of Charles Francis Adams removes another man whose loss is shared by the whole country—no less than by the State which naturally claims him for its own. Mr. Adams was one of the most important personages in the late rebellion. It has been well said that what Gen. Grant was in the one field—the army—Mr. Adams was in the field of diplomacy, by the appointment by President Lincoln as minister to England. His conservative and wise judgment prevented a rupture with England, at a time when such a conflict was the thing which the Confederate government earnestly desired. His policy at that time will go down to history as one of the greatest feats of diplomacy in the life of the nation. Later his services to the nation in the Geneva arbitration matter were indispensable. For these two events, alone, he will be remembered as a worthy descendant of the sixth President of the United States.

George D. Robinson didn't want to be governor, but he got there. George D. Robinson didn't want to be L. L. D., but he's got that, too. George D. Robinson says he don't want to be United States senator, but—well, we shouldn't wonder. Would you?—Boston Record.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

On Monday, of this week, the firm of C. C. Farwell & Co. had a talk with the employes, stating that they were unable to compete with other manufacturers in the sale of shoes, on account of being obliged to pay higher prices for labor. The men were asked to accept a reduction of 5 per cent., with the assurance that they would not be forced to it, but if they did not see fit to agree there would be but little work for them the coming winter. The employes assembled in one of the rooms and held a meeting, the result of which was a vote not to accept the reduction, and work was resumed. On Tuesday, the grate in the furnace broke and necessitated drawing the fire and a consequent shut down, for repairs. At the request of the foreman, another meeting was then held in the stitching-room, and the matter discussed at length by the employes. A ballot was taken and by a majority of eleven it was again voted not to submit to the "cut-down," as some term it. There has been no strike as reported.—Danvers Mirror.

It might be said in connection with the above that the firm have been offered several opportunities to move their business from Danvers. Among them it is said that Mr. J. B. Thomas, of this town, has offered to build them a handsome block on Foster street, above his morocco shop, allowing the firm to select their own plans for a building, adapting it to their work. Mr. Thomas is a great benefit to a town and we hope his liberal offer will be accepted, and the firm again brought back to this town in which it started.

Some one says it is the hill which produces the echo. And here we have been living all these years thinking it was the holler.—Binghamton Republican

Minnesota has a new Post Office named Lonesome. As Hon. Patrick A. Collins, of Boston, told the people of Lynn that "324 members of Congress" would be "lonesome unless Mr. Lovering should be re-elected," that will be their post office address after March 4th. It was established just in season.—Lynn Transcript.

A poor man who had a large family broke his leg; and as he would be for some time destitute of the means of grace, it was proposed to hold a prayer meeting at his house. The meeting was led by Deacon Brown. A loud knock at the door interrupted the service. A tall, lank, blue frocked youngster stood at the door with an ox goad in his hand, and asked to see Deacon Brown. "Father could not attend this meeting," he said, "but he sent his prayers, and they are out in the cart." They were brought in in the shape of potatoes, beef, pork and corn.—New Bedford Standard.

The project for a reading room in this town is a good one, if it can be successfully carried out, and the W. C. T. U. display a deal of pluck, to say the least, to undertake it. Such enterprises, in this town, have been tried over and over again, but the encouragement has not been large. A feasible plan, we think, would be to enlarge the scope of the reading room connected with the Peabody Library.

A suburban gentleman tells, this apropos of the chestnut: He was sitting in his library the other day, eating some chestnuts, when a book agent was ushered in. The glib tongued canvasser opened his book, and as he was rattling on at a rapid rate the gentleman, to show his hospitality, pushed the dish of nuts towards him, with the remark to help himself.

The enforcement of the Sunday laws was begun in earnest in Boston, last Sunday, and the views we expressed regarding the decision of the Supreme Court are generally the opinions of those who favor the enforcement of the law. Our dealers here are expecting an intimation from the authorities that they will be expected to conform to the law. It is understood that they will generally acquiesce, in such a case.

To his great astonishment—for he was unmindful of the interpretation that might be placed upon the act—the agent stopped, gathered up his books, and shot from the door, only saying:

"That's an awful mean way to tell a man to shut up."—Boston Globe.

Our exchanges are all telling us that Benj. F. Butler, a non-union man in Peabody, has been followed by strikers, to and from his work, and whe otherwise molested him. What a pity that one of our foremost men, he who before the emancipation proclamation of our beloved President, declared slaves as chattels and contraband of war, whose record was one of the best in those dark days of the rebellion; who has fought fearlessly his many enemies in political life, who has been rewarded for his energy by the people of his State with the highest office that they could bestow, that he should be so dogged, and that too, at a time when he is maintaining the rights of the working men in the courts of a distant county against the tyranny of shoddy leather manufacturers, or perhaps if the leather wasn't shoddy, it might have been made into shoddy shoes, nice looking, but with brown paper innersoles, to delude the hardworking laborer, by the nicety of the looks and the cheapness of the price, but ready to collapse on the first foggy morning that it is worn. We say, what a pity that a populace so well provided for by the wealth of the town, in the munificent pay they have given their workmen, and their liberality in building barracks for their imported workmen, that the authorities should allow one who holds so brave, manly and worthy a position in life, to be assailed as a scab. But possibly, it may only have been a namesake, seeking the profession and pay of a tanner, and sending his large earnings into the wilds of Maine, or the Canadas.—Georgetown Advocate.

J. A. L. Whittier has resigned his position as notary public.—Boston Advertiser.

Business in the State prison is probably a little dull.

The Knights of Labor seem determined to enter the local political field. In Boston they will support George E. McNeill, a lively greenbacker and Knight of Labor, and it is said that Henry George will come over from New York and speak in his favor. In Lawrence they are intending to support Col. John P. Sweeney.

It is understood that W. S. Mackintire, of the firm of Merrill & Mackintire, in Salem, has been asked to have his name used in connection with an aldermanic nomination. Mr. Mackintire is one of Salem's wide awake business men, and his election would be a wise thing on the part of the citizens of our neighboring city.

Considerable effort is being made by the friends of the Law and Order League in the cities of this Commonwealth, to increase the no-license vote. The vote for license has been largely in the cities, and it has been claimed that a large portion of citizens have never voted on the question at all, whose sympathies are with the temperance element. In Salem, an effort is to be made to carry the city for no-license. We are afraid it will not succeed this year—but we hope the time is coming when Salem will not be the grog shop of the entire county. It is a difficult matter to enforce the no-license law, in this town, for instance, with the saloons of Salem in full blast, under a license, but a few rods distant. With Salem no-license, and a city government like the present, an enforcement of the law would mean something.

In Bohemia is the title of the latest volume of poems by John Boyle O'Reilly, published by the Pilot Company, Boston. There is a genuine poetic fire in all the verses from this pen, a tenderness, an imagination, a power which gives us real poetry, and not mere rhyme. This volume contains some of Mr. O'Reilly's latest writings, and will be welcomed by all who have read his earlier productions. The poem giving the collection its name is not the largest, but perhaps the author selected it, as characterizing the whole. One of the longer contributions is to America, and another to Ireland, each in its way, strong and impressive.

The new store of W. C. Packard & Co., since the additions made for the use of their carpet and house furnishing departments, is one of the largest and finest stores in the county. With the near approach of the holidays this firm are ready with the largest line of goods they have ever shown. On the first floor they show, in the rear, a line of stoves, lamps and crockery. They make a specialty of the Glenwood range, which they consider the most economical and sensible in the market. They have also the New Elmwood, are sole agents for Salem for the Magee ranges and furnaces, and also keep all the other leading makes. The rest of the first floor is devoted to sideboard and office furniture and the new additions give them here an opportunity, which they have not previously had, for the display of holiday goods. Fancy crockery, toys and articles of vertu are beginning to show themselves for the early purchaser, and in this line of goods the firm have a larger display than ever before. In the basement is shown an assortment of kitchen furniture and chairs, and it is also used for packing. But upstairs is the largest improvement. The cutting through of the walls of the adjoining store has given them a carpet room 127x23 ft. well lighted and filled with everything in the line of carpets, from the cheapest cotton goods to the finest Brussels and Wiltons. In the front part of this story is displayed the upholstery goods, and in a little room adjoining the curtains and draperies. Their assortment of these goods was never so large, and from the cheapest to the nicest no one can fail to be satisfied. Here is also shown, in addition to a full line of parlor suites, the full display of rattan chairs for which this establishment has long been known. They are arriving daily, and there will be 125 kinds of these from $2.50 upwards. In the next flight are chamber sets and lounges. The goods of the firm are largely made for them, and are guaranteed to be satisfactory. Specialty is now being made of odd chairs for holiday purposes and we can conscientiously recommend this firm to the patronage of our readers.

The first lecture in the free course was given, last Thursday evening, by Mr. S. W. G. Benjamin, subject "Persia and the Persians." The subject was illustrated by very fair views, but, as a whole, was not enjoyed by the audience of 400 or 500 who listened to it Griddle cakes are to come conspicuously to the front this winter, says the New York Times, and it is going to be quite the proper thing—so a lady prominent in society avers—for the fashionable young woman to boast of her achievements in this line. Griddle cake parties are predicted.

Rev. J. L. Hill, of the North Congregational church, of Lynn, an intimate friend of Rev. G. A. At the last council fire of Masconomo Tribe of Red Men, last Thursday evening, District Deputy Scampton, of Danvers, was present. He reported the Order in a flourishing condition. Mr. Chas. A. Weare resigned as prophet. To-morrow evening the new degree staff will meet to rehearse the adoption.

John Dorland, of this town, insisted on smoking in one of the Naumkeag cars, between Beverly and Salem, one night last week, although he was told it was against the rules. The man, who was drunk, drew a revolver from his pocket and made considerable talk, but got off the car, much to the relief of the other passengers.

The Salem News in a double-leaded editorial said, last night, that they were being boycotted. There are always those in every community who are willing to condemn a paper that expresses an opinion that is different from that held by themselves. We don't believe the Knights of Labor are foolish enough to attempt anything of the kind. Don't lose any sleep!

Arrangements have been made by which the Methodist church, in this town, will be re-dedicated next Thursday, Dec. 2d. The sermon and dedicatory services will be held in the afternoon. It had been expected that Bishop Foster would be present and preach the sermon, but he is unable to do so. An attempt will be made to have Bishop Mallalieu preach, but, at all events, the exercises will be of an interesting nature. The evening will be devoted to reminiscences by former pastors, all of whom have been invited to be present.

PROBATE NOTICE.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ESSEX, SS. PROBATE COURT.

To the Heirs-at-Law, next of Kin, and all others persons interested in the estate of LEWIS ALLEN, late of Peabody, in said County, gentleman, deceased, GREETING: WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate by Frank C. Merrill, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him the executor therein named.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Salem, in said county of Essex, on the third Monday of December next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same; and said Frank C. Merrill is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Peabody Press, printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-fourth day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

"For dull November skies,
And barns with harvest filled,
We thank thee, Lord, who richly blessed
The land Thy servants tilled,
The year to come is Thine,
Thou knowest what will be;
Send rain and dew and wind and sun
As seemeth best to Thee."

The will of the late Major Lewis Allen was filed to-day in the Probate Court. After making several small bequests, Mr. Allen leaves to Frank C. Merrill, as trustee, the real estate on Main and Central streets, known as Allen's block, and One Hundred shares of the capital stock of the Warren National Bank, together with ten shares of the First National Bank, in Danvers. From the income of this fund is to be paid to his son, Lewis E. Allen, Five Hundred dollars annually, for life; and on his decease to be paid to his grandson Lewis, until he becomes of age; the remainder of the income from this trust is to be divided equally between his two daughters, Miss Helen and Mrs. Trask, and on the decease of the last daughter to be divided equally between the grandchildren living. Major Allen also gives a legacy to each grandchild of $200, to be paid when they are 21 years of age, or in case of the granddaughters, any of them, marrying before that age, to be paid at marriage. He gives his front farm and rear farm in Allen's Lane to his two daughters in equal shares. Of the remainder of his property, real and personal, he leaves one-sixth to his grandson Lewis, and the remainder to his two daughters, share and share alike. Frank C. Merrill is executor and trustee of the will.

There was a strike on the Salem & Danvers Horse Railroad yesterday, the drivers and conductors, some thirty in number, having left their work. The difficulty was the outcome of a reduction of 25 cents a day, which it was understood the men agreed to, provided all the men were kept at work. This it was said they did not do—hence the men declined to continue except at the old price. This is one side of the story; on the other side it is said that the executive board of District 30 would not agree to the reduction, fearing trouble from the other roads. At all events a strike was ordered, and lasted till this morning, when a settlement was reached between the directors of the road and the executive board of District 30, by which the company hires what men they want at $2.00 a day, and 25 cents an hour for extra work.

News has been received of the death, in Medfield, yesterday morning, of Rev Charles C. Sewall, at the advanced age of 85 years. Rev. Mr. Sewall was the first minister of the Unitarian church in this town, and is well remembered by the older members of the church and congregation, coming to this town in 1826, and remaining pastor of the church for 15 years. His pastorate in Peabody was successful, and it was his first and only one. Of late years he has been in feeble health, and since he was 80 years old preached once, nearly four years ago, in the church here. In Medfield he had served several terms in the legislature, and held other offices of trust—being town clerk until his advanced age and feeble health caused him to decline.

An old, old swindle was worked in this town, last week, on a simple citizen, not far from Foster street. A young man entered and asked permission to leave a banjo there for an hour or two. In a little while another man entered, saw the banjo and wanted to buy it. He was told it did not belong to the storekeeper, but explained that it was left there. The fellow offered to pay the storekeeper five dollars for buying it for him, and said he might offer as high as $15. When the first man returned he refused $10 for it but concluded to sell for $12.50, because he needed the money. The instrument up to the present time is in the hands of the storekeeper, and is worth about two dollars.

The weather the past week has been all things to all men, and a good many women. The rain has come in torrents, the wind has blown fiercely, the lightning gleamed and thunder roared. The sun shone beautifully and at times the air was as mild as in June. Snow squall, which gave promise of the "toughest storm of the season," lasted ten minutes to be cleared away by the sun and a beautiful rainbow was seen in the Southern sky. Black threatening clouds rolled up toward night on some days, only to be followed by the stars in all their brightness. The thermometer lowered itself in the estimation of not a few people, and was again reinstated in its old position. The extremes were from 35 to 70 degrees. It was truly New England weather, that was all.

There will be a meeting of the Essex Club at Young's hotel next Saturday, at 1.30 P.M. Ex-Gov. Long, Congressmen-elect Lodge, Cogswell and Allen will be the guests of the club.

The funeral of the late Major Lewis Allen took place, last Thursday afternoon, from his late residence, and was largely attended by his friends in business and social circles. Rev. G. A. Hall, of the South Church, conducted the ceremony and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved family. The pall bearers were Alex. B. Merrill, C. Warren Osborne, Rufus H. Brown and Nathaniel Simonds. There was a beautiful display of flowers, among them a cross of ivy leaves from Mis. I. W. Thatcher and a wreath of bourgonia leaves and tropical foliage and a large sheaf of wheat from the family. The flowers were from J. M. Ward's greenhouse.

Last evening, Miss Ida J. Gilley, daughter of Mrs. William L. Gilley, and Mr. John Hunson were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's mother, on Waldron Court. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. T. Pomeroy, of the Methodist church, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The bride wore a dress of white cashmere, trimmed with brocaded velvet, over which was a long veil, trimmed with smilax and roses. The couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.—Marblehead Messenger.

Miss Gilley was formerly employed in the PRESS office, only leaving to prepare for her approaching marriage. In behalf of her former associates and ourselves we extend congratulations.

The women's mission at the St. John's church, in this town, closed last Sunday afternoon, with the papal benediction, and the men's mission began in the evening. This mission will close next Sunday—the last service in the evening being public. Services are being held each day at 6 and 8 A.M., and 7:30 P.M. To-morrow (Thanksgiving) the service will be held at 9 o'clock, when there will be a solemn High Mass and a sermon by one of the Dominican fathers. This evening the sermon will be on intemperance.

We wish we were able to give our readers the information as to when the next lecture of the Institute course is to be given. We have seen, or tried to see sevetal members of the committee, but were unable to find out any further information than that there will be no lecture this week. It has been customary to have the course announced as early at least as the delivery of the opening lecture, and this announcement has been anxiously awaited by the public. We wish we could give it to them, but we cannot.

Mr. George A. Warren, who ended his life with a shot from a revolver last Saturday morning, had many friends in this town, and for a number of years had been in the employ of David Lowd, on Foster street. Until recently, he was a member of the executive board of District 77 K. of L., and was one of the locked-out men. His funeral took place Monday, and 750 men followed the remains to their last resting place in Harmony Grove.

The first arrest made for following non-union men was last Thursday night, when Jeremiah Donohue was arrested by Chief Peasley, the charge being obstructing the sidewalks. There was considerable conflicting testimony but the judge thought there was sufficient evidence to fine Donohue $5 and costs, from which he appealed. Edward Needham paid $1 and costs for getting drunk.

Mr. Chas. A. Weare has given up his law practice in this town and removed to Wells, Me., where he will make his future home. A short time ago, Mr. Weare inherited a valuable estate there that at present requires his personal attention. We regret the necessity that takes Mr. Weare from us, as he has many friends and will be missed by a large circle of our citizens. We wish him future prosperity.

The annual financial exhibit of the Boston & Maine railroad shows a total income of $7,541,691 against $6,514,559 in 1885; net income, $2,776,391 as compared with $2,341,860 last year; surplus, $105,000 against $140,000 last year. The expenses have increased $100,000, and the rentals over $400,000, while the interest account shows an increase of $8,000.

Last Saturday night, the police raided David Nagle, on Midway street, but found nothing; at the house of Mary Mulligan, on the same street, they secured a case of lager and a bottle of whiskey; at the home of Ulick Burke they captured a quantity of rum, and at James Mannix some lager and rum. Midway street seemed to be doing an extensive business.

Mrs. Lois K. Grosvenor, widow of the late D. P. Grosvenor, died at the residence of Mr. D. P. Grosvenor, the druggist, Tuesday morning. Her age was 85 years, 4 months, and she has been in failing health for a long time. She was a very intelligent lady and has contributed many poems and other literary contributions to the PRESS.

Last Saturday as a farmer, named Giles, of Topsfield, was delivering garden truck at a house on Lowell street, his horse became frightened at a handbill blown by the wind and ran away. The horse turned into Chestnut street, and was stopped on Glue Hill. No damage was done except to scatter a few cabbages and other vegetables along the road.

OVER WORKED Women

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, house-keepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.

A large treatise on Diseases of Women, profusely illustrated with colored plates and numerous wood-cuts, sent for 10 cents in stamps. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Book Notices.

"WORTH SENDING FOR."—Any of our readers intending to make purchases of furniture will be much assisted by sending to Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal Street, Boston, for their new illustrated catalogue containing over one hundred and fifty fine engravings of choice furniture, with prices giving one a very correct idea of the cost to furnish. The book is mailed free to all who apply for it.

For many years the December issues of Harper's Magazine have been distinguished by an unusual wealth of choice reading and pictures, with a special emphasis upon Christmas subjects. Rich as have been the previous numbers, the one about to be published stands easily at the head of all the goodly company that for nearly forty years have entertained and enlightened innumerable readers. Everything is complete in itself, the serials being omitted from this number. Beside the strongest attraction of The Boyhood of Christ, by the author of Ben-Hur, the Howell s farce, The Mouse-Trap, Gibson's delightful Wood Notes, and the bounteous departments of confidential discourse, of literary judgment, and of overflowing humor, presided over by the geniuses of G. W. Curtis, W. D. Howells, and C. D. Warner, we are regaled with six short stories (four of them beautifully illustrated) and five illustrated poems. Nothwithstanding the unparalleled richness of this number, we are assured by the publishers that it is only a Christmas form of the exalted standard which will be uniformly maintained throughout the year; and the magnificent prospectus detailing the coming treasures gives a splendid promise to the volume begun by this number.

In these days, when outdoor sports are so generally cultivated, many will read the article, Why We Canoe, by W. P. Stephens, in the December number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, and some at least will be tempted to try an amusement so exhilarating and attractive. The article on the American Sparrow hawk is full of interest just now, as showing how easily it could be tamed and used instead of a scarecrow to keep off grain-devouring birds. A venturesome young lady, Miss Taylor, tells of what she beheld at one of the Great Thirsty Dances among the Indians, till its horrors overpowered her. The Treatment of Criminals, with a careful account of the Elmira Reformatory, is an article to be read and studied carefully. A Winter in Jamaica is a sketch of West India travel, very prettily told, and like the other articles in the number, well and attractively illustrated. The Fisher-girl of Grand Menan, Two Inspirations, and other stories in this magazine, justify its title of the Popular Monthly.

Injurious Orthography.

A wandering tribe, called the Siouxs
Wear moccasins, having no shiouxs.
  They are made of buckskin,
  With the fleshy side in,
Embroidered with beads of bright biouxs.

When out on the war-path, the Siouxs,
March single file—never by tiouxs—
  And by blazing the trees
  Can return at their ease,
And the way through the forest ne'er liouxs.

All new-fashion boats he eschiouxs,
And uses the birch bark caniouxs;
  These are handy and light,
  And, inverted at night,
Give shelter from storms and from diouxs.

The principal food of the Siouxs
Is Indian maize, which they briouxs,
  And hominy make,
  Or mix them a cake,
And eat it with pork, as they chiouxs.

Now doesn't this spelling look curiouxs?
'Tis enough to make anyone flouxrious!
  So a word to the wise:
  Pray our language revise,
With orthography not so injiouxrious.

Sleeping in a Water Drain.

At Pesth the other night thirty poor persons deprived of shelter were discovered by the police sleeping in a hot and dirty water drain leading from the Pannonia mill to the Danube. They were entirely naked, and slept with their bodies in the water and their heads on heaps of stones.—New York Sun.

Colored Congressmen.

There are two so-called black districts, one in South Carolina, represented in congress by Robert Smalls, the famous negro pilot of Fort Sumter memory; the other in North Carolina, represented by James E. O'Hara, a bright, well educated mulatto, a native of New York city.—Chicago Herald.

Where Daniel Webster Pleaded.

The old court house of Plymouth, N. H., in which Daniel Webster made one of his earliest if not his first plea, has, after having been used as a wheelwright's shop, been restored to its original appearance at Senator Blair's expense, and is now used for a library. —Chicago Tribune.

The Old Umbrella.

The old green umbrella strapped to the trunk that Denman Thompson uses in "The Old Homestead," was presented to the actor by an admiring citizen of Worcester, Mass., whose great-grandfather kept off the rain with it 100 years ago.

Raisins at Riverside.

Riverside, Cal., will pack about 200,000 boxes of raisins this year, which will sell for something like $400,000. This is the yield of 1,000 acres of vineyard, say an average of $400 an acre.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."

CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

"THE IDEAL MAGAZINE"

for young people is what the papers call ST. NICHOLAS. Do you know about it,- how good it is, how clean and pure and helpful? If there are any boys or girls in your house will you not try a number, or try it for a year, and see if it isn't just the element you need in the household? The London Times has said, "We have nothing like it on this side." Here are some leading features of

ST. NICHOLAS

FOR 1886-87.

STORIES by LOUISA M. ALCOTT and FRANK R. STOCKTON, several by each author.

A SHORT SERIAL STORY by MRS. BURNETT, whose charming "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has been a great feature in the past year of ST. NICHOLAS.

WAR STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS. GEN. BADEAU, chief-of-staff, biographer, and confidential friend of Gen. Grant, and one of the ablest and most popular of living military writers, will contribute a number of papers describing in clear and vivid style some of the leading battles of the civil war. They will be panoramic descriptions of single contests or short campaigns presenting a sort of literary picture gallery of the grand and heroic contests in which the parents of many a boy and girl of to-day took part.

THE SERIAL STORIES include "Juan and Juanita," an admirably written story of Mexican life, by Francis Courtenay Baylor, author of "On Both Sides"; also, Jenny's Boarding-House," by James Otis, a story of life in a great city.

SHORT ARTICLES, instructive and entertaining, will abound. Among these are: "How a Great Panorama is Made," by Theodore R. Davis, with profuse illustrations; "Winning a Commission" (Naval Academy), and "Recollections of the Naval Academy"; "Boring for Oil" and "Among the Gas-wells," with a number of striking pictures; "Child Sketches from George Eliot," by Julia Magruder; "Victor Hugo's Tales to His Grandchildren," recounted by Brander Matthews; "Historic Girls," by E. S. Brooks. Also interesting contributions from Nora Perry, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Joaquin Miller, H. H. Boyesen, Washington Gladden, Alice Wellington Rollins, J. T. Trowbridge, Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka, Noah Brooks, Grace Denio Litchfield, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. S. M. B. Platt, Mary Mapes Dodge, and many others, etc., etc.

The subscription price of ST. NICHOLAS is $3.00 a year; 25 cents a number. Subscriptions are received by booksellers and newsdealers everywhere, or by the publishers. New volume begins with the November number. Send for our beautifully illustrated catalogue (free) containing full prospectus, etc. etc. THE CENTURY CO., New York.

THE CENTURY,

FOR 1886-87.

The Century is an illustrated monthly magazine, having a regular circulation of about two hundred thousand copies, often reaching and sometimes exceeding two hundred and twenty-five thousand. Chief among its many attractions for the coming year is a serial which has been in active preparation for sixteen years. It is a history of our own country in its most critical time, as set forth in

THE LIFE OF LINCOLN,

BY HIS CONFIDENITAL SECRETARIES, JOHN G. NICOLAY AND COL. JOHN HAY.

This great work, begun with the sanction of President Lincoln, and continued under the authority of his son, the Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, is the only full and authoritative record of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Its authors were friends of Lincoln before his presidency: they were most intimately associated with him as private secretaries throughout his term of office, and to them were transferred upon Lincoln's death all his private papers. Here will be told the inside history of the civil war and of President Lincoln's administration,—important details of which have hitherto remained unrevealed, that they might first appear in this authentic history. By reason of the publication of this work THE WAR SERIES, which has been followed with unflagging interest by a great audience, will occupy less space during the coming year. Gettysburg will be described by Gen. Hunt, (Chief of the Union Artillery) Gen. Longstreet, Gen. E. M. Law, and others. Chickamauga, by Gen. D. H. Hill; Sherman's March to the Sea, by Generals Howard and Slocum. Generals Q. A. Gilmore, Wm. F. Smith, John Gibbon, Horace Porter and John S. Mosby will describe special battles and incidents. Stories of naval engagements, prison life, etc., etc., will appear.

NOVELS AND STORIES.

"The Hundredth Man," a novel by Frank R Stockton, author of "The Lady or the Tiger," etc., begins in November. Two novelettes by George W. Cable, stories by Mary Hallock Foote, "Uncle Remus," Julian Hawthorne, Edward Eggleston ond other prominent American authors will be printed during the year.

SPECIAL FEATURES

with illustrations, include a series of articles on affairs in Russia and Siberia, by George Kennan, author of "Tent Life in Siberia," who has just returned from a most eventful visit to Siberian prisons; papers on the Food Question, with reference to its bearing on the Labor Problem; English Cathedrals; Dr. Eggleston's Religious Life in the American Colonies; Men and Women of Queen Anne's Reign, by Mrs. Oliphant; Clairvoyance Spiritualism, Astrology, etc., by the Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., editor of the Christian Advocate; astronomical papers; articles throwing light on Bible History, etc.

PRICES. A FREE COPY.

Subscription price, $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number. Dealers, post-masters, and the publishers take subscriptions. Send for our beautifully illustrated 24-page catalogue (free), containing full prospectus, etc., including a special offer by which new readers can get back numbers to the beginning of the War Series at a very low price. A specimen copy (back number) will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

Published Monthly

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

FIRST NUMBER READY DECEMBER 15th.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE will be in the widest sense a magazine of general literature, and each number will be fully illustrated.

Some of the most notable papers to appear during the first year are a series of UNPUBLISHED LETTERS OF THACKERAY of very great autobiographical value; EX-MINISTER E. B. WASHBURNE'S REMINISCENCES OF THE SIEGE AND COMMUNE OF PARIS; GLIMPSES AT THE DIARIES OF GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, Minister to France at the close of the last century (giving descriptions of social life and character at the time); a collection of contemporary letters describing EARLY NEW YORK AND NEW ENGLAND SOCIETY.

There is much excellent fiction, including a serial by HAROLD FREDERIC; stories extending through several numbers by H. C. BUNNER, J. S. OF DALE, and others; and short stories by R. L. STEVENSON, JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, T. A. JANVIER, MISS JEWETT, OCTAVE THANET, H. H. BOYESEN, MISS CROSBY, and a host of others.

Notable special papers to be published very early are General F. A. WALKER'S on SOCIALISM; DR. WILLIAM HAYES WARD'S on BABYLONIAN CYLINDERS; MR. JOHN C. ROPES' on the PORTRAITS OF CÆSAR; Captain GREENE'S on COAST DEFENCE, etc., etc.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE will be published at $3.00 a year, or 25 cents a copy. Subscriptions may be sent to any newsdealer or bookseller, or to mother! that it is what you do that is going to affect your children, and not what you say. You tell your children to become Christians while you are not, and they will not. Do you think Noah's family would have gone into the ark if he had not gone in? They would say: "No, there is something about that boat that is not right; father has not gone in." You cannot push children into the kingdom of God; you have got to pull them in. There has been many a general in a tower or castle looking at his army fighting, but that is not the kind of a man to arouse enthusiasm among his troops. It is a Garibaldi or Napoleon I who leaps into the stirrups, and dashes into the conflict, and has his troops following him with wild huzza. So you cannot stand off in your impenitent state and tell your children to go ahead into the Christian life, and have them go. You must yourself dash into the Christian conflict; you must lead them and not tell them to go. Do you know that all the instruction you give to your children in a religious direction goes for nothing unless you illustrate it in your own life? The teacher at the school takes a copybook, writes a specimen of good writing across the top of the page, but he makes a mistake in one letter of the copy. The boy comes along on the next line, copies the top line and makes the mistake, and if there be fifteen lines on that page they will have the mistake there was in the copy on the top. The father has an error in this life —a very great error. The son comes along and copies it now, to-morrow, next year, copies it to the day of his death. It is what you are, not so much what you teach.

Have a family altar. Let it be a cheerful place, the brightest room in your house. Do not wear your children's knees out with long prayers. Have the whole exercise spirited. If you have a melodeon, or an organ, or a piano, in the house, have it open. Then lead in prayer. If you cannot make a prayer of your own, take Matthew Henry's prayers or the Episcopal prayer book. None better than that. Kneel down with your little ones morning and night; commend them to God. Do you think they will get over it? Never! After you are under the sod a good many years there will be some powerful temptation around that son, but the memory of father and mother at morning and evening prayers will have its effect upon him; it will bring him back from the path of sin and death.

But I want you to make a strict mark, a sharp, plain line, between innocent hilarity on the part of your children and a vicious proclivity. Do not think your boys will go to ruin because they make a racket. A glum, unresponsive child makes the worst form of a villain. Children, when they are healthy, always make a racket. I want you at the very first sign of depravity in the child to correct it. Do not laugh because it is smart. If you do you will live to cry because it is malicious. Do not talk of your children's frailties lightly in their presence, thinking they do not understand you: they do understand. Do not talk disparagingly of your child, making him feel that he is a reprobate. Do not say to your little one, "You're the worst child I ever knew." If you do he will be the worst man you ever knew.

Are your children safe for heaven? You can tell better than any one else. I put to you the question: "Are your children safe for heaven?" I heard of a mother, who when the house was afire, in the excitement of the occasion got out a great many valuable things—many choice articles of furniture—but did not think to ask until too late: "Is my child safe?" It was too late then. The flames had encircled all; the child was gone! Oh, my dear friend, when sea and land shall burn in the final conflagration will your children be safe?

I wonder if what I have said this morning has not struck a chord in some one in the audience who had a good father and mother, but who is not yet a Christian? Is that your history?

Do you know why you came here this morning? God sent you to have that memory revived. Your dear Christian mother, how she loved you! You remember when you were sick how kindly she attended you; the night was not too long, and you never asked her to turn the pillow but she did it! You remember her prayers also; you remember how some of you—I do not know where the man is in the audience—how some one here broke his mother's heart. You remember her sorrow over your waywardness, you remember the old place where she did you so many kindnesses; the chairs, the table, the door sill where you played; the tones of her voice. Why, you can think them back now. Though they were borne long ago on the air, they come ringing through your soul to-day, calling you by the first name. You are not "Mr." to her; it is just your plain, first name. Is not this the time when her prayers will be answered? Do you not think that God sent you in to-day to have that memory of her revived? If you should come to Christ this morning, amid all the throngs of heaven, the gladdest of them would be your Christian parents who are in glory waiting for your redemption. Angels of God, shout the tidings, the lost has come back again; the dead is alive! Ring all the bells of heaven at the jubilee! Ring! Ring!

A New Jersey Madstone.

Benjamin Titus, of Trenton, N. J., has somewhat of a mania for collecting curiosities. Among his latest acquisitions is quite a large specimen of what is commonly known as the madstone. Before it was accidentally broken by a fall on a stone floor it was about seven inches long and an inch thick and shaped like a calf's tongue. On wetting the finger and applying it to the stone the latter will adhere to the skin and can only be pulled off with considerable exertion. Should there be a cut on the finger Mr. Titus says that this application will cause pains to shoot up the arm as far as the shoulder. According to the popular belief madstones are supposed to cure rattlesnake bites and to preclude all necessity for sending a dog bitten mortal across to M. Pasteur. The stone is extremely hard, although very light in weight, and it is of a dull gray color. The present owner has never had a chance to test its virtues.—Chicago Herald.

Pedestrian Tours by an Empress.

Though the empress of Austria is no longer allowed to take horse exercise, she is using her returning strength to make extensive pedestrian excursions in the neighborhood of Ischl. Her household find it difficult, in fact, to fall in with their imperial mistress' new ways, for she not only walks long distances, but gets up at abnormal hours in the morning to start on her journeys. Last Monday she was up just after 4 a. m. in order to start for the Lac de Grundl, and only got back to Ischl about 8 in the evening. If monarchs of the period mean to go in this way intending courtiers will soon have to pass an examination in athletics, including the walking of a measured mile.—London Figaro.

A Plague of Flies.

The towns and villages in South Lincolnshire, England, lately suffered from an extraordinary plague of small flies known as "midges," which made themselves almost unbearable in connection with the nose, eyes and mouth. The air was literally filled with them, and numbers of persons were almost covered from head to foot with the tiresome insects.—London Letter.

IRISH AMERICAN POETS & POETRY.

(Written for the PRESS by Frank Norris.)

An Irish surname is rather an unfortunate one for the fame and reputation of an author, especially is it not a happy one as regards poetry, and very unpalatable to the taste and political feelings of Englishmen. When the first specimens of Irish poetry were received in England, loud was the laughter and pungent the ridicule, at the muse of "simple Patrick;" not that after all the general run of their own poetry was much better at the time, or that they lacked dry, dull, allegorical epics of home manufacture, which now sleep in that "tomb of all the Capulets" where Irishmen are by this time content to leave many of the so-called collections of Irish poetry. But it was decided in those days of exacerbation, on most illiberal and unjust grounds, that there was an incompatibility between poetry and all elegant literature, and the character and institutions of the Irish people; and, strange as it may appear, in spite of a general advance in liberality, and of proofs to the contrary which individuals of Ireland have, from time to time, given in their writings, we still occasionally detect a lingering of the same opinion.

That in Ireland, a country oppressed and down-trodden for centuries, and where every contrivance of the diabolic ingenuity of Englishmen was made use of to coerce the Irish people into abject slavery and ignorance, with a view to their final extirpation, the useful should take the lead of the ornamental; and that the mechanical arts, with the sciences that suggest and perfectionate them, should leave little time for the cultivation of the graces of the belles lettres, we can readily admit. But the little the Irish have done of late years, is good; and instead of wondering that they have not done more, we are surprised, under the circumstances, they have done so much; and we insist that they have done enough to prove that the incompatibility spoken of, only existed in prejudice and spleen. The birth of a first-rate genius, like a Shakespeare or a Scott, is not to be looked for in every age, and if Ireland has produced none such, no more has France or Italy, or any of the old countries of Europe, if we except Germany with her Goethe and Schiller, since the period at which Irish literature (that is writings in the English language by Irishmen) may be said to have commenced. In this time, however, she has responded to the inspirations of genius; and in what she has done, has respectably kept pace with the general career of English authors. In this time, only to mention a few that are best known, she has produced Steele, Sterne, Swift, Burke, Sheridan, Maginn, Mahoney, (Father Prout), Knowles, Moore, Banim, Carleton, Griffen, Balfe, Goldsmith, Richard Chenevix Trench, De Vere, Allingham, Edward Dowden, Justin McCarthy, and the distinguished literateur who died the other day, Sir Samuel Ferguson, who as a poet, would be alone sufficient to relieve Irish poetry from the ridicule drawn down upon it by biased English critics, and whose popularity in his own country must be taken as an irrefragable proof of the existence of a good taste among the Irish generally. In this time she has established a most respectable periodical literature, and more than one of her magazines might be models, both in feeling and taste, to some of the "hightoned" monthlies of England.

At this moment she can boast of a considerable number of living authors, and (we are happy to make this addition) of authoresses, who write with purity and elegance, and occasionally with much strength and originality.

It has always been the custom in England to place to the credit side of English literature illustrious Irishmen, whose names were such as would not of themselves denote their owner's place of birth; hence it is that many of the authors named above are spoken of, at this late day, as Englishmen, whereas authors, whose names are distinctively Irish, have been passed by in silent contempt.

The American people have been altogether too prone to ape the manners and customs of the "mother country." Hence it is that American literateurs, influenced by the prejudiced opinions of English critics, have not deigned to notice the productions of Irish genius. Longfellow in his anthology of European poetry, found a place for every country in Europe except Ireland. A change for the better, in this respect, has taken place in this country, and Irish writers receive their due meed of praise.

It is my intention in this article to briefly refer to those writers, Irish by birth or parentage, who have made their mark as poets in the literature of the United States. I need only mention among the illustrious dead, such poets as John Augustus Shea, author of that exquisite lyric, "The Ocean;" Thomas Darcy McGee, author of "The Celtic Cross," "The Penitent Raven," and "The Irish wife;" Abraham J. Ryan, "the poet priest" of the South, who wrote "The Conquered Banner," "Erin's Flag" and "The Song of the Mystic;" Dr. Robert Dwyer Joyce, author of the two fine epic poems, "Dierdre" and "Blanid;" Richard Henry Wilde, author of "My Life is Like a Summer Rose;" Joseph Brenan, author of a remarkable poem, "Blindness," which I am almost tempted to quote, and also of an exquisite love song to his wife in Ireland, written while he was an exile in this country; Richard Dalton Williams, author of that sweetly pathetic poem, "The Dying Girl;" Colonel Theodore O'Hara, author of "The Bivouac of the Dead;" Mrs. Mary A. Ford (Una), author of "Work is Worship;" Fannie Parnell, author of a small volume of poems, vigorous, patriotic, rhythmical, and many of them marked with pathos and imaginative power of which "Post Mortem," "Ireland Mother," and "Dragons' Teeth" are, perhaps, the best; Charles Graham Halpine (Myles O'Reilly), author of "Quakerdom; the Formal Call," "A Vesper Hymn," and "The Trooper to His Mare;" John Boyle, a true poet, author of many noble lyrics, among which may be mentioned "San Salvador" and "The Robin Redbreast;" Charles Dawson Shanley, author of "The Walker of the Snow," "Civil War," "Kitty of Coleraine" and "The Briar-wood Pipe;" and last, though not least, Fitz James O'Brien, the first paid contributor to "Harper's Monthly," whose story of "The Diamond Lens," originally published therein, revolutionized magazine literature. O'Brien wrote many fine poems, the most noticeable of which are "Minot's Ledge," "Kane," "The Lost Steamship," "The Legend of the Easter Eggs" and "The Cave of Silver."

Among representative Irish poets at present residing in the United States, John Boyle O'Reilly holds the first place. "Songs of the Southern Seas," his first published volume of poems, stamped him as a poet of originality and ability. His other works are "Songs, Legends and Ballads," "Statues in the Block" and "Moondyne," a well told tale of Australian life. Mr. O'Reilly excels as a writer of ringing ballads, and is, I think, in this respect, facile princeps among the world's living poets. Of late years he confines himself to poems of sentiment and reflection. The following poem will give a good idea of his power in this line:

FOREVER.

Those we love truly never die,
Though year by year the sad memorial wreath,
A ring and flowers, types of life and death,
Are laid upon their graves.

For death the pure life saves,
And life all pure is love; and love can reach
From Heaven to earth, and nobler lessons teach
Than those by mortals read.

Well blest is he who has a dear one dead:
A friend he has whose face will never change,
A dear communion that will not grow strange;
The anchor of love is death.

The blessed sweetness of a loving breath
Will reach our cheek all fresh through weary years.
For her who died long since, ah, waste not tears.
She's thine unto the end.

Thank God for one dear friend,
With face still radiant with the light of truth,
Whose love comes laden with the scent of youth
Through twenty years of death.

The pure religious feeling, the consoling hope of immortality, which give such a charm to this exquisite little production, are found throughout Mr. O'Reilly's poems. The impression they leave on the mind is of the most delightful sort, for there is a moral harmony about them—a subdued but happy spirit, such as we have not seen frequently, of late, associated with poetry.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. Leander Joy is about to erect a dwelling house on his land above W. E. Reed's store on Lynn street. The lumber has already arrived.

Mr. Bert Fessenden has started up the stitching shop recently occupied by Mr. Everette Shaw on Lynn street.

Mr. J. B. Thomas has had a large gang of men at work all the fall finishing cleaning up his swamp, and he has now one of the best pieces of grass land to be found in Essex county.

Mr. Oscar Williams is building him a large cellar for the erection of a house on Lynn street.

Mrs. Margaret Galeucia is at the Salem Hospital having an operation performed on her eyes, she having become blind about two months ago.

We are glad to see that Mrs. Warren Shaw is so far recovered from her recent illness as to be able to ride out.

Mrs. John Jones had quite a severe stroke of paralysis last Friday, but is now somewhat improved.

There should be no antagonism between capital and labor. They are mutual friends and allies, members of the same being—labor the body, capital the head. Their connection is vital and can not be separated without destruction to both.

MUSICAL NOTES.

We stated last week that the recital by Charles A. Clark and Mrs. Fernald, to be given in Academy Hall, Salem, Tuesday evening, Nov. 30th, was an assured success from the beginning. Sufficient encouragement had been given by the friends of both performers to guarantee this. But the sale of tickets has exceeded all anticipations. Less than one-third of the seats are remaining unsold, and as there is little choice in the seats in this hall—there being not a poor seat anywhere—there is little doubt that the tickets must be obtained at once by those who desire to attend. What remains unsold on one side of the house are to be had at Grosvenor's drug store here—those on the other at Emilio's music store in Salem.

Next Sunday will be the fourth anniversary of Mr. Clark as organist of St. John's church, in Peabody, and it is a coincidence that his first Sunday in that church was the last week of a mission conducted by Father McKenna, the same priest who has charge of the mission here this week. At the closing service of the mission, which will be public, next Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock, the choir will sing Millard's Vespers in D flat, and Mrs. J. P. Fernald will sing the "Inflammatus" from Rossini's Stabat Mater.

Tickets are being sold by the members of the Oxford League connected with the Methodist church, for a musicale to be given in their church Thursday evening, Dec. 9. It is expected that the church will be rededicated on the Sunday previous, and this will give those of our readers who are not connected with that church an opportunity to see the interior of that house, after the improvements which are now being made. It is expected that Mr. Isaac Littlefield of E. Stoughton, tenor, who is well known and has been heard by our people several times with great pleasure, will be one of the artists. The other performers, as at present arranged, will be Miss Emma Cheney of Somerville, contralto, F. Clayton Record, of Salem, violinist, and Mrs. J. P. Fernald, of this town, soprano, with Mr. Leslie Goldthwait as accompanist and possibly a pianist. The tickets are to be twenty-five cents, and the proceeds are to be devoted to the fund for liquidating the expense attending the repairs on the house.

The Salem Oratorio Society will sell tickets admitting to all the rehearsals of the Society, including the concert rehearsals. They can be obtained at E. V. Emilio's music store, or at the hall, of the Secretary, Mr. Shepard. This is a good idea, and we hope enough interested people will attend to encourage the society. There will be no rehearsal this week. The next one will be December 2d.

Mr. Everett E. Truette, the organist who was heard at the opening of the new organ in the Unitarian church in this town, will give the first of a series of organ recitals in Tremont Temple, Nov. 30. He will be assisted by Etta Kileski, soprano, and Lillian Chandler, violinist.

The Musical Herald (Boston, $1 a year or 10 cents a number) for November has for music "In the Golden Realms," words by Oxenford, music by Berthold Tours; "Forsaken," for female voices, by Koschat; and "Thou art my Hope," by Spohr, arranged by Irving Emerson.

The Hawthorne Male Quartette sing in Marblehead, for the Y. M. C. A., Thanksgiving night.

Danvers supports two courses of first class entertainments, besides the free lecture course. How many would Peabody support? It is evident that the lectures do not kill everything in Danvers. Why should they do so here?

The entertainment in behalf of the W. C. T. U. last Wednesday evening was very much enjoyed and was a success in every way. Mr. and Mrs. Chase and others assisted and gave great pleasure to the audience by their selections. We regret that we were unable, on account of the night of publication, to be present.

Miss Katie F. Linehan sang Dudley Buck's Ave Maria at St. John's church last Sunday morning, at the morning service.

Miss Zippora Monteith is to sing the soprano music at the Handel and Haydn performance of the Messiah in Boston Music Hall, at its Christmas performance. Miss Monteith is a New York soprano, and we are again reminded how few sopranos, capable of fitly interpreting oratorio, are to be found in Boston. Every other artist, except the soprano, at that performance, is from Boston.

Superintendent of Fire Alarm Smart has been over the lines trimming up the trees which hang over the wires.

Pursuant to a notice read in some of our churches, several citizens met in the South church vestry to consider the feasibility of establishing a reading room in town. Rev. Mr. Chipman was made chairman and after remarks by several citizens Miss Saunders said the Y. W. C. T. U. were willing to undertake the running of the room. It is understood that funds were pledged and that such a room will be started.

THE DRAMA.

Nine holiday entertainments by The Puritans of Minstrelsy—such is the Thanksgiving offering at the Boston Theatre. McNish, Johnson & Slavin's minstrels have already established themselves firmly in favor with the public. Under the management of that very wide-awake gentleman, W. S. Cleveland, the forty-two Ethiopian stars now constituting this successful organization will appear to uncommon advantage. A special engagement will arouse particular interest—that of Ramza and Arno—those famous grotesque gymnasts from the other side.

At the Park Lotta will appear as Bob every evening and Thanksgiving matinee. It is three years since Bob has been given in Boston by this clever artist. This is Lotta's last week. The cast will be a strong one in every respect.

At the Globe Theatre Joseph Jefferson appears in Rip Van Winkle.

The hundredth consecutive performance of the reigning drama at the Boston Museum comes on this (Wednesday) night. It is to be a gala occasion, and an immense attendance, of course, is already assured. At both presentations of Harbor Lights on Thankgiving day the house will be packed; and the advance sale, steadily large, indicates a continuance of the popular favor for play and players for many a week to come.

We are the chorus, the merry, merry chorus, will be sung with even more life and spirit than usual this holiday week by the pretty girls in Adonis. Dixey, George Howard, (she is no longer a che-ild of mine.) Gresham, Little Grubb, Amelia Somerville and the other burlesquers will be seen at a special matinee Thanksgiving day, as well as at the usual performances of the week.

A performance of The Lady of Lyons at the Boston Theatre always revives old memories. Sixteen years are swept away and the vast auditorium is crowded to repletion by an audience on fire with enthusiasm, as the well known lines of Claude and Pauline fall from the lips of Charles Fetcher and Carlotta Leclercq! Fetcher was the only actor who, in our day, made Melnotte a living man. Everything he said and did seemed natural; the words when spoken by him lost all their theatrical tinsel, bombast or bathos. How different from the phlegmatic Claudes of to-day! Other times, other men! again we exclaim.—Boston Home Journal.

SPARKS.

William A. Giles was elected a Director of the Relief Association, representing Hose 5, at the meeting of the association held last Wednesday evening.

The insurance on the stock of Wm. J. Reardon, burned at the fire at the Martin place on the morning of the 9th, has been adjusted as a total loss, $3,000 being allowed, the whole amount of the insurance. On the machinery the loss was adjusted for $900, only $100 less than the full insurance. This insurance was placed by O. B. Chadwick & Co. through Salem agencies.

Elmer Skinner, of Hose 5, shot and killed a fox near Ship Rock one day last week.

The course of assemblies usually held by Hose 5 will be started next Friday evening.

The skating and dancing party under the auspices of the Relief Association, which was to have been held in the rink this evening, has been given up or postponed until a later date, on account of the annual party of the Father Mathew C. T. A. society, which, also, takes place in the Town Hall this evening.

Miss Bill, of the choir of the South church, sang contralto at the Unitarian church last Sunday. She will sing again next Sunday. Frank W. Stanley sang tenor.

Our readers will note the new advertisement of Almy, Bigelow & Washburn in another column. It is attractive like the store of the firm whom it represents. Every department is full to repletion with goods selected especially for the trade of this vicinity, and the assortment and prices rival any of the metropolitan stores. It is a frequent occurrence for ladies to spend the day in the large stores of Boston and return to Almy, Bigelow & Washburn's to buy their goods. Their holiday displays will soon be made, and in the meantime they offer a very choice stock of seasonable goods.

Mr. John R. Saunderson arrived in town last Saturday and will tarry with his folks till after the Holidays, when he will return to his school at Brown University, Providence.

Mr. Phinney states that the entire amount for church repairs at the Methodist church, covering $2500, will be raised before next Tuesday, which is a very gratifying announcement.

The Maple Street church, in Danvers, Christian Endeavor society, will observe its second anniversary this evening. Invitations have been extended to the societies in this town to be present.

It is well known that the ladies of the W. C. T. U. wear a little white ribbon in their button-hole as an emblem of their society. A short time ago one of our Sunday-school teachers who wears the emblem asked her little pupils if they knew what it signified. They hesitated a few minutes when one exclaimed, "I know, you've got a secret!"

P. L. Winchester & Newman Perkins will start up the Haskell tannery and shop on Mason street, Salem, the first of January. This removes two more live and enterprising firms from our town.

We regret to learn that Charles F. W. Archer, the correspondent for Essex County of the Boston Journal, is confined to the house by illness. We hope to see him about again soon. Mr. Archer is one of the best newspaper correspondents in this vicinity.

Major Merrill, for the National Pension Committee of the Grand Army, has issued a circular embodying the recommendations of the committee on pension matters to Congress. Each Grand Army post receives a copy.

William Jacob, of the Society of Friends, is expected to address the Gospel Temperance meeting in Franklin Hall, next Sunday. It is a rare treat to listen to Mr. Jacob. The meeting will commence promptly at 5.45 P. M.

As usual the annual dance of the Father Matthew C. T. A. society at Town hall, the night before Thanksgiving, was well attended and much enjoyed by those present. These parties are held annually and anticipated with much pleasure.

The action of President Russell, of the Salem & Danvers road, in immediately offering $200 reward for the conviction of the parties who committed an assault on the occupants of a car on his road, Thanksgiving day, was very commendable.

The Fair in aid of the Society of Workers for a Free Home for Aged Women, will be held in Horticultural Hall, Boston, Dec. 6th to 11th. Miss Caroline Burnap has charge of the Home, and at her recent visit to the W. C. T. U. so interested the members that they, with the aid of other friends, will have a Peabody table, which will be under charge of Mrs. George B. Miller. Visitors to the city next week will aid a most worthy object by visiting the Fair.

Last Wednesday evening about 6.45 o'clock, fire was discovered in the barn of James Buxton on Mt. Vernon street. Mr. Buxton's attention was attracted by the stamping of his horse, and thinking that the animal had got loose, he went out to see and discovered that the barn was in flames. He gave the alarm and Charles H. Estes pulled in box 23 on Grove street. The first sound of this box had only just struck when box 19 followed by box 25 came in, mixing up the alarm badly, but as the first box registered all right on the indicators, Hose 1, H. & L. 1 and Steamer 1, from the Central Station, and Hose 4 made a quick response and in a very few minutes had water on the burning building, confining the flames to the barn and shed. The horse and vehicles had been taken out by Mr. Buxton when he discovered the fire. The fire was all out in about fifteen minutes from the arrival of the department. The roof of the barn was burned partly off and the building gutted. The total loss was about $350. The barn was insured for $100 in the South Danvers Mutual Company, while the contents were covered by a policy of $650 in the Merrimac Mutual of Andover, through the agency of O. B. Chadwick & Co., who have adjusted the loss on contents for $50. Hose 2, 3 and 5 did not get the alarm, as the whistle did not blow but once, the alarms coming in so fast as to disarrange the machinery. Box 19 was rung in by Selectman T. J. Relihan and box 25 by Selectman S. A. Southwick, who was told by a young man that Batchelder's grocery store was on fire. With all non-interference boxes this could not have happened. The fire was the work of an incendiary, as footprints were discovered at the rear of the barn on Harmony Grove where the firebug got on the fence and then jumped down after placing a lighted match through a broken window into the hay.

Hose Company No. 3 were the guests of Gerry engine Company of Marblehead last Wednesday evening, on the occasion of the dedication of the Gerry's new hall.

Hose 5 held their first assembly of the season at their house last Friday evening.

H. N. Batchelder has put a pair of his horses into the stables at the Central Station for the use of the department during the winter.

The "Six Associates" of Hose 4, will hold a skating and dancing party at the rink Friday evening.

A slight fire on the roof of the morocco factory of George Foan, on Pierpont street, yesterday, was put out by the employes without an alarm. It caught from a spark from the chimney.

Mr. James Buxton thanks the firemen in a card in another column.

Mr. J. Elmer Wood, consul of the League of American Wheelmen, is taking measurements of the routes to all places in this vicinity, and collecting information concerning the roads for the new road-book, to be issued by the Massachusetts Division of the League.

A large mass meeting, in the interest of Constitutional Prohibitory Amendment, is to be held in Tremont Temple, Tuesday, Dec. 7th, day and evening. Mrs. Livermore, Rev. A. J. Gordon, Father McKenna, Rev. A. B. Kendig and other prominent speakers are to address the meeting.

Owing to difficulty in arranging for an able preacher to deliver the re-dedicatory sermon at the Methodist church, the dedication will not take place to-morrow, as we stated last week. It will occur next Tuesday, Dec. 7th, at 2.15 P. M., at which time the sermon will be preached by Rev. W. L. Phillips, pastor of the St. John's Methodist church of Brooklyn, N. Y. The dedication feast will be at 5.30 and at 7 o'clock will occur the reunion of former pastors, on which occasion it is expected that interesting reminiscences will be given.

MUSICAL NOTES.

There was a full house last evening at the Academy Hall, Salem, to listen to the Piano and Vocal Recital by Charles A. Clark and Mrs. Fernald. Mr. Clark has not been heard in this vicinity on the piano, at a recital, for a long time. Many of his friends here and in Salem were well aware of his ability as an organist, but his piano playing of last evening was a revelation to many of them, and a plea-ure as well. His selections were well chosen, and the entire programme of 21 selections, piano and vocal, occupied but one hour and twenty minutes. A fine Miller Grand piano was kindly furnished by the manufacturers. Mrs. Fernald's selections were well received by the audience, aud just here we wish to commend Mr. Clark's accompaniments, which were exceptionally fine. It is not every good pianist who is a good accompanist. But Mr. Clark's clear and intelligent renderings of his piano music, were equally manifest in the accompaniments to the vocal selections, which were given with care and feeling, and an endeavor to make the piano in truth an accompaniment to the vocal selections. Would that all pianists were as wise.

Tickets for the coming concert in the Methodist church under the auspices of the Oxford League, are being rapidly disposed of by the young people of the church, who are greatly interested. It is now annonced that Mons. Alfred De Seve, the violinist, of Boston, will take part, and he will be a great attraction. He will be remembered from his appearance at the Peabody Institute with the Rivals Concert Co., where his fine playing was the subject of much favorable comment.

The special services at the St. John's church closed last Sunday evening. Millard's Vespers were given by the choir, which were present in full numbers. Owing to the indisposition of Miss Alice Ducey the soprano solo was obliged to be omitted. The bass solo by Thos. F. Horrigan was well rendered and the entire service, musically, was a credit to the choir which has been four years under the direction of Mr. Clark. Mrs. Fernald sang the solo "Inflammatus" from the Stabat Mater.

Miss Mary A. Bill, daughter of Prof. C. R. Bill, of Salem, was married last week to Andrew Nichols Jr., of Danvers. The couple will reside in Danvers. Prof. Bill, who has been in the West for some months, was in town last week.

The Douste sisters, whose piano playing has been the theme of admiration in musical circles in Boston, will play for the inmates of the Danvers Asylum Friday evening.

Mr. Arthur Foote gave a musicale at the First church, Boston, last Monday evening.

Patti has been giving another series of farewell concerts in Boston. She will come back in the spring, it is announced for the "very last." Isn't this farewell business getting to be considerable of a "chestnut?"

A praise service was given in the South church vestry last Sunday evening. These services are getting to be very popular, if such an expression regarding a religious service may be properly used. It is a question if they are not as helpful and useful as the prayer meeting. They are surely more interesting than some of the prayer meetings we have attended.

Mrs. Alice J. Osborne, soprano of the Tremont Temple choir, in Boston, sang in the Calvary Baptist church last Monday evening, for the benefit of Miss M. Louise Perry, violinist, of Salem.

Miss Elene Buffington Kehew sang in Lowell last week, at a concert for the Choral Society. She gave "Hear ye Israel," Lassen's "Thine eyes so blue and tender," and Rudolph King's "Good night, my love." The Lowell press speak very favorably of her performances.

DRUNKENNESS, OR LIQUOR HABIT CAN BE CURED BY ADMINISTERING DR. HAINES' GOLDEN SPECIFIC.

It can be given in a cup of coffe or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. A CAMP-FIRE GREETING.—"Comrades of the camp-fires of long ago; comrades of our weary marches and hard-fought battles;" thus begins the appeal of Mr. Fred. Rogge, G. A. R., of Gadsden, Tenn., to his friends. Rheumatism, he says, took hold on me and for years became unbearable. Every remedy was tried and failed entirely till I struck St. Jacobs Oil. After a fair trial I now consider myself cured, and, he adds, if you are suffering with this terror take my word, use it and you will be convinced.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON

AT THE TABERNACLE—"A FAMILY DIFFICULTY SETTLED."

In Matters of Church Attendance Should the Wife Go with the Husband or the Husband with the Wife?—The Gospel Alphabet.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 28.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning on the subject: "In Matters of Church Attendance Should the Wife Go with the Husband or the Husband Go with the Wife?" The tabernacle still retains the decoration of Thanksgiving day, being specimens of American products from the north, south, east and west. A vast congregation sang the opening hymn, beginning:

Come, let us join our friends above,
Who have obtained the prize,
And on the eagle wings of love
To joys celestial rise.

For the greater part, the hymns used in Dr. Talmage's church are old and familiar, and when the whole audience rises to sing, led by Professor Ali, the cornetist, and Professor Henry Eyre Browne, the organist, the effect is overpowering.

Dr. Talmage's text was from Genesis xiii, 8, 9. "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen. Is not the whole land before thee?" Dr. Talmage said:

Uncle and nephew, Abram and Lot, both pious, both millionaires, and with such large flocks of bleating sheep and lowing cattle that their herdmen got into a fight, perhaps about the best pasture, or about the best water privilege, or because the cow of one got hooked by the horns of the other. Not their poverty of opportunity, but their wealth, was the cause of controversy between these two men. To Abram, the glorious old Bedouin sheik, such controversy seemed absurd. It was like two ships quarreling for sea room in the middle of the Atlantic ocean. There was a vast reach of country, corn fields, vineyards, harvests and plenty of room in illimitable acreage. "Now," says Abram: "Let us agree to differ. Here are the mountain districts, swept by the tonic and sea breeze, and with wide reaching prospect, or there is the plain of the Jordan, with tropical luxuriance. You may have either." Lot, who was not as rich as Abram, and might have been expected to take the second choice, made the first selection, and with a modesty that must have made Abram smile, said to him: "You may have the rocks and the fine prospect; I will take the valley of the Jordan, with all its luxuriance of corn fields, and the river to water the flocks, and the genial climate, and the wealth immeasurable." So the controversy was forever settled, and great souled Abram carried out the suggestion of the text: "Let there be no strife, I pray three, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen. Is not the whole land before thee?"

Well, in this, the last quarter of the Nineteenth century, and in this beautiful land, which was called America, after Americus Vespucius, but ought to have been been called Columbia, after its discoverer, Columbus, we have a wealth of religious privilege and opportunity that is positively bewildering. Churches of all styles of creeds, and of all styles of governments, and all styles of worship, and all styles of architecture. What opulence of ecclesiastical opportunity! Now, while in desolate regions there may be only one church, and it must be that or nothing, in the opulent districts of this country, there is such a profusion that there ought to be no difficulty in making a selection. No fight about vestments, or between liturgical or non-liturgical adherents, or as to baptismal modes, or a handful of water as compared with a riverful. If Abram prefers to dwell in the heights, where he can only get a sprinkling from the clouds, let him consent that Lot have all the Jordan in which to immerse himself. "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between thee and me, and between thy herdmen and my herdmen. Is not the whole land before thee?"

Especially is it unfortunate when families allow, at the breakfast, or dining, or tea table, angry discussion as to which is the best church or denomination, one at one end of the table saying he could not endure the rigid doctrines of Presbyterianism, one at the other end responding that she never could stand the forms of Episcopacy, and one at one side of the table saying he did not understand how anybody could bear the noise in the Methodist church, and another declaring all the Baptists bigots. There are hundreds of families hopelessly split on ecclesiasticism, and in the middle of every discussion on such subjects there is a kindling of indignation, and it needs some old father Abram to come and put his foot on the loaded fuse before the explosion takes place, and say: "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen. Is not the whole land before thee?"

I undertake a subject never before undertaken in any pulpit, for it is an exceedingly delicate subject, and if not rightly handled might give serious offense; but I approach it without the slightest trepidation, for I am sure I have the Divine direction in the matters I propose to present. It is a tremendous question, asked all over Christendom, often asked with tears and sobs and heart breaks, and involving the peace of families, the eternal happiness of many souls: In matters of church attendance, should the wife go with the husband, or the husband go with the wife?

First, remember that all the evangelical churches have enough truth in them to save the soul and prepare us for happiness on earth and in heaven. I will go with you into any well selected theological library, and I will show you sermons from ministers in all denominations that set forth man as a sinner and Christ as a deliverer from sin and sorrow. That is the whole gospel. Get that into your soul and you are fitted for the here and the hereafter. The world has twenty-six letters in its alphabet, and there are only two letters in the gospel alphabet—S and C; S standing for our sin, C standing for Christ, our rescue, blessed be His glorious name forever! In any church where you can thoroughly learn these two letters, and all they stand for, you ought to be edified and happy. There are differences, we admit, and some denominations we like better than others. But suppose three or four of us make solemn agreement to meet each other a week from now in Chicago on important business, and one goes by the New York Central railroad, another by the Erie railroad, another by the Pennsylvania railroad, another by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. One goes this way, because the mountains are grander; another takes this, because the cars are more luxurious; another that, because the speed is greater; another takes the other, because he has long been accustomed to that route, and all the employes are familiar. So far as our engagement to meet is concerned, it makes no difference if we only get there. Now, any one of the innumerable evangelical denominations, if you practice its teaching—although some of their trains run on a broad gauge, and some on a narrow gauge—will bring you out at the city of the New Jerusalem.

It being evident that you will be safe in any of the evangelical denominations, I proceed to remark, first: If one of the married couple be a Christian and the other not, the one a Christian is bound to go anywhere to a church where the unconverted companion is willing to go, if he or she will go to no other. You, of the connubial partnership, are a Christian. You are safe for the skies. Then it is your first duty to secure the eternal safety of your lifetime associate. Is not the everlasting welfare of your wife impenitent, or your husband impenitent, of more importance than your church relationship? Is not the residence of your companion for the next quadrillion of years a mightier consideration to you than the gratification of your ecclesiastical taste for forty or fifty years? A man or a woman that would stop half a minute to weigh preferences as to whether he or she had better go with the unconverted companion to this or that church or denomination has no religion at all, and never has had, and I fear never will have. You are loaded up with what you suppose to be religion, but you are like Capt. Frobisher, who brought back from his voyage of discovery a shipload of what he supposed valuable minerals, yet instead of being silver and gold, were nothing but common stones of the field, to be hurled out finally as useless. Mighty God! In all Thy realm is there one man or woman professing religion, yet so stolid, so unfitted, so far gone unto death that there would be any hesitancy in surrendering all preferences before such an opportunity of salvation and heavenly reunion? If you, a Christian wife, are an attendant upon this Brooklyn Tabernacle, and your unconverted husband does not come here, because he does not like its preacher, or its music, or its architecture, or its uncomfortable crowding, and goes not to any house of worship, but would go if you would accompany him somewhere else, change your church relations. Take your hymn book home with you to-day. Say good-by to your friends in the neighboring pews, and go with him to any one of a hundred churches, till his soul is saved and he joins you in the march to heaven. More important than that ring on the third finger of your left hand, it is, that your Heavenly Father command the angel of mercy concerning your husband at his conversion, as in the parable of old: "Put a ring on his hand."

No letter of more importance ever came to the great city of Corinth, situated on what was called the "Bridge of the Sea," and glistening with sculpture, and gated with a style of brass the magnificence of which the following ages have not been able successfully to imitate, and overshadowed by the Acro-Corinthus, a fortress of rock 2,000 feet high—I say no letter ever came to that great city of more importance than that letter in which Paul puts the two startling questions: "What knowest thou, oh wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? Or how knowest thou, oh man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?" The dearest sacrifice on the part of the one is cheap if it rescue the other. Better go to the smallest, weakest, most insignificant church on earth, and be co-partners in eternal bliss, than pass your earthly membership in most gorgeously attractive church while your companion stays outside of evangelical privilege. Better have the drowning saved by a scow or sloop than let him or her go down while you sail by in the gilded cabins of a Britannic or a Great Eastern.

Second remark: If both of the married couple be Christians, but one is so naturally constructed that it is impossible to enjoy the services of a particular denomination, and the other is not so sectarian or punctilious, let the one less particular go with the other who is very particular. As for myself, I feel as much at home in one denomination of evangelical Christians as another, and I think I must have been born very near the line. I like the solemn roll of the Episcopal liturgy, and I like the spontaneity of the Methodists, and I like the importance given to the ordinance of Baptism by the Baptists, and I like the freedom of the Congregationalists, and I like the government and the sublime doctrine of the Presbyterians, and I like many of the others just as good as any I have mentioned, and I could happily live and die, and preach, and be buried from any of them. But others are born with so stout and unbending and inexorable a liking for some denomination that it is a positive necessity they have the advantage of that one. What they were intended to be in ecclesiasticism was written in the sides of their cradle, if the father and mother had eyes keen enough to see it. They would not stop crying until they had put into their hands as playthings a Westminster Catechism or the Thirty-nine Articles. The whole current of their temperament and thought and character runs into one sect of religionists as naturally as the James river into the Chesapeake. It would be a torture to such persons to be anything outside of that one church. Now, let the wife or husband who is not so constructed sacrifice the milder preference for the one more inflexible and rigorous. Let the grapevine follow the rugosities and sinuosities of the oak or hickory. Abram, the richer in flocks of Christian grace, should say to Lot, who is built on a smaller scale: "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen. Is not the whole land before thee?" As you can be edified and happy anywhere, go with your companion to the church to which he or she must go or be miserable.

Remark the third: If both the married couple are very strong in their sectarianisms, let them attend the different churches preferred. It is not necessary that you attend the same church. Religion is between your conscience and your God. Like Abram and Lot, agree to differ. When on Sabbath morning you come out of the door of your home together, and one goes one way and the other the other, heartily wish each other a good sermon and a time of profitable devotion, and when you meet again at the noonday repast let it be evident each to each, and to your children, and to the hired help, that you have both been on the Mount of Transfiguration, although you went up by different paths, and that you have both been fed by the bread of life, though kneaded by different hands, in different trays, and baked in different ovens.

"But how about the children?" I am often asked by hundreds of parents. Let them also make their choice. They will grow up with reverence for both the denominations represented by father and mother, if you, by holy lives, commend those denominations. If the father lives the better life, they will have the more favorable opinion of his denomination. If the mother lives the better life, they will have the more favorable opinion of her denomination. And some day both the parents will, for at least one service, go to the same church. The neighbors will say: "I wonder what is going on to-day, for I saw our neighbor and his wife, who always go to different churches, going arm in arm to the same sanctuary?" Well, I will tell you what has brought them together, arm in arm, to the same altar. Something very important has happened. Their son is to-day uniting with the church. He is standing in the aisle taking the vows of a Christian. He had been somewhat wayward, and gave father and mother a good deal of anxiety, but their prayers have been answered in his conversion, and as he stands in the aisle and the minister of religion says:

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of

DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

WORSHIPING GOD.

NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY DR. JOHN HALL.

Lesson X of the International Series for Sunday, Dec. 5—Golden Text, Revelations v. 13—Lesson Text, Revelations v, 1-14.

The truth set forth in this chapter is of world wide and everlasting interest. To understand the need of revealing it the following facts must be recalled: John wrote this book when persecution was employed to put down Christianity. He was a victim himself (Rev. i, 9). Others were in danger or in actual suffering. Christ's name was hated by many. His cause was threatened. "Is it of any use to hold out?" So men might be tempted to think. The cause appeared hopeless. No; this revelation shows that the name so hated and dishonored will yet be universally praised. His is not a "lost cause," but a cause which it is God's will to make triumphant and honored forever.

V. 1. The "throne" has already been described in Rev. iv, 2-3. It is heaven. It represents supreme and sovereign power—that power which Jesus in his humiliation always acknowledged. (See for a parallel case Isa. vi, 1). The "throne" and some of its surroundings we find in the first chapter of Ezekiel. There we have the "living creatures" (v. 5), a happier rendering than "beasts." He who "sat on the throne" is described in Rev. iv, 2-3, and the "book" is also found in Ezek. ii, 9-10. When it is said to be written within and on the back side it reveals the fact that "books" were not then "bound," but consisted of long rolls of parchment commonly written on one side. This was written on both sides. The book represents the divine will, the decrees of God. They are not known to men; see this illustrated in Acts i, 7. So Daniel is told to "shut up the words and seal the book" (Dan. xii, 4). This is the meaning of "sealed." Who can unseal, open and carry out the mind of God?

V. 2. This is the question which the "strong angel" puts, that the meaning may be clear and emphatic. It is a picture lesson for the race and for angels. "Who is worthy?" It is not a question of power only, but of worth, fitness, goodness.

V. 3. None can be found among the creatures, angels or men. This idea of creature-helplessness is set out in Isa. lxiii, 5. For saving man there was none; so God's "righteous servant," his Son, "brought salvation," and his zeal ("fury") upheld him.

V. 4. The apostle wept much. A spiritual instinct in him led to this sense of helplessness. The case seemed desperate. So Daniel was "grieved" (Dan. vii, 15-16.)

V. 5. One of the "elders," named in Rev. iv, 4, answered. There were twenty-four of these, probably from the "divisions of the sons of Aaron" in I Chron. xxiv, 1, 4-5, where sixteen and eight are named as "governors of the sanctuary and of the house." The conceptions of heaven to a Hebrew mind come from the Old Testament. (Perhaps the temple arrangements are images of the heavenly.) He gave comfort by announcing that one would open the book. The description is also twofold, also from the Old Testament: (1) "Lion of Juda" (Gen. xlix, 9-10 compared with Heb. vii, 14), and (2) "the root of David," as Isa. xi, 1-10. He prevails, as in Jer. l, 34. On the propriety of this description we have only to recall Christ's words, "All power is given unto me," etc.

V. 6. The apostle now sees more than he noticed before. On the same level, in the same place of dignity with him who sat upon the throne and who held the book "in the midst of the throne," etc., stood a Lamb (see the Baptist's words, "Behold the Lamb of God" (John i, 29)), with the marks of having been "slain." (See John xx, 25.) The slaying submitted to, the dying, made the Lamb "worthy," fit to "open the book.") See for full and plain statement of this truth Phil. ii, 6-9, ending—after the statement of his humiliation—with "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him." It was never meant that pictures should be made of the Lamb. The symbols are taken regardless of art. The "horn" represents power, the "seven" the perfection of it; the "eyes" insight, wisdom and the perfection of it is also shown by the "seven." So the explanation is given, "which are the seven Spirits of God." Jesus had all knowledge when on earth (see John ii, 24-25), and "in him are hid all the treasures of wisdom."

V. 7 needs no explanation. John sees the Lamb in the vision coming and taking the book out of the hand of him that sat on the throne, i. e., as we see by

Vs. 8, 9, undertaking to open it and loose its seals, and unfold and carry out in the creation the will of God. This is matter of praise to God from the four living creatures and the four and twenty elders, who—as Aaron's sons represented the people (see I Chron. xxiv, 1)—represent the church, the true Israel of God, the incense representing "the prayers of saints" (not in heaven, but on the earth), says the apostle. From this representative body goes up a song of praise to the Lamb, and it is to be noted as confirming the view given above that they say, "redeemed us." Angels could not say this. Note also that it is not by holy example or matchless teaching or noble life, but by his "own blood" the redemption is effected. See on this vital matter Eph. i, 7; I Pet. i, 17-18. The wide range of the redemption is brought out in the words, "out of every kindred," etc.—not from Jews only. This hymn is again heard from the body itself represented in Rev. vii, 9-10, 14. Notice also the strong statement, "Worthy to * * * for thou wast slain." The kingship of Christ is made fitting by his work as a priest.

V. 10. Here we have in another form the prophecy of Dan. vii, 18, 27. In Rev. iii, 21, we see how saints are kings. The idea is of greatness, dignity, glory of surroundings. The language probably comes from God's word to Israel in Ex. xix, 6: "Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." What Israel was in type we have in reality in the glorified church of Christ. They "reign on the earth." "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." (Matt. v, 5.) So it is also in Ps. xxxvii, 9.

V. 11. The company of angels, numbered as in Ps. lxviii, 17, and in Dan. vii, 10, "approve the song." They do not say, as in v. 9, "redeemed us." They did not need redemption. But they "look into" His work, magnify Him on account of it, and say in full view of His having been "slain"

(V. 12), "Worthy is the Lamb," etc. Men may reject Him and His redemption; angels adore Him in view of it

(V. 13), nor they only, for "every creature," etc., joins in the praise. It is the setting forth of the truth in Phil. ii, 11. In the same book, I Chron. xxix, 11-13, where the "four and twenty elders" are foreshadowed, we have the substance and words of this song of praise. God the Lord is not set aside by the Lamb, but the Lamb is joined with him. And the "four living creatures"

(V. 14) say "Amen," and the elders fall down and worship as we are called to do in Ps. cl, 1-6, which has here its complete and glorious fulfillment.

The following points deserve emphasis as we part from this glorious lesson.

(1) The church below and the church above make one complete whole. Here we are a poor, imperfect part of what will be in heaven complete and glorious. Here or there "we are the Lord's."

(2) Christ's atonement cannot be made too much of in class and pulpit. We see how it is rated in heaven.

(3) We see how Christ is head over all. He knows and does the Father's will. All power is His for the carrying out of the divine will. He reigns as mediator because He died for us.

(4) No saint need despond over drawbacks and discouragements in Christ's service. He will triumph in the end.

(5) There is a real place for missions. Let us teach men that Jesus, and not their idols, is worthy to receive blessings and glory and praise.

HINTS FOR QUESTIONS.

1. On the Lesson Explanations.—Persecutions of Christians. Motives to perseverance. The throne. The living creatures. The book. Who is worthy. John's weeping. Daniel grieved. Twenty-four elders. Lion of Juda. Root of David. The Lamb slain. Seven horns. Seven eyes. Seven spirits. Song of praise. Redemption through blood. Number redeemed. Saints as kings. Angels adoring the Lamb. Points to be emphasized.

2. On the Light from Bible Lands.—Seven the perfect number. Eyes of the Lord. Four beasts. Four and twenty. Different numbers denoting completeness.

3. On the Suggestive Applications.—The open book. The sealed book. The book of redemption sealed to the worldly. The illustration from hieroglyphics. What eyes are required to read the book of redemption. The new song. Where first sung. What we know of our condition in heaven. The magnitude of sin. How shown.—Sunday School World.

A Curious Disease.

Deacon Amos P. Kendall of Palmer, Mass., died recently of a curious disease that had caused the death of his grandfather, father and two brothers. In effect it was paralysis, and yet it came on very gradually, without any shock. Less than a year ago deacon Kendall noticed a lameness in a finger on his left hand. The disorder developed gradually, until about five months ago the left hand became helpless and dangled from the wrist. Next the calves of his legs were attacked, and in a couple of months more he was forced to stop walking, and soon after he was unable to move the left leg at all. His mouth and throat were then approached, the muscles controlling the salivary glands weakened, which caused a ceaseless flow of saliva. After that the progress of the disease was rapid, and at the time of his death he had lost his speech save a few guttural sounds, was unable to swallow or to move any member save one arm slightly and turn his head somewhat. The paralyzed portions retained the sense of touch and his mind was perfectly clear to the last.—New York Sun.

A Diminutive Infant.

The smallest baby in Connecticut is a York state youngster, born two months ago at Long Lake, in the Adirondacks. She is the child of David K. and Emily P. Mix, who are visiting in New Haven, and weighs two and a half pounds. She is well formed, sound of lung and appetite, is thirteen inches long, her wrist is seven-eighths of an inch in circumference, her hand is one inch across the back, her ankles an inch and a quarter in circumference, and her foot is an inch and a quarter long. Her eyes are blue and her hair is thick and dark.—New York Sun.

Over One Hundred Years.

Mrs. Eleanor Moore died in Georgetown, Me., a few days ago, having lived five days more than 100 years. On her birthday, Oct. 4, she said to her son: "To-day I'm 100 years old. Can it be possible? It seems like a dream." The day before her death she repeated several passages of Scripture, and her last words, an hour before she died, were: "God bless you all. Good-by, darlings. I'm going home." Three children, fifteen grandchildren, twenty-eight great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild survive her. New York Sun.

Manhood Suffrage in England.

A vigorous campaign is to be made in England in behalf of the proposition to abolish all the existing franchises, and to substitute a simple residential manhood suffrage, the term of residence being fixed at three months, all dual voting abolished, the principle, "one man, one vote," prevailing throughout the whole United Kingdom, and no class excluded except members of the army and navy. Mandood suffrage will add about 750,000 to the number of qualified voters under the existing franchises.—Frank Leslie's

Statue of Gen. Burnside.

The $40,000 equestrian statue of Maj. Gen. Burnside, now in a foundry in New York city, was recently inspected by a delegation of citizens from Rhode Island and pronounced a success. It was designed and modeled by Launt Thompson. His work has been completed, and the statue only awaits final casting to be ready for its pedestal.—Boston Transcript.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

IT IS a source of great pleasure for the PRESS to be able to announce that the labor difficulties in Peabody and Salem are ended. We think that pleasure is shared by the entire community. The news of the decision of the Mass Meeting in Salem, Sunday, was quickly circulated in town, and it was a question whether the employers or the men were the better pleased at the result.

The claim has been made, during the last eight weeks, that the trouble was already settled—that the manufacturers were in as good condition as before the outbreak, and that they did not need any of their old help. In a measure this may be true. In its fullest sense it is not true. Some shops have had nearly the complement of men required. In time they might have done the work as well and enabled the manufacturers to get out the usual amount of stock. But it cannot be maintained that this has been done, save in exceptional cases. It could not be reasonably expected. And while the manufacturers, maintaining the position they have taken, could have engaged no other workmen than the ones they have employed, it is, nevertheless, true that under the former conditions, under the conditions of no trouble with their men, more work, better work and at better profit could be done with their old employes. We know of no manufacturer who is not pleased that the trouble is ended, and that the entire labor market of the town is at their service, when required.

Much has been said and done since July which will be regretted in time to come, and some of it is already seen to be a mistake. In all that has been said in these columns we have tried to deal justly, fairly and honorably with all men. We have strived to allay bitterness, and to prevent harsh feelings. We have seen the evil effect upon the town, upon business of all kinds, by the continuance of the trouble, and have earnestly desired that the end might speedily come. We are aware that we have been subject to some adverse criticism; but we can say truthfully, that in all that has appeared in these columns, we have striven conscientiously to do our duty as it was made known to us. We have not sought the applause or approval of any man or any body of men. We have criticised the methods of the Knights of Labor as plainly and forcibly as any of our cotemporaries. We have upheld the authorities in their efforts to maintain order; nothing can be found in the PRESS to the contrary. But our words have been spoken in kindness. We have not gone out of our way to stir up bitter feelings on the one side or the other. We have not upheld everything that was done by the one side or the other because it was OUR SIDE. Our conscience is clear, in that we have said what we believed to be for the interest of the whole community. A settlement of some kind we have earnestly desired; now that it has come, we greatly rejoice.

It is to be borne in mind that the trouble in Peabody and Salem has been unlike the ordinary strike. The contest has not been a matter of wages or a matter of time. The small difference of one hour a week, asked for by the men, was not insisted upon by either party. The manufacturers have not obtained their help at any lower price than before the trouble, nor have they desired to, as far as we are aware. The question has been whether the manufacturers would treat with their men, as an organized body; whether they would allow bargains to be made with outside parties, as, for instance, an Executive Board, instead of treating and dealing directly with the men in their individual capacity. The contest for the last twenty weeks has been fought on this issue, and the MANUFACTURERS HAVE WON. As far as this town and Salem is concerned, that matter is settled. The men have accepted the settlement. They have acknowledged that they are beaten.

One of the most grievous errors made by the leaders of the Knights of Labor has been in not taking the action they now have taken, two months ago. It was as plainly evident weeks ago as it was last Sunday, that the outcome could be none other than has resulted. It is an error to which the body of men have a right to call the leaders to account, and will shake, and ought to shake, the confidence among the members of the Knights of Labor, in that organization. If the funds of the Order would not warrant them in supporting the men through the entire winter they should have foreseen it.

Whatever may be thought of the foolishness of the men, individually, who refused to leave the Order and return to work, long ago, it cannot be denied that many of them, most of them were unwilling to go. They have endured hardships, and suffered loss to themselves and their families in remaining loyal to the Order to which they belonged. They have been encouraged to hold out, when there was no foundation for such encouragement. For this the leaders are responsible, and it is a very serious mistake, coming with added force at a time when the opportunities for employment were growing more limited from day to day.

The Knights of Labor have also learned that the methods employed by the Order, or many of them, could not receive the sanction of the community. This we have said from the beginning. They made a mistake in the Harrington affair, and it is an error which we believe the Executive Board have seen for a long time. It is to be regretted that they did not have the manliness to acknowledge it. It was only when the requests of the Board assumed the form of dictation, it was only when the presentation of prices was accompanied with conditions, such as accompanied the splitters' list, taking away from the employer, in a measure, the right to conduct his business as he pleased, that organized labor was met by organized resistance. Had the methods of the Knights been less objectionable—had the leaders been as conservative at the beginning as they have been the last two months, there would have been no such disturbances as have been a disgrace to this town and Salem.

We believe good will come out of this evil—to the manufacturers and to the men. We are glad to know that, in most cases, there is not a disposition, on the part of the employers, to glory over their victory. They are disposed to emulate the example of Grant in his treatment of Lee at the surrender of the Confederate forces. The men have surrendered honorably. Why should they not be treated honorably? We believe they will be. It would be folly to expect that all the men out of employment will at once find work. It would be equally foolish to presume that the men who are now at work will be discharged to find places for the old men. But there are vacant places. The demand for leather is on the increase, at an advanced price. With the settlement of the trouble there will be encouragement to increase the capacity of the shops. There is no manufacturer who does not realize that this is the end of all trouble. We do not believe it will be within the memory of the present employers to witness such a strike as we have had for the last twenty weeks. There will be plenty of men whom they can employ. And the best men, the men who can do the most work, and the best of it, will find employ ment, without question as to whether they belong to the Knights of Labor.

Another thing is to be borne in mind. There is no difference, now that the trouble is settled, between the laboring men in town, according to the definition of the Knights themselves. There are no "scabs" in town, using the word in the sense in which the Knights have used it. According to Mr. Litchman, and we quote him for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the Knights what they have themselves proclaimed—according to Mr. Litchman a "scab" is a workman who takes the place of another while labor troubles are in existence at any place. And it will be remembered that Mr. McCarthy, at the mass meeting in the Town Hall, said that when the trouble was settled he would take these men by the hand as readily as any one else. The trouble is settled. It makes no difference, for the sake of the argument, how it is settled. And there can be, then, no "scabs" in town.

This, we think, is understood by the men. The fact that our police force felt a relief from a great pressure when they heard the announcement that the "strike was declared off" shows that they expect no further trouble. We hope this will be the case. We hope there will be no unfair or dishonourable treatment of any party, on any side. We hope kindness and charity will prevail, to the end that there may be a revival of business prosperity in town—a revival which all citizens will gladly welcome.

THE SALEM Observer in speaking of the outrages by riots and stone throwing, presents a thought which is so much in unison with that of Rev. Father McKenna, in his sermons at St. John's church here, that we must be pardoned for referring to it briefly. The Observer says that the riots and acts of lawlessness are mostly committed by sons of Catholics who have broken away from the faith of their parents; and in the absence of the restraint which the church has over them, there is no other which has the slightest hold on either feelings of fear or respect.

We have not the slightest doubt of the truth of this assertion. The veriest infidels in the world are those who have broken away from the Catholic church. Taught from childhood that the teachings of the church are infallible, when they discard that faith what is there to cling to? They believe in nothing—they respect neither the church or its services. They fear neither God nor man. Rev. Father McKenna said, "Show me an impure young man, a man given to evil deeds, evil practices, wickedness and violations of law, and I will show you a young man who comes not to the Sacraments, or the Mass, and who respects not the church, its teachings or its services."

If these things are true, the efforts of Father McKenna to strengthen the Catholics of this town in their faith, to admonish them to observe the Sacraments, and to lead better lives, must surely be of good. They have given the Catholic people here good teachings and healthy admonition. No other power save the Church of Christ can restrain the evil practices which have been so prevalent of late. In so far as it is an agent of good in this respect, it should be encouraged by Protestants as well as Catholics, and if it shall accomplish any lasting gain to the community in this respect, the mission of the Dominican Fathers will not have been in vain.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It having rained a good share of the time this fall milkmen say it has been an excellent season for their business.—Woburn Journal.

Now we think of it, all the milkmen of our acquaintance have been very smiling of late. That must account for it.

An Essex County Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held in Lynn, Wednesday, Dec. 8th, corner of Oxford and Washington streets.

When you run across a polite railroad official you can generally make up your mind that there is a parallel road somewhere in the vicinity.—New Haven News.

We read in the Danvers Mirror that the business association there has been of great benefit to the town, and destined to prove a good deal more so. Associations of this kind are very advantageous. Woburn has found its Board of Trade a power for good, and now Stoneham has followed suit and organized one. In union there is strength, also push and progress.—Woburn Journal.

They have taken steps in Wakefield, also, for the same kind of an association. We think an Improvement society or a Board of Trade would work to advantage in Peabody, and now that the strike is over, and there is a prospect that there will be no further labor troubles, why is it not a proper and appropriate time for such an organization? It should be composed of the business men of all branches, who would work together for their mutual advantage and the good of the town. There should be a united effort to make the town more attractive—by practicing such economy as that the taxes may be lower, by making it for the advantage of manufacturers to locate here, by improving our streets and roadways, and in various ways making improvements in the place where we reside. Such associations, in every place that we recall, have been a power for good. It would be worth a trial here.

Every few days unemployed Peabody and Salem tanners and curriers come to Woburn after work, a part of whom find it and a part don't, but mostly don't.—Woburn Journal.

We hope there will be no further occasion for the above remark. We trust the town of Woburn will never have to pass through the troubles this town has experienced since July.

The barber shops in Woburn and many other suburban places are closed on Sunday. There was a time here, when the barbers of Peabody took on a religious frame of mind. They besought the selectmen to enforce the law against any who should be so sinful, so wicked, so unmindful of the proper observance of the Lord's day, as to keep their shops open. There were some who hinted that a Nathan was the cause of their religious fervor, and that they were surprised when they found that he, too, was of their mind. Be that as it may, with the departure of Nathan came the downfall of their religious idols. With as prayerful anxiety as they besought the Fathers of the Town to close all the shops, they now desired permission to keep open, and they have shaved any and all persons since that time, on Sundays, as well as other days.

Amesbury hit on a plan for getting people to attend Thanksgiving service, by fixing the hour at 6 P. M., and making music a prominent feature. The sooner pastors recognize that the old-fashioned morning service on Thanksgiving is played out, the larger will be the audiences.—Merrimac Budget.

The riot in Salem, Thanksgiving day, was a disgraceful affair. It shows how a small crowd of turbulent men bent on mischief may be converted, as its numbers increase, into a dangerous mob, in the frenzy of excitement, and by men who had no thought of committing crimes when they joined the crowd. Often quiet and peaceable citizens when frenzied with rage, and led by others who are bound by no compunctions of conscience, will commit acts that they regret to the end of their life. This should be a lesson to the Knights of Labor, and teach them that they gain nothing by these assaults, but many who would be in sympathy with them turn away in disgust. They should make it their business to investigate these outrages, and if committed by members in their ranks expel them from the order. This rioting, stone-throwing crowd do more to injure the Order than the ten thousand of honest citizens in it can overcome in a long time.

There is no doubt that every strike or lockout cuts both parties to the difficulty. The New York Bureau of Labor Statistics reports an instance of a lockout that cost the manufacturer $1,000,000 and a strike which deprived 18,000 operatives of the same amount in wages. All of which goes to show that arbitration before fighting is the best plan.—Boston Record.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

On Thanksgiving day Chief Police Peasley was sent for from Fulton street to look after Michael Coleman, a young man 22 years of age, who had attempted to commit suicide but hadn't the courage. He had made a wound in his throat with a razor, and Dr. Pike was called and took three stitches to sew it up. He was removed to the station house and afterwards sent to the asylum. He was one of the locked-out men and had been drinking considerably of late.

Frederick Lawrence, a resident of Park street, had a rough experience with his dog last Thursday. The animal was a Newfoundland, 14 months old, and was chained. As he passed by be patted the brute on the head and his wrist was caught by the dog and considerably lacerated. He struck the dog several times with a clothes pole but slipped on a wet board and fell in front of the now infuriated animal who seized his victim by the legs, tearing the flesh and badly biting him. Dr. Worcester looked after the man and Geo. O. Peirce dispatched the dog.

Two Thanksgiving drunks, Robert Lee and John Reardon, paid $1 and costs the next morning in the police court. The liquor case of John Mannix was called and he was fined $100 and costs.

Passengers of the Naumkeag Street Railroad were edified by a free fight on the Square last Thursday evening between Conductor Cottrell and Driver Chisholm, and the latter had the skin knocked off of his nose.

The night police found a horse on Tremont street, last Wednesday night, with a broken hip. It was the property of Mr. Buxton, of the firm of Lowd & Buxton, and had run away.

George Hadley, in the employ of Mr. J. B. Thomas, while driving through Lynn, with a load of skins, was thrown from the team by the settling of a wheel in the sewer and one of his hands was run over and badly injured. Dr. Pike dressed the wound.

John F. Halpine, who was shot in the riot on Boston street, on Thanksgiving day, was arrested Thursday afternoon and turned over to the Salem officers.

A lady with a child in her hand was getting off the train at the railroad station at 5.30, last Saturday, when some one boldly relieved her of her pocketbook, containing $6, which was in her hand at the time. She did not realize her loss for some time, when all at once it dawned upon her that some one took it from her hands.

John Canny, a non-union man, left his home last Wednesday night, and has not been heard of since. The last trace of him was on Boston street about nine o'clock on that evening.

The carrying of pistols by so many men in town has had a demoralizing effect on the boys and many of them carry pistols and cheap revolvers with them. Last Friday a dozen year old boy named Bresnahan was trying to make a toy pistol shoot a 22 calibre cartridge, but as it didn't seem to explode, he hit it on a rock, exploding the cartridge and the ball took the skin off a little place on his forefinger. It was a fortunate escape for the youth.

A horse belonging to Mr. Richardson, the milkman, ran away on Main street last Saturday, but was stopped before any serious damage was done. One can of milk was spilled.

Last Saturday John Hughes Jr. and two companions, living at South Peabody, were engaged in Lynn collecting soap grease and before their return got drunk. When they arrived in town it was found that one of the trio, Thomas F. Hughes, was dead. Dr. Weston and the police were called. The doctor was of the opinion that death was caused by the excessive use of liquor and exposure.

Mr. Edwin B. Balcomb, the carpenter, met with a painful accident last Saturday afternoon. He was using an axe when the blade struck his wrist, cutting a deep gash. He is unable to use the hand but attends to his work.

Richard Herlihy was arrested Saturday and turned over to Salem officers, for assaulting a non-union man Thanksgiving day.

William Crollson, for second drunk, was fined $3 and costs, Monday.

A runaway team belonging to J. J. Fitzgerald, collided with E. N. Porter's team on Boston street, Saturday, and the latter had a shaft broken.

Mr. Nicholas Halpin reported to the police that he was robbed yesterday afternoon of $15.

A horse belonging to Lynch & Tracy, butchers, fell on the square this forenoon and broke a shaft.

There is a report of a prize fight in Dublin last night between McGuire and Sheeny.

Some older boys played a dirty trick on a seven year old son of Martin Brophy on Mason street. They filled a clay pipe with powder and tobacco, and gave it to the little fellow to smoke. An explosion took place and the boy was badly burned about the face.

Miss Mary Bancroft, an aged lady, sister to the late Henry Bancroft, who met his death by suicide some years ago, died on Sunday, at the age of 77 years. She was the last of a large family, her mother dying while she was young. She was brought up by her uncle and aunt, Deacon James Brown and wife, of Peabody, and for the last thirty years has resided in her native town and has taken active interest in all its affairs. Her funeral took place on Tuesday, and she was laid to sleep in Harmony Grove, Salem.—Wakefield Citizen.

The cold weather has given an impetus to trade, and merchants who advertise are doing a fine business and are consequently happy.

Our advice to farmers who have some of their farming implements standing out into the fields, is that they had better have them placed in their winter quarters.

The cigar makers of Havana, Cuba, are on a strike, but so long as the cabbage farmers of Indiana and Connecticut remain faithful the American smoker need not worry.

Mr. D. P. McCarthy has an attractive little store on Main street, and carries a good line of useful, every day articles.

The time of the year has arrived when chicken thieves begin to operate.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

There was a large audience present at the Methodist vestry last evening, to witness the breaking of the jugs which were put in the hands of the members of the Sunday school some months ago, and to which most of our readers have had opportunity to contribute. There was singing from the Gospel Hymns and opening prayer by the pastor. A committee was designated to count the money under the charge of Geo. F. Sanger. Mr. Isaac C. Drown broke the jugs while four sets of persons counting kept some jugs ahead to be announced. 103 jugs were broken. Miss Judith Buxton's jug had the largest amount $50, and the smallest amount was 23 cents. Among the larger amounts collected were Miss Jennie Goldthwait, $27.08; jug No. 32, $16.57; Willis Knowlton, $13.21; Sadie F. Warner, $13.29; Violet Montreil, $12.02; Mabel Jenkins, $11.33; Clifford Goodwin, $7.18. The child having the largest amount and who received a present from one of the brethren was Willis Knowlton. The total amount collected was $380.17, and some $12 or $14 was taken at the door in addition to the above. Mr. Geo. F. Sanger kept the amounts along so as to give the total as soon as the last jug was broken. The occasion was a gratifying success.

Last Friday afternoon the selectmen visited the proposed connection of Danversport and Peabody tracks of the Salem & Danvers road through Liberty street, and a hearing will be given on it to-morrow afternoon. It is understood that one object in building the road is for use in severe winter weather. When the great snow drifts pile up on Andover and Gardner streets, the company find it impossible to keep the track clear and often several days' travel is lost. By this new track all the cars to Danvers could be sent over the Liberty Street track, as this street has so few houses it is comparatively free from snow which is carried off into the adjoining fields.

The meeting of the Teachers' Association on Monday, was held in the school committee room. Prof. Hagar of Salem occupied the time with an informal talk upon the various methods of teaching reading in primary classes. There was a full attendance of teachers and the address was heard with a great deal of interest. The old method of teaching the letters has been for a long time given up by the last teachers: the methods now in common use are the phonic, word and sentence. In the primary schools here the word method is the one generally adopted. Hinderances to success in primary work will be discussed at the next meeting.

Among the many pleasant meetings on Thanksgiving day, may be mentioned the gathering at the pleasant country seat of Mr. James Marsh, on Forest street, where his children and grandchildren came together to the number of 23, representing four generations. Mr. Marsh, although in his 84th year, is still active and enterprising. He has recently purchased the lot of land opposite his residence, which he intends to clear up, thus gratifying that characteristic taste of his to improve his premises. A neighboring farmer recently remarked of Mr. Marsh that he is one of the best and most practical farmers in Essex County.

Thanksgiving day passed as usual in this town, the post-office and stores closed early, the trains and horse-cars brought many visitors here to share in family re-unions. In the morning, Rev. G. A. Phinney preached an eloquent sermon at the South church, which was well attended. The rain kept many of the young folks from enjoying out-of-door sports. Over the line, in Salem, rum did its work by inciting to riot and assaults on non-union men by some of the locked-out men of this town and that city. In the evening many attended the theatre in Salem and Boston.

Mrs. Richard Kimball died at her home on Washington street, last Saturday, after a prolonged illness, of a heart trouble. Mrs. Kimball was a native of Charlestown and was 63 years of age. She was a good Christian woman and a member of the Baptist church, and before her health failed was an active worker in all charitable enterprises looking to the welfare of that society. She was an affectionate wife and indulgent mother. A husband and one son, H. J. G. Kimball, survive her.

The Sunday evening service at the South church, was a praise service conducted by the pastor, who gave a brief history of the life of Charles Wesley, and selected for singing, hymns written by him. Mrs. S. P. Chase sang "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Mr. Hall related several incidents connected with the history of some of the hymns sung. There was a large audience present.

Mr. George S. Knight, the Salem medium, unfolded the future to a private circle, who met at the home of a lady on Jacobs street, last Friday evening.

Among the suggested candidates for Mayor of Boston was our former townsman, Mr. Thomas E. Proctor. The Boston Record recently published interviews with several Boston business men, and Mr. Proctor was endorsed as follows, which speaks well for his standing in the community where he lives:—Mr. Charles Mann, of Darrow, Mann & Co., said, "The Republicans can beat O'Brien if they want to. The dissatisfaction felt with him in certain quarters will be brought out strongly if the right course is taken. I should like, better than anything else, to see Thomas E. Proctor, the leather dealer, put in nomination. There is not a stronger man in the whole trade than Mr. Proctor. He would carry business principles into the administration of city affairs, and we could not find a cleaner, more economical manager in the city. He would capture the Back Bay vote entire, and he is so fair in politics that he would be generously supported on all sides." A. H. Batchelder, of E. & A. H. Batchelder, said, "The Republicans have a first-rate opportunity. Nothing could please me more than the nomination of Thomas E. Proctor. I don't care if he is a Democrat. I hardly think a Republican can be elected. But Mr. Proctor would sweep things. He is, first, the head man in the leather trade; second, he would fill any place you could put him in, even if it were the presidency of the United States. He is keen, able and would be supported by the leather trade to a man. I would do anything in my power to help him to an election." Mr. John O. Poor, of the firm of Henry Poor & Sons, favored Gen. Martin for Mayor.

An illustrated address by Mr. G. W. Leitch is to be given soon, under the auspices of the Peabody Auxiliary of the Woman's Board of Missions. Eighty photographs will be brought out by a fine dissolving view stereopticon illustrating life and manners in India and Ceylon. Rev. R. R. Meredith, of Boston, says of the lecture: "We all found it highly entertaining, intensely interesting and greatly profitable. I wish it could be heard by the people in every church in the land." Another one says of Mr. Leitch: "He interests all—primary classes, children, youth and adults." The lecture will probably be given next week. Time and place will be announced later.

Great Sachem Dinsmore of Massachusetts has invited the Chiefs of Wingaersheek Tribe, No. 12, of Gloucester, to give an exemplification of the Warrior's Degree, at the wigwam of Sagamore Tribe, No. 2, Lynn, on the sleep of the 13th sun, hunting moon, at which time, Sagamore, Waukewan and Manataug Tribes will exemplify the other degrees.

As only a few people knew that Mrs. M. O. Stevens was going to read a paper on her personal experiences as a hospital nurse during the war, which was given a few nights ago at Grand Army hall, there has been a general desire to have her read it again, and we trust she will have an opportunity at no distant day.

A family on Wallis street were nearly suffocated with coal gas last Sunday night. They had put fresh coal on the fire before retiring, and were awakened in the night by the sickness of a child just in time to realize the situation and perhaps save the lives of the whole family.

Confirmation services were held in St. John's church this afternoon, Archbishop Williams being present. Vespers was sung by the choir, Mr. Clark being present. At the requiem mass to-morrow morning, Miss Katie F. Linehan will officiate as organist.

Hazen A. Spaulding has just put in a new apparatus for furnishing hot soda to his patrons. It is one of Tufts' finest—the drinks being furnished in silver cups. He will run hot coffee, chocolate, ginger, lemonade and beef tea. Try it.

The skating and dancing party at the rink, Thanksgiving night, was well attended. It was given by the Atlantic Base Ball Association, who have the reputation of giving good parties. A game of polo between the Atlantics and Stars was played.

The second lecture in the free course was given last evening, by Professor Richards, on electricity. It was very entertaining and instructive, and the large audience listened with rapt attention for over two hours.

The ladies of the Universalist church will hold a Fair in the vestry of their church next Wednesday and Thursday, December 8th and 9th. See advertisement in another column for full particulars.

Several invited guests from this town attended the wedding of Junius Beebe of Wakefield, to Miss Eleanor H. Merrick, of Walpole, at Hotel Vendome last evening. It was a brilliant affair.

By reference to another column the list of free lectures in the Institute will be found. Most of the lecturers are well known, and a good course is anticipated.

Golden Medical Discovery

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is an unequalled remedy. Sold by druggists.

THE DRAMA.

For her farewell engagement the charming Rhea will present at the Boston Theatre this week, two plays, both of which are new to Boston. Fairy Fingers by Ernest Legouve, one of the standard works of the Theatre Francais, will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and at the Saturday matinee. In this drama Rhea made her earliest European success. She assumes the role originally assumed by Madeline Brohan. The plot of the piece is novel, the mountings will be unusually fine and the costumes elegant. Mlle. Rhea's company for this season is well selected and includes Arthur Forrest, W. R. Owen, Robert G. Wilson, Hugh Gibson, J. R. Amory, Robert Gibbs, Ida Waterman, Almira Strong, Ella Wren and Marie Dantes

Nearly all the leading members of the cast of Harbor Lights have been under the weather at various times during its wonderful run at the Boston Museum. But the management was always singularly fortunate in its "under-study" arrangements, and so the drama was always enjoyed greatly. Now the fourth month of success opens for the play, with the company in the best of spirits and likely to win plaudits in Harbor Lights, for many a week to come.

There is no falling off, nor any sign of it, in the great popularity of "Adonis," Dixey and the favorites of Rice's burlesque company. In fact, it is safe to say the piece could run the entire season if "our Harry" could remain so long. But at Christmastide the favorite must go to new fields. Adonis soon reaches its seventy-fifth performance, and people who wish to see the success of both hemispheres should secure seats well in advance.

Modjeska will play her Boston engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre this season, commencing December 27. Besides an extensive repertoire, she will be seen in her new piece, which scored such a brilliant New York success.

Although Held by the Enemy was long ago cast at the Boston Museum, the continued success of Harbor Lights makes the date of the production of Gillette's war play decidedly uncertain.

At the Boston Theatre, December 6th. Edwin Booth will begin a limited engagement. His repertoire for the week is as follows: Monday, Richelieu; Tuesday, Hamlet; Wednesday, The Fool's Revenge; Thursday, Richelieu: Friday, The Merchant of Venice and Katherine and Petruchio; Saturday matinee, Hamlet; Saturday night, Othello, with Mr. Booth as Iago. The sale of tickets will begin on Thursday morning at the box office.

Charles Barron makes his re-entrance in Boston on Tuesday, December 7, as the Ghost in Hamlet, Edwin Booth acting the title role.

AFTER DIPHTHERIA.—Diphtheria is a terrible disease, requiring the greatest medical skill to effect a complete cure. Even when its power is broken, it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. Just here Hood's Sarsaparilla does a vast amount of good, expelling impurities from the blood, giving it richness and vitality, while it renovates and strengthens the system.

The Magazine of American History closes its sixteenth volume with an exceptionally bright and readable December number. The frontispiece this month is an admirable portrait of Major-General Halleck, made expressly for this magazine from the painting in possession of Gen. George W. Cullum; it accompanies a paper of surpassing interest to all classes of readers, entitled "Misunderstandings; Halleck and Grant," by Gen. James B. Fry. The number has a holiday flavor, two of its papers relating to the Thanksgiving festival—"One New England Thanksgiving," by the Editor, agreeably illustrated with old-fashioned Thanksgiving scenes; and "A Thanksgiving Legend," from the pen of Gilbert Nash, the poet. "The Swamp Angel," the name given to the gun which in 1863 was used in firing on Charleston, is the title of a notable paper, by William S. Stryker, adjutant-General of New Jersey, illustrated with portraits of the officers on that occasion, and other pictures; and Gen. Lee concludes his interesting series, "From Cedar Monntain to Chantilly." This magazine is giving to authentic history the life, animation, interest and intensity it has so long needed. $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Mrs. C. Kellogg, Edgwood, Cal., says: Red Star Cough Cure is the best medicine she has ever used for colds for the children.

The December number of the Young Ladies' Journal has been received from the International News Company, of New York. This is a Christmas number and just double the usual size, and, as a consequence, contains just double the amount of good things. It contains all the latest fashions and a number of colored plates, representing different styles of fancy work, besides a large quantity of entertaining reading matter and music. Buy the Christmas number at Mrs. Gilson's.

Cocaine, Iodoform or Mercurials in any form in the treatment of catarrh or hay fever should be avoided, as they are both injurious and dangerous. Iodoform is easily detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market to-day is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of acute and chronic cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied to each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price fifty cents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."
EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN.

FOR 1887.

DAILY, $8; SUNDAY, $2; WEEKLY, $1.

THE REPUBLICAN aims to be a newspaper in the broadest and highest sense. It prints all the legitimate news of the day without fear or favor, unembarrassed by personal or partisan obligations, and in compact, well arranged form. Its facilities for gathering and publishing the news are unsurpassed outside of the largest cities, and are constantly improving.

THE REPUBLICAN is distinctively a New England newspaper, although its reputation is national. It faithfully reports the life of this region and represents its intelligent spirit.

In its political attitude THE REPUBLICAN maintains a thorough independence, giving a fair hearing to all reasonable men and parties in its columns, but asserting its own convictions on public issues with vigor and clearness.

THE REPUBLICAN is an earnest advocate of temperance, of social simplicity and purity, and of all the good causes that help to make life better It is not merely a journal of news, but undertakes to instruct and entertain its readers by the publication of a rich variety of literary and miscellaneous matter, embracing home and foreign correspondence, stories, poetry, dramatic art and society notes, etc.

A new and valuable feature of THE REPUBLICAN is its

SERIES OF WAR MEMORIES.

Being interesting reminiscences of the Rebellion, written expressly for its columns, chiefly by Western Massachusetts veterans, both officers and privates. These articles appear in Monday's Daily and in THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN each week.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Contains the cream of the seven Daily issues carefully edited and arranged in compact form. It i an admirable family newspaper for all who are unable to read a daily paper or who desire to follow New England life and thought, and costs only

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR,

Or 10 cents a month for shorter periods; 3 cents a copy.

New subscribers to THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN for 1887 will receive the paper for the month of December, 1886, without extra charge.

All subscriptions are payable in advance and sample copies are sent free.

ADDRESS

THE REPUBLICAN,

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The following list of new books are published in pamphlet form, many of them illustrated, and printed on fine paper. They are not little stories, but are valuable books, complete, long Novels and other works, by famous writers of Europe and America, and in cloth-bound form would cost at least $1 each.

Essica; or, The Mystery of the Headlands. —Grimm's Fairy Stories.—The Story of A Storm.—Manual of Etiquette.—The Mystery at Blackwood Grange.—The Bridge of Love. —The History and Mystery of Common Things.—A Shadow on the Threshold.—The Morwick Farm Mystery.—The Cities of the New World.—Miss or Mrs.?—Rose Lodge.— The Standard Letter Writer.—The Knightsbridge Mystery.—Famous Detective Stories —Nell Brandon.—The Yellow Mask.—Parlor Magic.—A Golden Dawn.—Winter Evening Recreations.—The Romantic Adventures of a Milkmaid.—The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun.—Back to the Old Home.—The Frozen Deep.—Red Court Farm.

The entire list of the above books, 25 in all. is given free, as a premium, to every one who subscribes to Gleason's weekly "HOME CIRCLE" for one year at $2.

Was there ever such a chance to get so much reading for so little money? You get a choice literary weekly paper of eight pages forty columns of reading matter and illustrations, being of the same size for which other publishers charge $3 a year; besides you get free as a premium 25 valuable books, and all free by mail for only $2.

The books alone will furnish enjoyment to the whole family for months to come.

Send your address to F. Gleason & Co., 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass., and they will send you copies of the "HOME CIRCLE" free by mail.

Gleason's celebrated Publishing House was established in 1842. Mr. Gleason, the senior partner, was the originator of the Pictorial papers in this country.

"Do you consecrate yourself to the God who made and redeemed you, and do you promise to serve him all your days?" and with manly voice he answers "I do." There is an April shower in the pew where father and mother sit, and a rainbow of joy which arches both their souls, that makes all differences of creed infinitesimal. And the daughter who had been very worldly, and gay, and thoughtless, puts her life on the altar of consecration, and as the sunlight of that Sabbath streams through the church window and falls upon her brow and cheek, she looks like their other daughter, whose face was lumined with the brightness of another world, on the day when the Lord took her into His heavenly keeping years ago.

I should not wonder if, after all, these parents pass the evening of their life in the same church, all differences of church preference overcome by the joy of being in the house of God where their children were prepared for usefulness and heaven.

But I can give you a recipe for ruining your children. Angrily contend in the household that your church is right and the church of your companion is wrong. Bring sneer and caricature to emphasize your opinions, and your children will make up their minds that religion is a sham, and they will have none of it. In the northeast storm of domestic controversy, the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley will not grow. Fight about apostolic succession, fight about election and free agency, fight about baptism, fight about the bishopric, fight about gown and surplice, and the religious prospects of your children will be left dead on the field. You will be as unfortunate as Charles, duke of Burgundy, who in battle lost a diamond the value of a nation, for in your fight you will lose the jewel of salvation for your entire household. This is nothing against the advocacy of your own religious theories. Use all forcible argument, bring all telling illustration, array all demonstrative facts, but let there be no acerbity, no stinging retort, no mean insinuation, no superciliousness, as though all others were wrong and you infallibly right.

Take a hint from astronomy. The Ptolemaic system made the earth the center of the solar system, and everything was thought to turn round the earth. But the Copernican system came, and made the sun the center, around which the planets revolved. The bigot makes his little belief the center of everything, but the large souled Christian makes the Son of Righteousness the center, and all denominations, without any clashing, and each at its own light and in its own sphere, revolving around it. Over the tomb of Dean Stanley in Westminster abbey is the passage of Scripture: "Thy commandments are exceeding broad." Let no man crowd us on to a path like the bridge Al Sirat, which the Mohammedan thinks leads from this world over the abyss of hell into paradise, the breadth of the bridge less than the web of a starved spider or the edge of a sword or razor, off the edges of which many fall. No; while the way is not wide enough to take with us any of our sins. it is wide enough for all Christian believers to pass without peril into everlasting safety.

But do not any of you depend upon what you call a sound creed for salvation. A man may own all the statutes of the state of New York, and yet not be a lawyer, and a man may own all the best medical treatises, and not be a physician; and a man may own all the best works on painting and architecture, and not be either painter or architect; and a man may own all the sound creeds in the world, and yet not be a Christian. Not what you have in your head and on your tongue, but in your heart and in your life, will decide everything.

In olden times in England, before the modern street lamps were invented, every householder was expected to have a lantern suspended in front of his house, and the cry of the watchmen in London as they went along at eventide was: "Hang out your lights!" Instead of disputing in your home about the different kinds of lantern, as a watchman on the walls of Zion I cry: "Let your light so shine before men that they, seeing your good works, may glorify your father which is in heaven." Hang out your lights! You may have a thousand ideas about religion, and yet not the great idea of pardoning mercy. It is not the number of your ideas, but the greatness of them. A mouse hath ten offspring in her nest, while the lioness hath one in her lair. All ideas about forms and ceremonies and church government put together are not worth the one idea of getting to heaven yourself and taking your family with you.

But do not reject Christianity, as many do, because there are so many sects. Standing in Westminster hotel, London, I looked out of the window and saw three clocks, as near as I can remember, one on the Parliament house, another on St. Margaret's chapel, another on Westminster abbey, and they were all different. One said 12 o'clock at noon, another said 11:55, another said 12:06. I might as well have concluded that there is no such thing as time, because the three timepieces were different, as for you to conclude that there is no such thing as pure Christianity because the churches differ in their statement of it. It is about 12 o'clock noon, of the glorious Gospel dispensation, although the church clocks somewhat differ, and under the present light you have no excuse for neglecting your duty because you do not like this or do not like that. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

But let us all rejoice that, although part of our family may worship on earth in one church, and part in another church, or bowed at the same altars, it must be in a compromise of preferences, we are, if redeemed, on the way to perfect church, where all our preferences will be fully gratified. Great cathedral of eternity, with arches of amethysts, and pillars of sapphire, and floors of emerald, and windows aglow with the sunrise of heaven! What wide aisles, spacious enough to allow empires to enter! What amphitheatres of piled-up splendor, gallery above gallery, princes and princesses, kings and queens bending over them! What stupendous towers, with chimes angel hoisted and angel rung! What myriads of worshipers, white robed and coroneted! What an officiator at the altar, even "the great high priest of our profession!" What walls, hung with the captured shields and flags, by the church militant passed up to be church triumphant! What doxologies of all nations! Coronet to coronet, cymbal to cymbal, harp to harp, organ to organ! Pull out the tremulent stop to recall the sufferings past! Pull out the trumpet stop to celebrate the victory!

When shall these eyes thy heaven built walls
And pearly gates behold?
Thy bulwarks with salvation strong,
And streets of shining gold.

France's Tax Upon Pianos.

An attempt to put a tax upon pianos in Paris is vigorously repulsed by The Siecle, which contends that the piano has a moral mission, being par excellence the home instrument that keeps fathers and brothers within doors and away from the outside temptations of the great city. In addition to this, The Siecle contends that the piano has a refining influence upon the family which should never be checked by taxes.—New York Sun.

THANKSGIVING SERMON.

At the South church, Thanksgiving day, Rev. George Alcott Phinney preached a sermon from Ps. 95:2. "Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving. The preacher said in substance:

At Christmas we sing the angel's song of "glory in the highest." The song which should be sung at every fireside on this memorable day is the angel's song of the Apocalypse. "Blessing and glory and wisdom and thanksgiving and honor and power and might be unto our Lord for ever and ever." A song which has the richest possible composition has four parts whose harmony blends in perfect melody.

I thank God to-day for the birth of this nation. Not in the aboriginal red man's heart whose master passion was a love of war; not in the accidental discoveries of the Norsemen; not in the achievements of the Spaniards; not in the industry of a Cortez, Magellan or Columbus; not in the work of England who may cherish the fame of the Venetian Cabot, Martin Frobisher, Sir Francis Drake and Walter Raleigh and the indefatigable labors of the London and Plymouth colonies, but in the devotion of the Puritans to truth and righteousness may be found the moral germ of our national unfoldment.

On the bleak heath in Lincolnshire they gathered in 1608 and escaped to Holland and a few years later were transplanted on our shores. Last summer among the mountains of New England I was shown a berry field which a man purposed to keep for his own use. He fenced it all around and forbade the public to trespass thereupon. But God one day gathered a few seeds of that man's field, and scattering them on the wings of the wind carried them around the side of the mountains and on them to-day luxuriant fields of vegetation are flourishing. England tried to circumscribe the spirit of religious freedom which blossomed in the souls of the Puritans, but God gathered a few of this seed in his palm and sowed them in the rich soil of this continent, and to-day its fruit is ripening on the mountain ranges of the earth. Glory be to God for this precious seed of thrift, piety, zeal and strictness which God picked from his Eastern garner to sow in our uncultivated soil.

Let us pause for a moment. When I think of that massive temple of the East on the top of which Michael Angelo swung his magnificent dome, I ask who laid the foundation stones which keep firm the equipoise of pinnacle, so to-day as I look at this great temple of our American civilization, whose finished dome was swung by that great architect of her destiny when he made equality of all men, her golden spired pinnacle, I ask who laid the corner foundation of this vast structure. It was Puritan brains, Puritan bones, Puritan muscle.

"Puritans, name of all names in the early history of the West!" As Macaulay has said, "If they were unacquainted with the works of philosophers and poets they were deeply read in the words of God. If their steps were not accompanied by a splendid train of menials, legions of ministering angels had charge over them. Their palaces were houses not made with hands; their diadems crowns of glory, which should never fade away. On the rich and the eloquent, on nobles and priests they looked down with contempt, for they esteemed themselves rich in a more precious treasure, and eloquent in a more sublime language, nobles by the right of an earlier creation, and priests by the imposition of a mightier hand."

Geo. III once said, "I glory in the name of Britain." An American can glory in the birth and development of this republic. Her ships are sailing in all waters, in the warmer floods of the Atlantic and the frigid streams of the Poles. Her industries and inventions are models for all civilizations. Her scholarship is ripening toward the maturity of German thought. Her government is firm amid tempests of anarchism. The American church is marching to victory with the blood-stained banners of Calvary at her front.

For the ideas which have been born and matured on these shores and sent out as living forces for God, we should give God thanks. Into the soil of our West has been beaten, by the bleeding feet of heroic thousands, great moral principles. America, thou fair daughter of yonder mother-land, with the flush of youth still on thy cheeks, what a royal family of ideas have been born of thee! To thee, character has been riches. Character is regal! One man like Abraham Lincoln was worth more than a Persian army as large as that of fame on the ancient plains of Arbela.

Our national hymn, our Marsellaise, under the inspiration of which we are marching down the centuries, is Liberty, Equality and Fraternity. Each man in this nation is a microcosm, a little world with its own orbit, bound by a universal law, as stars are held by gravitation, but which whirls on its course as a unit of possibility and responsibility. We boast of free institutions. Dictation is antagonistic to the root-idea of the American mind. You cannot bring this people back to a toleration of dictation any more than you can carry Christendom back to Jewish monotheism. The ecclesiastical history of England has taught us the inevitable outcome of arrogant self-assertion.

The slaves have obtained their freedom among us. Their broken chains have been turned to undergirding our ship of state, so that like Paul's ship we have anticipated our foundering and are leaping from crest to crest on our course to ultimate triumph. Woman has gained her merited recognition. It is one of the gesta Christi in America. As Herbert Spencer has said, woman has reached a higher status in America than any where else. They are getting into the schools. In a masterly manner they are occupying professional and public places. They are heard in the forum, in the pulpit, at the bar, eloquent defenders and expositors of truth. Their skill is doing wonders in the sick room. Their energy in organized Christian effort is battling at the strongholds of sin. As a man I glory in the last quarter of century of achievements of women. God has his hand on the women of America.

Another principle which is gaining strength among us is the relation of alcohol to the public weal. Our American people are getting full of agitation, are showing determined effort and are witnessing present victories in temperance work. It prevails in this blessed land whose air, soil and sea is conducive to these timely births of ideas, that intemperance is a monster who should be driven back into the remotest snows of the cold celestial poles. Rum already sniffs the chill of his destination. Give thanks to God for dominating force of these great truths!

A third part in this song refers to our mercantile, social and domestic life. Our national currency is good. A general confidence prevails in business circles. Our national integrity is unquestioned. Our colors are welcomed in all waters. The Chief Executive of the nation has administered conscientiously in the interests of the people. No black angel foreannouncing sectional strife has hovered over us. The champing, snorting horses of anarchy, which are agitated by the spur of narrow ,visioned socialists, are causing a little anxiety among the people, but God holds the reins from his chariot-seat, and will in good time rein these steeds upon their haunches. The social disorder of our community God is to sanctify to our purification and upbuilding, resulting in more principle, more manliness, more Christian character. When the chaff is in the air it is a good sign that the wheat is being winnowed. Let us thank God that ravages of war, famine and cholera have not prevailed. The shock at Charleston made the nation quiver from its hoary head in the North, to its sea-laved feet on the shores of the gulf. But let us thank God that from Boston to the tropics our eastern shore is not strewn with debris.

Finally let us add another part to make the harmony of this song of gratitude. Thank Him for the hour when as you stood trembling between two destinies you were drawn to the cross of Christ! Thank Him that He has made you a citizen of heaven! Thank Him for those hours of spiritual uplift in your christian experience! Thank Him for your bitter Marah, fiery furnace and gloomy prison! Angels would delight to bear these tests of faith. Thank Him for your increasing love for the Word! Have you been maturing toward a fuller appreciation of the Bible? If we are more skeptical to-day than yesterday it is a cause for lamentation. Wind not around your heart the spinnings of the theological wheel at Andover, but bind its wounds with the century tested fabric of our fathers, the simple gospel, the old exegesis. Thank God for those angels which have ministered to you, whose wings have shaded you in the scorching heat of human conflict, fanned you in your feverish excitements, and on its snowy feathers borne you nearer to God.

Beloved, the day is yours. Before it closes get down on your knees before your Maker and Preserver, "giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." And may the sun never set on a day crowned with purer joy, heartfelt gratitude and nobler purposes for God and humanity.

NOTICE!

The carpenters, painters and decorators having finished and left us, we are again open and ready to make pictures for all who desire.

We wish to say to those who intend to have pictures finished for Christmas presents: don't put off coming to sit, but come now and give us plenty of time, and if you wish to avoid long and tiresome waits come early or make engagements. Especially bring children in the forenoon if possible.

We shall take orders for Free Hand Crayons to be finished for Christmas only until December 15th. Besides our free hand work, we can give you a finished enlargement in any style known, Crayon, Pastel, Water Color, Oil, Ink, etc., and at very reasonable prices.

Call and see samples of Permanent Bromide Enlargements, the new picture, all sizes up to life. $10 for plain enlargement, full life size, without crayon or other finishing. They are perfectly permanent, and unlike all other enlargements are fine pictures without any finishing, and the price is way below what you would have to pay for any other picture of equal pretensions.

We have samples both finished and unfinished.

THE SQUASH.

It has often been said that there was no sentiment in a squash. In fact, we recall to mind an instance where a gentleman who attempted to make a speech on the squash subject fairly "floundered;" and yet there is a sentiment, one that carries us back to our childhood days, and brings up many long-forgotten recollections.

What an important element in good, old-fashioned New-England life! What an infinite variety of home scenes are pictured in the fertile imagination of the New-England born and reared man or woman, at the mere mention of the homely vegetable! What visions of Thanksgiving, of husking frolic, of farmers' suppers, of quilting bees, of rustic kitchen or barn-floor break-downs, of lively lads and buxom maidens, of the early days are conjured up!

What banquet was perfect without the squash pie? What table, though loaded with all the luxuries known in the culinary art, with mighty skill prepared, but was lacking if only the inestimable squash pie was absent? How the far-away wanderer longs for this chief delight of "Mother's cooking." Oh, for the poet's inspiration, to sing of the rapturous associations that cluster in the memory, to describe in fitting language the peculiar charm, the substantial merit, of the delectable squash.

A world of hidden mystery is enwrapped within its tough rind. Who can tell the number of seeds a squash contains? How many millions have been served to hungry men, but whoever counted those germs of reproduction. And yet it would afford a rational satisfaction to curiosity-hunters to ascertain how many seeds are contained in a squash.

To give an impetus to this truly diverting and unique employment of leisure moments, J. B. Barnaby & Co., the well-known clothiers, 607 and 609 Washington street, opposite Globe Theatre, Boston, have placed in their windows a squash, and whoever, among the purchasers, guesses nearest to the number of the seeds, before Christmas, will receive Gift No. 1; the next nearest, Gift No. 2; and so on down to the last of the list.

A PARTIAL LIST OF GIFTS.

The gifts consist of first, an elegant Hallet & Davis, mahogany case, upright piano, valued at $400; second, $200 cash in new silver certificates; third, a magnificent full nickel-plated Expert Columbia Bicycle; fourth, an Esty organ; diamond rings, pins, earrings, gold watches, silver ice pitcher, splendid Wheeler & Wilson sewing-machine, one of Keeler's Cherry Roller-top desks, Grandfather's Antique clock, Oriental Daghestan rug (imported by John H. Pray, Sons & Co.), Holling's Extension Lamp, a Low tile ornamental stove, five boxes J. C. Davis' celebrated Old Soap, 500 S. S. Sleeper & Co.'s superior N. & S. cigars, five tons hard coal, a Rogers group (Phrenology at the Fair), willow baby basket, handsome English holly whip, and other beautiful, expensive, useful gifts too numerous to mention, the aggregate value of which amounts to a small fortune.

Every one of which are on exhibition in Messrs. Barnaby & Co.'s window, and will positively be given away on Christmas Day to those who have guessed nearest to the number of seeds the Hubbard squash contains. It's worth a trip to Boston simply to view the elegant gifts.

Sound the hewgag, beat the drum,
Soon, yes, soon, will Christmas come,
Day momentous, big with fate,
Day for which the thousands wait
For the cutting and the counting,
For the final grand accounting
Of the chosen high committee,
Honest men of this great city,
Clothed with power to act and do,
Authorized to hack and hew
The squash you in our window view,
Then to count them, without blunder,
And proclaim to all the number —
Number of the seeds they find
It contains within its rind.
Sound the hewgag, beat the drum,
See the countless thousands come,
All good-natured, crowding, laughing,
All expectant, pushing, chaffing —
Workmen who have dropped their tools,
Scholars hastening from their schools,
Bankers, merchants, artisans,
Housewives, from their pots and pans,
From the pulpit and the pew
Ministers and deacons, too;
Farmers, butchers, blacksmiths, bakers,
Baptists, Methodists and shakers,
One and all resolved to see
What this squash-seed craze can be.
You, friends, who in Boston know
J. B. Barnaby & Co.,
Will, I think, agree with me,
That a truthful history
Of their novel plans and schemes,
Of their curious ways and means,
Gifts of everything that grows,
Gifts of houses, horses, clothes,
Sleds and watches, coins and cows,
Sleighs and wagons, stoves and plows,
Guessing rackets, squash-seed days,
Every form of fun or craze
That man's brains has e'er devised,
By which clothes are advertised,
Such a history would be
A grand curiosity.

Rheumatism usually settles in the back or limbs, and often so completely overpowers its victims that all business or labor has to be abandoned. Our readers should remember that Hood's Sarsaparilla is not recommended as a positive specific for rheumatism; its proprietors doubt if there is, or can be, such a remedy. But many people who were most severely afflicted, state that they have been positively cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The disease is often the result of impure blood—hence the power of this great medicine over it. Its success in many severe cases justifies us in recommending its use to all sufferers from rheumatism. 100 Doses One Dollar.

Little amusement in town this winter!

Mr. Buchter, a well known citizen of Lancaster, Pa., has used St. Jacobs Oil, and considers it an excellent remedy in cases of swellings, bruises and burns.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON

IN CLEVELAND—"OFF TRACK—HOW TO GET ON AGAIN."

The Gospel in Handshaking—Christian People Do Not Give Proper Encouragement to the Outcast Who is Willing to Return.

Cleveland, Dec. 5.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., preached here to-day. Following is his sermon: Subject, "Off the Track; How to Get on Again."

Text: Proverbs xxiii, 35 :"When shall I awake? I will seek it yet again."

With an insight into human nature such as no other man ever reached, Solomon, in my text, sketches the mental operations of one who, having stepped aside from the path of rectitude, desires to return. With a wish for something better he said: "When shall I awake? When shall I come out of this horrid nightmare of iniquity?" But seized upon by uneradicated habit and forced down hill by his passions he cries out: "I will seek it yet again. I will try it once more."

Our libraries are adorned with an elegant literature addressed to young men, pointing out to them all the dangers and perils of life—complete maps of the voyage, showing all the rocks, the quicksands, the shoals. But suppose a man has already made shipwreck; suppose he is already off the track; suppose he has already gone astray, how is he to get back? That is a field comparatively untouched. I propose to address myself this morning to such. There are those in this audience who, with every passion of their agonized soul, are ready to hear such a discussion. They compare themselves with what they were ten years ago, and cry out from the bondage in which they are incarcerated. Now, if there be any in this house, come with an earnest purpose, yet feeling they are beyond the pale of Christian sympathy, and that the sermon can hardly be expected to address them, then, at this moment, I give them my right hand, and call them brother. Look up. There is glorious and triumphant hope for you yet. I sound the trumpet of gospel deliverance. The church is ready to spread a banquet at your return, and the hierarchs of heaven to fall into line of bannered procession at the news of your emancipation. So far as God may help me, I propose to show what are the obstacles of your return, and then how you are to surmount those obstacles.

The first difficulty in the way of your return is the force of moral gravitation. Just as there is a natural law which brings down to the earth anything you throw into the air, so there is a corresponding moral gravitation. In other words, it is easier to go down than it is to go up; it is easier to do wrong than it is to do right. Call to mind the comrades of your boyhood days—some of them good, some of them bad. Which most affected you? Call to mind the anecdotes that you have heard in the last five or ten years. Some of them are pure and some of them impure. Which the more easily sticks to your memory? During the years of your life you have formed certain courses of conduct—some of them good, some of them bad. To which style of habit did you the more easily yield? Ah! my friends, we have to take but a moment of self-inspection to find out that there is in all our souls a force of moral gravitation. But that gravitation may be resisted. Just as you may pick up from the earth something and hold it in your hand toward heaven, just so, by the power of God's grace, a soul fallen may be lifted toward peace, toward pardon, toward heaven. Force of moral gravitation is in every one of us, but there is power in God's grace to overcome that force of moral gravitation.

The next thing in the way of your return is the power of evil habit. I know there are those who say it is very easy for them to give up evil habits. I do not believe them. Here is a man given to intoxication. He knows it is disgracing his family, destroying his property, ruining him, body, mind and soul. If that man, being an intelligent man, and loving his family, could easily give up that habit, would he not do so? The fact that he does not give it up proves it is hard to give it up. It is a very easy thing to sail down stream, the tide carrying you with great force; but suppose you turn the boat up stream, is it so easy then to row it? As long as we yield to the evil inclinations in our hearts, and our bad habits, we are sailing down stream, but the moment we try to turn we put our boat in the rapids just above Niagara, and try to row up stream.

Take a man given to the habit of using tobacco, as most of you do, and let him resolve to stop, and he finds it very difficult. Twenty-one years ago I quit that habit, and I would as soon dare to put my right hand in the fire as once to indulge in it. Why? Because it was such a terrific struggle to get over it. Now, let a man be advised by his physician to give up the use of tobacco. He goes around not knowing what to do with himself. He cannot add up a line of figures. He cannot sleep nights. It seems as if the world had turned upside down. He feels his business is going to ruin. Where he was kind and obliging he is scolding and fretful. The composure that characterized him has given way to a fretful restlessness, and he has become a complete fidget. What power is it that has rolled a wave of woe over the earth and shaken a portent in the heavens? He has tried to stop smoking! After a while he says: "I am going to do as I please. The doctor doesn't understand my case. I am going back to my old habit." And he returns. Everything assumes its usual composure. His business seems to brighten. The world becomes an attractive place to live in. His children, seeing the difference, hail the return of their father's genial disposition. What wave of color has dashed blue into the sky, and greenness into the mountain foliage, and the glow of sapphire into the sunset? What enchantment has lifted a world of beauty and joy on his soul? He has gone back to smoking.

Oh! the fact is, as we all know in our own experience that habit is a taskmaster; as long as we obey it it does not chastise us, but let us resist and we find we are to be lashed with scorpion whips and bound with ship cable, and thrown into the track of bone breaking juggernauts. During the war of 1812 there was a ship set on fire just above Niagara Falls, and then, cut loose from its moorings, it came on down through the night and tossed over the falls. It was said to have been a scene brilliant beyond description. Well, there are thousands of men on fire of evil habit, coming down through the rapids and through the awful night of temptation toward the eternal plunge. Oh, how hard it is to arrest them. God only can arrest them. Suppose a man, after five or ten or twenty years of evil doing, resolves to do right? Why, all the forces of darkness are allied against him. He cannot sleep nights. He gets down on his knees in the midnight and cries, "God help me!" He bites his lip. He grinds his teeth. He clenches his fist in a determination to keep his purpose. He dare not look at the bottles in the window of a wine store. It was one long, bitter, exhaustive, hand to hand fight with inflamed, tantalizing and merciless habit. When he thinks he is entirely free, the old inclinations pounce upon him like a pack of hounds with their muzzles tearing away at the flanks of one poor reindeer. In Paris there is a sculptured representation of Bacchus, the god of revelry. He is riding on a panther at full leap. Oh, how suggestive! Let every one who is speeding on bad ways understand he is not riding a docile and well broken steed, but he is riding a monster, wild and bloodthirsty, going at a death leap. How many there are who resolve on a better life and say: "When shall I awake?" but, seized on by their old habits, cry: "I will try it once more; I will seek it yet again!" Years ago there were some Princeton students who were skating, and the ice was very thin, and some one warned the company back from the air hole, and finally warned them entirely to leave the place. But one young man with bravado, after all the rest had stopped, cried out: "One round more!" He swept around, and went down, and was brought out a corpse. My friends, there are thousands and tens of thousands of men losing their souls in that way. It is the one round more.

I have also to say that if a man wants to return from evil practices society repulses him. Desiring to reform, he says: "Now, I will shake off my old associates, and I will find Christian companionship." And he appears at the church door some Sabbath day, and the usher greets him with a look, as much as to say: "Why, you here? You are the last man I ever expected to see at church! Come, take this seat right down by the door!" instead of saying: "Good morning; I am glad you are here. Come; I will give you a first rate seat, right up by the pulpit." Well, the prodigal, not yet discouraged, enters a prayer meeting, and some Christian man, with more zeal than common sense, says: "Glad to see you. The dying thief was saved, and I suppose there is mercy for you!" The young man, disgusted, chilled, throws himself back on his dignity, resolved he never will enter the house of God again. Perhaps not quite fully disgusted about reformation, he sides up by some highly respectable man he used to know, going down the street, and immediately the respectable man has an errand down some other street! Well, the prodigal, wishing to return, takes some member of a Christian association by the hand, or tries to. The Christian young man looks at him, looks at the faded apparel and the marks of dissipation, and instead of giving him a warm grip of the hand offers him the tip end of the long fingers of the left hand, which is equal to striking a man in the face.

Oh, how few Christian people understand how much force and gospel there is in a good, honest handshaking! Sometimes, when you have felt the need of encouragement, and some Christian man has taken you heartily by the hand, have you not felt that thrilling through every fibre of your body, mind and soul, an encouragement that was just what you needed? You do not know anything at all about this unless you know when a man tries to return from evil courses of conduct he runs against repulsions innumerable. We say of some man, he lives a block or two from the church or half a mile from the church. There are people in our crowded cities who live 1,000 miles from church. Vast deserts of indifference between them and the house of God. The fact is, we must keep our respectability, though thousands and tens of thousands perish. Christ sat with publicans and sinners. But if there came to the house of God a man with marks of dissipation upon him, people almost threw up their hands in horror, as much as to say: "Isn't it shocking?" How these dainty, fastidious Christians in all our churches are going to get into heaven I don't know, unless they have an especial train of cars, cushioned and upholstered, each one a car to himself! They cannot go with the great herd of publicans and sinners. O ye, who curl your lip with scorn at the fallen, I tell you plainly, if you had been surrounded by the same influences, instead of sitting to-day amid the cultured, and the refined, and the Christian, you would have been a crouching wretch in stable or ditch, covered with filth and abomination! It is not because you are naturally any better, but because the mercy of God has protected you. Who are you that, brought up in Christian circles, and watched by Christian parentage, you should be so hard on the fallen?

I think men also are often hindered from return by the fact that churches are too anxious about their membership, and too anxious about their denomination, and they rush out when they see a man about to give up his sin and return to God, and ask him how he is going to be baptized, whether by sprinkling or immersion, and what kind of church he is going to join. O, my friends! it is a poor time to talk about Presbyterian catechisms, and Episcopal liturgies, and Methodist lovefeasts, and Baptistries, to a man that is coming out of the darkness of sin into the glorious light of the gospel. Why, it reminds me of a man drowning in the sea, and a life boat puts out for him, and the man in the boat says to the man out of the boat: "Now, if I get you ashore, are you going to live in my street?" First get him ashore, and then talk about the non-essentials of religion. Who cares what church he joins, if he only joins Christ and starts for heaven? O, you ought to have, my brother! an illumined face, and a hearty grip for every one that tries to turn from his evil way. Take hold of the same book with him, though his dissipations shake the book, remembering that he that converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins.

Now, I have shown you these obstacles because I want you to understand I know all the difficulties in the way; but I am now to tell you how Hannibal may scale the Alps, and how the shackles may be unriveted, and how the paths of virtue forsaken may be regained.

First of all, my brother, throw yourself on God. Go to him frankly and earnestly, and tell him those habits you have, and ask Him if there is any help in all the resources of omnipotent love, to give it to you. Do not go with a long rigmarole people call prayer, made up of "ohs" and "ahs" and "forever and forever amens!" Go to God and cry for help! help! help! and if you cannot cry for help just look and live. I remember in the late war I was at Antietam, and I went into the hospitals after the battle, and I said to a man: "Where are you hurt?" He made no answer, but held up his arm, swollen and splintered. I saw where he was hurt. The simple fact is, when a man has a wounded soul, all he has to do is to hold it up before a sympathetic Lord and get it healed. It does not take any long prayer. Just hold up the wound. Oh! it is no small thing, when a man is nervous, and weak and exhausted, coming from his evil ways, to feel that God puts two omnipotent arms arms around about him and says: "Young man, I will stand by you. The mountains may depart and the hills be removed, but I will never fail you." And then, as the soul thinks the news is too good to be true, and cannot believe it, and looks up in God's face, God lifts his right hand and takes an oath, an affidavit, saying: "As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth."

Blessed be God for such a gospel as this! "Cut the slices thin," said the wife to the husband, "or there will not be enough to go all around for the children; cut the slices thin." Blessed be God there is a full loaf for every one that wants it; bread enough and

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY.

Harper's Young People has been called "the model of what a periodical for young readers ought to be," and the justice of this commendation is amply sustained by the large circulation it has attained both at home and in Great Britain. This success has been reached by methods that must commend themselves to the judgment of parents, no less than to the tastes of children—namely by an earnest and well sustained effort to provide the best and most attractive reading for young people at a low price. The illustrations are copious and of a conspicuously high standard of excellence.

An epitome of everything that is attractive and desirable in juvenile literature.—[Boston Courier.

A weekly feast of good things to the boys and girls in every family which it visits.—[Brooklyn Union.

BOSTON WEEKLY JOURNAL.

EXCELLENCE AND LOW COST.

A Leading Paper for the Home, for One Dollar a Year, Postage Included.

Year by year, with ever increasing emphasis, the Boston Weekly Journal has been warranted in putting forth the claims of a sterling New England Newspaper based on its popular and representative position; and for the year 1887 it has to show an enhancement of these characteristics.

More than half a century of work and progress, in which The Journal has kept abreast of times when journalism made its most rapid strides, has given this paper a standing and stability that cannot be lightly questioned; and instead of adding in price while gaining in ground for appreciation it has minimized the cost to its readers; the reasonable rate of a dollar and a half per annum being reduced to ONE DOLLAR, thus making it actually less than two cents per week.

CLUB RATES.

This reduction has not withdrawn any of the inducements to those who get up clubs:

Ten Copies and one extra to the organizer of a Club - - - - - - - - $10
Twenty Copies and two extra - - - - 20
One Copy free for every Ten Subsbribers.

By these terms and in view of the journalistic value for which they stand, it is believed that our subscribers can congratulate themselves on securing the

CHEAPEST NEW ENGLAND NEWSPAPER.

To sift, to classify and put before the readers in most intelligible form the news of the week is the continued purpose of The Weekly Journal; and in filling this mission the aim shall be to place the topics in the due perspective of importance from the standpoint of a New England reader.

The thirty-six ample columns will retain as heretofore the Gleanings and Gossip of distinctive interest to our population; Notes on the Industrial Avocations, Agricultural, Maritime, Manufacturing and Transportation; special reports on Markets, Trade and Labor, as well as Financial Matters; Rambling Talks and Essays on Home Topics; Correspondence from various parts of the world by our own correspondents; Congressional News; Political Jottings; Editorials on Topics of Living Interest; Poems, Sketches, Miscellaneous and Household Matters.

The year 1887 bids fair to be one in which the advantages of a trustworthy medium of information will be specially called for, owing to the prospective developments on matters touching the labor, tariff and kindred questions and political disturbances both in America and the Old World.

The changes in parties which have caused many papers to become uncertain and wavering guides to public opinion have not affected the character or consistency of The Journal as an exponent of Republican principles. In this particular The Journal occupies a unique position in New England.

The Weekly Edition is issued every Thursday.

Persons engaged in the commercial pursuits outside the large cities will find a paper of particular value in the Boston Semi-Weekly Journal,

which is published on Tuesdays and Fridays, and contains the fullest possible Market, Commercial and Marine Reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character.

Subscription Rates.

One Copy, including postage, One Year - $ 3.00
Five Copies, including postage, to one address, One Year - - - - - 12.50
Ten Copies, including postage, to one address, One Year - - - - - 25.00
One Copy Free to getter-up of Club of Ten.
Twenty Copies, including postage, to one address, One Year - - - - - 45.00

SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN.

FOR 1887.

DAILY, $8; SUNDAY, $2; WEEKLY, $1.

THE REPUBLICAN aims to be a newspaper in the broadest and highest sense. It prints all the legitimate news of the day without fear or favor unembarrassed by personal or partisan obligations, and in compact, well arranged form. Its facilities for gathering and publishing the news are unsurpassed outside of the largest cities, and are constantly improving.

THE REPUBLICAN is distinctively a New England newspaper, although its reputation is national. It faithfully reports the life of this region and represents its intelligent spirit.

In its political attitude THE REPUBLICAN maintains a thorough independence, giving a fair hearing to all reasonable men and parties in its columns, but asserting its own convictions on public issues with vigor and clearness.

THE REPUBLICAN is an earnest advocate of temperance, of social simplicity and purity, and of all the good causes that help to make life better. It is not merely a journal of news, but undertakes to instruct and entertain its readers by the publication of a rich variety of literary and miscellaneous matter, embracing home and foreign correspondence, stories, poetry, dramatic art and society notes, etc.

A new and valuable feature of THE REPUBLICAN is its

SERIES OF WAR MEMORIES.

Being interesting reminiscences of the Rebellion, written expressly for its columns, chiefly by Western Massachusetts veterans, both officers and privates. These articles appear in Monday's Daily and in THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN each week.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Contains the cream of the seven Daily issues carefully edited and arranged in compact form. It is an admirable family newspaper for all who are unable to read a daily paper or who desire to follow New England life and thought, and costs only

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR,

Or 10 cents a month for shorter periods; 3 cents a copy.

New subscribers to THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN for 1887 will receive the paper for the month of December, 1886, without extra charge.

All subscriptions are payable in advance and sample copies are sent free.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of

DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Under the auspices of the Oxford League, a concert will be given in the auditorium of the Methodist church, tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock. The tickets have been in the hands of the Oxford League for several weeks and a good attendance is already assured. Tickets are for sale at Geo. Stevens' and the store of W. F. Sawyer, at the low price of 25 cents. The proceeds are to be for the Oxford League to assist them in contributing the amount which they have pledged to the repair fund of the church. We trust all our citizens, who have not other engagements, will take hold and assist them by attending the concert. With the addition of Mons. Alfred De Seve, the well-known violinist, the concert will be by the same artists who participated in the musicale at the Junipers, late in the summer, viz.: Mr. Isaac Littlefield, tenor, of East Stoughton; Miss Emma Cheney, of Somerville, contralto; and Mrs. J. P. Fernald, of this town, soprano. Mme. De Seve will be the accompanist for De Seve, on the violin, and Mr. Leslie Goldthwait will play the rest of the accompaniments, and a piano solo. It is expected, among other things, that Mrs. Fernald will render Bach-Gounod's Ave Maria, with violin obligato, and the piano and organ.

SPARKS.

The hose pungs have been loaded up and put in service during the sleighing.

The famous Lynnfield hotel in Lynnfield caught fire Sunday evening during the heavy snow storm and but for the exertions of the proprietor and assistants the whole building would have been burned. The fire caught in the wood work around one of the fire places and burned into the partitions where it took a half hours' work to extinguish it. As Peabody and Lynn would be the nearest points from which help could have been obtained, had the fire got outside, the building would have burned down before aid could have got there.

A slight fire occurred in the house of Dennis Gibbons, on Shillaber street, Monday afternoon. A feather bed caught fire, but was thrown out into the snow before any great damage was done.

William Brown has resigned his position as clerk of Hose 1 and withdrawn from the company. George A. Lawrence was elected clerk in his place and F. C. Blake to fill the vacancy.

The Board of Engineers will meet this evening.

Ex Engineer Folsom's little dog Skip died at the Central Station Monday night. Some one poisoned the little animal some time ago and he never recovered from the effects. He was an intelligent little fellow and a great friend of the firemen.

A recent call at Huzzey's photograph gallery, 252 Essex street, Salem, shows that quite a transformation has recently taken place there. The large reception room, 22x45 feet, has been newly painted and elegantly furnished. The walls are tinted and the ceiling frescoed. New carpets and handsome draperies separate the room from the operating room, which is 22x48, and made entirely of glass on one side and the roof, making it the finest operating room in the state. The reception room contains show cases giving some specimens of the fine work executed at this studio. The walls are hung with specimens in crayon and water color, including the first crayon head made by Mr. Huzzey years ago. There are also several ideal heads of his own conception which are much admired by all who visit the room. In the operating room there are cameras and other apparatus of the latest improved style and none but the instantaneous process is employed, which for infants takes less than a second. The operating room is supplied with almost every conceivable scene or background which add so much to the beauty of a picture. There are also sea shells on which children sit and have the appearance of floating on the water. Home scenes, including the open fireplace and old fashioned clock, are among the many attractive ones. In the negative room there are about 8000 different plates, and leading from this room is the printing room on the roof which has recently built and is a valuable addition to the premises. Mr. Huzzey is introducing a new process of life size photograph, which can be softened with crayon, making it equal for beauty with hand work. He is at work on a composition group of the officers of the Eighth Regiment. Mr. Huzzey has been in Salem but a comparatively short time, but has already made a reputation that places him at the head, and the work he executes is not surpassed in New England.

Miss Celia Thaxter, the sweet singer, whose delightsome poems breathe always the purest sentiments, give us, through the press of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., a little volume of new verses, THE CRUISE OF THE MYSTERY, and other poems. There is a charm about the writings of Miss Thaxter, born of the free sea air in which she delights to dwell, and of which she so often writes, and this will prove a welcome collection to her many admirers. Merrill & Mackintire has this volume.

The firm of Merrill & Mackintire, in Salem, are on deck early as usual, with a full line of holiday goods. Who of our readers does not know this enterprising firm? And who is there who does not seek this store almost the first thing in their shopping expeditions for Christmas gifts? At this season of the year their stores are crowded from morning till evening, and the agreeable manner in which customers are served makes it a pleasure to trade there. Their arrangement of fancy articles at the entrance is unusually full, embracing many novelties, among which may be mentioned transparencies, cigar cutters in every conceivable design, gents' shaving cases, etc. There is a fine display of albums, bibles, music rolls, alligator sets for dressing cases and collars and cuffs, and in the rear a display of Christmas cards equal to any thing we have seen at the store. The assortment embraces many novelties, and the line of literary calendars is this year unusually full and complete. In books of all kinds the firm are headquarters, in miscellaneous and juvenile books there is everything to tempt the purchaser, while the assortment of standard works is unusually complete. There is a large line of tablets, knives, gold pens and pencils, pocket books etc. In the toy store there can be found a perfect wonderland of novelties, toys of every conceivable nature, from the cheapest to the more expensive dolls, the largest assortment ever shown, toy engines, games, blocks, puzzles, desks for children, animals, musical instruments, in short, space will fail to go into all the details. We advise our readers to go and see for themselves, and if they are in doubt as to their gifts, we assure them the varied stock of the firm will remove all doubts at once.

The early seeker for holiday gifts will not fail to visit the store of W. G. Webber & Co. where, in addition to the regular line of goods kept by this firm, will be found Christmas goods on every floor. On the left of the main entrance to the store are the fancy goods—all nice goods, and tastefully displayed. It would be impossible to mention them all—a visit is necessary to take in the full extent of the display which includes novelties of all descriptions. On the other side is a tempting display of fans, not for use this weather, but the nicer ones for holiday gifts. The young lady in charge of the ribbon counter, just at the entrance, is unusually busy at this season—and her counters are loaded with a variety of the new shades, which are simply dazzling to the eye. There is, also, shown here jewelry and bags—one of the largest line ever displayed in this establishment. On the second floor are Christmas cards in endless variety, including calendar cards which are much sought for this year; there are, also, Albums. And in the shoe department a full line of ladies' slippers of the choicest designs. At this time, also, the cloak department attracts attention. What more sensible gift to a lady than a garment for out-door wear, of the designs kept by this firm? Mr. Webber was feeling pretty well satisfied with this department on the day of our visit—and well he might, having made sales of two real seal sacques, amounting to $1,000, that day. On the third floor is the art needlework department, in charge of Miss Graves, of Marblehead, and here is a veritable wonderland. Every conceivable design of made-up goods is on sale here, with patterns and designs for the advantage of those wishing to use them. There is a book department on this floor—and it was the great attraction. There is a full line of standard works at very low prices—a choice line of juvenile books bought directly from the publishers for cash. On this floor is a Santa Claus show—open at 2 and 5 every afternoon and 7.30 P. M., to which children, accompanied by their elders, are cordially invited. At the appointed time Santa Claus comes down the chimney and distributes gifts to the children within his reach. The basement of this store is devoted to toys—all of the better class. There are no cheap toys, lack of room preventing the firm from going into this branch. But there are papeteries, block toys, Japanese goods, and everything needed to make the heart of the giver rejoice. Customers will remember that an elevator conveys them to every floor—and in the inspection of the special goods, the regular line of gloves, handkerchiefs, silks and dress goods will not be forgotten as a sensible gift at all times and especially at the Christmas season. Next week this firm will have their Christmas window—a special display, of a novel and original design, made entirely at home, on exhibition. It will be the most elaborate display ever attempted in Salem. Look for it,

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

RE-DEDICATION.

History of the Methodist Church in Peabody.

Description of the Edifice.

Cost of the Repairs, etc.

The rededication services at the Methodist church in this town, with the reunion of the living pastors in the evening, calls to mind the early beginnings of Methodism and of the church in this town. Very few of the aged pilgrims, upon whom fell the burdens of those early days, are living. The memorial windows in the church have been placed by loving hands who desire to perpetuate, in some manner, the memory of the deceased. And in this connection, we have thought that a brief history of the Methodist church in this town would be of interest to our readers.

The history of Methodism is the history of a great religious body. It was a movement which shook the foundations of the English church. It was transplanted to this country in the days of John Wesley and Whitefield, and its early growth was no less remarkable here than in the mother country. Many of its churches in these parts, as the one in this town, were feeble at first. And there are those at this day, unacquainted with its early history, who are ignorant of the gigantic proportions of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America. The itinerancy, which has been a part of its system from the outset, was conducive to this growth. No other body of preachers covered so much territory—no other religious body, with its polity and liberal teachings, took so deep a hold upon the common people of this country in its early days. In 1790, at the last Conference at which John Wesley presided, just previous to his death—he was then 87 years old—the members of the societies in the United States numbered 57,631. The number was fast increasing over Great Britain, and it was even at that early day, a religious body, formidable in numbers, and worthy of respect.

The first meetings held in this town were in Sanger's Hall, sometimes known as Goodrich's Hall. This was in 1832, or thereabouts. Previous to this time, however, a Sabbath school and prayer meetings had been held in Harmony Village (Rockville) by Amos Walton, assisted by some brethren from the South street M. E. Church in Lynn. They were begun in 1830, and inasmuch as Mr. Walton was the first minister sent here by the Conference in 1839, it has been the inference that the church here was the outgrowth of the meetings held by Walton at Rockville. The record left by Walton confirms this impression. Yet this does not appear to be exactly correct. From Sanger's or Goodrich's hall the Society rented a hall at the corner of Sewall and Holten streets, over which Mr. Walton was appointed preacher by the Conference. To the starting of the meetings in Sanger's hall, therefore, we must look for the early history of the Society in this town.

The pioneer in this religious enterprise was Alfred N. Chamberlain, a brother of John Chamberlain, a well known building mover, who lived on Franklin street. Mr. Chamberlain had lived in this town, and at that time was connected with a Sabbath school held in Swampscott. He came over to this village one Thanksgiving day (as near as Mr. Chamberlain can remember, in 1832) with a view to engaging a place to hold religious services. He had understood that at the school house in what was then called "Garp Lane," permission would be given to those who were disposed to hold religious services. Mr. Chamberlain saw the person who had charge, but when it was found that he purposed holding Methodist services, he demurred. He remembered that the Orthodox people had spoken about it. It was then very unpopular to be a Methodist. Few outside of the early pioneers of Methodism realize to-day the odium which attached, in certain circles, to Methodists and their services. Their methods were out of the old beaten track. They were the uncompromising foe of Calvinism, which was the head and front of the old Puritan theology. They preached a free and full salvation—to the poor and humble as well as to the rich and powerful.

When Mr. Chamberlain found that he could not have the school house, he learned of Sanger's hall, saw Mr. Sanger, and was informed that he could have the hall, and on the following Sunday he began to hold meetings there. He kept the rent paid, ran the hall on his own responsibility for three years, and furnished the people here with seventeen different preachers, some of them noted lay preachers—and all of them of more or less repute.

Among the preachers were the following: A. D. Merrill (Father Merrill), Joseph A. Merrill, Sanford Benton—after whom Rev. S. B. Sweetser, a later pastor of the church, was named—and John E. Risley. These were all conference preachers; the latter, Mr. Risley, had the honor of forming the first church society and baptising the first converts. Among the local preachers were Jesse Filmore, Benjamin F. Newhall, of Saugus, who was a Selectman and Justice of the Peace, also County Commissioner at that time; Elijah Downing, also a Justice of the Peace and Selectman of Lynn; Benjamin King, who preached the opening sermon in the hall; Shadrach Ramsdell; James Mudge, afterward a conference preacher, and father of the present James Mudge of the N. E. Conference. A class was formed here and after three years of service, during which time Mr. Chamberlain and three other brothers, members of the quarterly conference, pledged themselves to come in rotation, once a week, to conduct prayer meetings in addition to running the regular religious services on the Lord's day, Mr. Chamberlain, who had been taken sick, went to the pastor of Lynn Common Church, who assumed from that time the responsibility of the worship here. Charles K. True was then the preacher in charge, and Thomas K. Pierce (the father of the editor of Zion's Herald) was presiding elder of this district. Mr. True looked about for a young man to take charge of the services here, and advertised in Zion's Herald for such a man. It was answered by a young man from Rhode Island, Arnold by name, and after being found worthy, he was sent here by Mr. True—the first preacher who attended to the services here in town and resided among the people. Mr. John Bagley, (Father Bagley, as he was called), was one of the prominent brethren at that time, and it was at his home that most of the preachers stopped. Mr. Chamberlain is now 81 years of age and resides in Cambridgeport. He is probably the only person now living who took an active part in the first beginnings of this church. Mr. Chamberlain, who is a genial old gentleman, received the writer of this with great cordiality, and his remembrance of these events, in which he took a prominent part, was very clear. He referred us to the minutes of the Lynn Common street church, in confirmation of the statements which he made, regarding his own connection with the establishment and support of the meeting in Sanger's Hall.

Later on, the responsibility of the charge of the worship was transferred to the South M. E. Church in Lynn, and inasmuch as the preaching or meetings held in Rockville were also in charge of the South Church, it is probable that a union was made of the classes here. After they had vacated Sanger's hall, the Society, as we have said, engaged Armory Hall, and in 1839 Amos Walton began to preach regularly for them. In July, 1840, Mr. Walton was appointed by the Conference sitting in Lowell as the pastor. At this time the membership of the church was 23.

While worshipping here, a building used as a pottery, standing where the house of John M. Berry now is, was bought and fitted up. The lumber used for the repairs was presented to the society by some parties interested, belonging in Salem, and the work was done by Andrew Swett and another man, who put their time against the lumber which was furnished to them. At the dedication of the building, Rev. M. Smith preached a sermon, taking for his text, "In the name of God let us set up our banners."

But the accommodations of the place became too limited, and the plan of building a new place of worship was suggested. A building committee had been appointed, the lumber purchased and a portion of it hauled to the ground—the site of the present church. At this stage of proceedings the South Society wished to build a larger place of worship and offered to sell their house to the Methodists. The terms upon which it was offered was considered so advantageous that the society thought it better to dispose of their lumber and accept the conditions, which was done and the building moved from the Square to its present location on Washington street. This was in 1843, under the pastorate of Amos Binney, and the old Lexington monument was set off in front of Daniels' store, which then occupied the corner of Main and Washington streets. In the following year, vestries were built under the church.

The society was, at the time, under great financial embarrassment. The mortgage on the church, held by the South society, was a heavy one, and at the annual meeting held in 1848, it was voted to relinquish the property, and Timothy Walton took up the mortgages and the property passed into his hands. The corporation known as the M. E. Chapel society became extinct. Father Walton was one of the leading brethren at that time, and by his kindness the society was allowed to continue holding services there. This year they had no conference preacher, a local preacher, Dr. Booth, supplying for them a portion of the time. The remuneration obtained by Mr. Walton for the use of the house was an annual rental from the Society.

In the year 1853, during the pastorate of William Gordon, a Board of Trustees was appointed, and organized according to law under the name of the "First M. E. Society of Danvers." At this time the Society decided to purchase the property of Mr. Walton, offered to them on liberal terms, and the church building once more passed into the hands of the Society.

In 1859, during the pastorate of Rev. E. S. Best, a meeting of the Society was called to consider the expediency of making some repairs upon the building, which were deemed necessary. A building committee was appointed, and at an expense of about six hundred dollars, the house was raised up and remodeled. This expense, however, with the debt they had already incurred was a great burden to the Society, and they were compelled to call upon outside help, which they were fortunate enough to obtain.

In 1862, when Rev. Mosely Dwight was sent by the Conference to this Society, he found a debt of over $4000 and the society very much depressed. It was decided to make application to the church Aid Society for assistance. A committee having been appointed by this Society and after looking into the matter finding the Society worthy of aid, the church Aid Society assigned to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Dwight, the Boston district, from which he was allowed to collect all the contributions raised in this district for church aid. Through his endeavors the debt on the church was reduced to $1500, and the society was much encouraged.

In 1867 the Conference sent to the church Rev. J. O. Knowles. He had just been transferred from the Maine Conference, and at once assumed his duties. He was active in furthering the interests of the church and society and awakened much enthusiasm, particularly with the young people. During the two years of his pastorate there was a large increase in the membership of the church. The interior of the church was tinted and painted while Mr. Knowles was here,—an improvement which added very materially to the appearance of the audience room of the church. To assist in defraying the expenses of this improvement the Trustees allowed several pews to be sold, which have since passed back into their hands. It was also during his pastorate that a Stevens clock was placed in the tower of the church, the funds for which were raised from residents in this vicinity, through the efforts of the pastor and others interested. This clock was replaced by the one now in use there. At this time, also, the Society received the donation of a bell—the fine toned one which now calls the people to worship. To the Society the gift was from an anonymous friend. Only Rev. Mr. Knowles and a few of the official brethren knew the author of the gift. It was made a complete surprise to the people by Mr. Knowles; the wagon containing it being backed up to the door, and the bell placed in the entry while the pastor and the choir in the vestry were in turn attempting to hold the attention of the congregation who had turned out in goodly numbers at the request of Mr. Knowles, who had promised them that they should be rewarded for their attendance. At the proper time the doors were thrown open and the bell was in full view. It became known to a few and surmised by more, that the bell was the gift of General Sutton. At his death a letter from Rev. J. O. Knowles, published in these columns, revealed to the public what had already been placed on the records of the church, that Gen. Sutton was the anonymous friend of the Society. In 1868, during Mr. Knowles' stay here, the parsonage on Sewall street was purchased by the Society, of Mr. Oliver Poland, for $2000.

During the pastorate of Rev. G. Leonard, who succeeded Mr. Knowles, a social and literary society, similar to the Oxford League, was started and greatly encouraged by the pastor, who gave them a special lecture now and then, open to the public, on subjects of interest. Mr. Leonard was especially interested in Sabbath school work—and during his pastorate of only one year, there were given in the church Sabbath school concerts the equal of which has never been seen in this town. The audience room of the church would not accommodate the people who were attracted by them, and the project of issuing tickets, and even of accepting a small contribution at the door, was seriously discussed. The writer of this remembers one of these concerts, at which the pulpit stairs and gallery had to be utilized to their fullest extent, to find sittings for the people. They were standing up in the vestibule and on the stairs, and many went away unable to obtain admission.

The pastorate of Rev. Albert Gould which followed was a season of great rejoicing to the church. The debt of the Society which had been hanging over them from the beginning was entirely wiped out, through the efforts of this pastor, and the Society enjoyed a season of prosperity, both financial and spiritual. At this time there was a deep religious interest manifest in all the churches in the town. Union services were held in the Orthodox, Baptist and Methodist churches, in the conduct of which Rev. Mr. Gould was much interested. About this time, also, a Y. M. C. A. was reorganized in town. He was an ardent advocate of praise services, being himself a good musician, and able to lead his people in song with the spirit and understanding. Congregational singing was introduced during his pastorate, and the old organ, which had done service in the gallery for so many years, was exchanged for a Smith organ of a new and improved pattern. A reed organ, with ten or a dozen stops, was considered a valuable acquisition at that time, and cost three times as much as one could be obtained for at the present time. Rev. Mr. Gould, with the aid of the brethren, started the church in Tapleyville. He published during his pastorate a paper called the "Town of Peabody," which contained much historical information, collected from different sources, and which is of much value. To the article, in this sheet, prepared by the late Lauriston Stiles, regarding the Methodist church, the writer of this article is indebted for much historical data that could not else have been so easily obtained.

Rev. F. T. George was the acceptable pastor of the church during the years 1873–4; and Rev. Daniel Wait for the years 1875–6–7. During the pastorate of Mr. Wait, from the proceeds of a concert given in the audience room of the church, assisted by contributions at the evening services, the old-fashioned settees, which will be remembered by attendants at the vestry meetings in years gone by, were replaced by the newer and more modern ones which now do service there.

Rev. V. M. Simons was pastor of the church in 1878–9, and during his pastorate the society became the possessor of a pipe organ, which was placed in the front part of the church behind the altar, and the choir seats were removed thither instead of occupying the old seats in the rear gallery.

Rev. Dr. Steele was pastor of the church in 1880–1–2; and during his pastorate the outside of the church edifice was painted, and the interior repaired and recarpeted, at an expense of $1,300. At this time, also, the Stevens clock, which had been placed in the tower during the pastorate of Rev. J. O. Knowles, was removed and a Howard time-keeper, the gift of the late Mrs. Lydia P. Proctor, was placed in its stead. The works of the old clock had been placed too high in the tower, and for many years it had kept silent watch over the residents of the vicinity of the church. The gift of Mrs. Proctor was, therefore, highly appreciated as well as timely, and the clock does good service at the present time.

The last pastor of the church, previous to the present conference year, was Rev. C. N. Smith. Mr. Smith is so well remembered by the citizens of the town that no extended reference is needed. Suffice it to say that these years were years of great harmony as well as prosperity in the church.

The following is the list of preachers, stationed by the conference over the church, from the beginning:—

Amos Walton,	1839–40
Daniel Webb,	1841
H. G. Barras,	1842
Amos Binney,	1843

V. M. Simons,	1878–9
Daniel Steele,	1880–1–2
C. N. Smith,	1883–4–5
Geo. Alcott Phinney,	1876——

The records of the Sabbath School are very meagre. The first account given was of a meeting held May 3, 1840, at which Brother Worthing was chosen superintendent, and other officers and teachers were chosen. In 1842, John Morrison was elected Superintendent; in 1846, Thomas Walland; in 1853, Michael Smith; in 1854, J. S. Paul; in 1857, Michael Smith. After this J. S. Paul was Superintendent until after the pastorate of Rev. J. O. Knowles. Succeeding him have been the following: ——— Quimby, E. H. Davis, Walter C. Bancroft, Walter A. Baker, H. W. Gilman, the latter of whom is Superintendent at the present time. The school is in a very prosperous condition, having increased largely during the past year. It now numbers 23 teachers and 253 members.

The repairs upon the church, which have just been finished, are the most extensive ever attempted on this church, and make it, at the present time, one of the finest in town. During the month of August it was found necessary to reshingle the house and build new chimneys. At the time, nothing further was attempted, but on looking over the church thoroughly it was found expedient to undertake other repairs and One Hundred and Twenty Certificates, at ten dollars each, were issued. These were speedily taken, and it was confidently believed that this amount—$1,200—would be sufficient to accomplish what was proposed. But one thing led to another, till it was found that the expense would come up to $2,500, or thereabouts. But the money has been forthcoming and, as is stated below, has all been pledged so that in the rededication, the church is entirely free from debt.

The present repairs include an entire renovation of the church building from top to bottom. The vestry has been painted and the walls frescoed; around the sides the walls have been painted with a neat dado, and a wooden strip added to protect them from injury by chairs and settees. This work includes all the vestries; the two smaller ones have been carpeted, and new chairs purchased. These are used for the class meetings and others when the larger vestry is not as advantageous. They have built a recess in the rear of the church, 5x17. It makes room for the organ, in the audience room, which has been set back that distance, and this extension gives additional room in the vestry below, which will be finished into a room, for the use of the ladies, in the spring. A new carpet has been put down at the altar in the vestry, and the altar itself, including furniture, has been touched up, polished and looks as good as new.

The enlargement mentioned gives a pulpit platform, 8x11; the organ has been set back and enlarged by the addition of more pipes, the choir seats have been rebuilt and surrounded with a neat railing and curtain, and a new carpet and set of pulpit furniture added. The desk is a neat and attractive affair, quite in contrast with the pulpit which has done service there for many years. The pews have all been painted and polished up, the cushions renovated and repaired, and the church neatly carpeted. But the greatest change in the interior is the frescoing and the windows. The walls overhead and the sides have been done in a very artistic manner, the tints blending in perfect harmony, without any attempt at straining for effect. On the left of the pulpit are the words, "Holiness becometh Thine House, O Lord, Forever!" and on the right, "For we are a Temple of the Living God." The gas fixtures have been burnished, and new globes and burners added. In short, there is no part of the edifice that has not received some touching up and improvement.

The memorial windows are finely done. The expense attendant upon them was assumed by the Oxford League, and the friends and relatives of those to whose memory the windows are erected have generously assisted the League. The windows on the left, as we enter the church, are in order as follows: First, Mrs. S. McCausland—Miss Dora B. McCausland. Second, the central window, is in memory of James S. Paul; donated by Holten Lodge, I.O.O.F., of which Mr. Paul was a well known brother. Third, Mrs. Ellen A. Sanger—Mrs. Lydia P. Proctor. This last, in memory of Mrs. Proctor, is the window next to the pulpit on that side and nearest to her late residence on Sewall street. On the right, beginning at the entrance, the windows are, First, John and Mary Bagley—John S. Grant. Second, Michael and Mary Smith. Third, Timothy Walton—Lauriston Stiles. Two of the four long windows in the front of the church are memorial windows. It was designed to have the entire number in memory of four deceased pastors of the church. But it has been ascertained that there are more than four pastors deceased. Two windows have, therefore, been placed in memory of Oliver S. Howe, pastor in 1850, and Daniel Wait, pastor in 1875–6–7, leaving the remaining two to be disposed of as the future may decide.

Lights have been placed in the outer doors at the lower entrance to the vestibule—a much needed improvement, removing the darkness which has always been a source of inconvenience there. The walks have been concreted and edge stones set by Mr. John Linehan. The fresco work was done by Wallburg & Sherry, of Boston; and the painting by Frank Fellows. The carpenter work needed by the repairs has been done by Isaac Drown; the pulpit and furniture was furnished by George E. Bousley, stair builder of Salem. The memorial windows were furnished by Hardy Bros. of Salem, the carpets came from the establishment of Almy, Bigelow & Washburn, with the exception of the elegant velvet one under the pulpit, which was furnished by William G. Webber & Co. The organ was repaired and enlarged by the builder, George H. Ryder, of Boston.

The report of the expenditures on the repairs just finished was read Sunday by Rev. Mr. Phinney. The total expenditures have been $2613. To cover this amount, $1350 was raised at the outset by the certificates; the jug money amounted to $380; the Sabbath School contributed $100; the pastor, $100; the Oxford League assumed $400; making a total of $2330. This left last Sunday a balance of $283. Of this the Oxford League and the Sabbath School each assumed $75, and the balance was made up by private contributions, so that the entire amount is provided for.

THE SERVICES.

There were about 250 present at the dedication services, which took place yesterday afternoon at 2.15. Presiding elder, J. H. Mansfield, conducted the dedicatory services. Rev. C. N. Smith offered prayer. Rev. E. S. Best read the scriptures, and the sermon, which was most able and eloquent throughout, was preached by Rev. W. L. Phillips, of Brooklyn, N. Y. There were present Rev. E. A. Manning, Rev. E. S. Best, Rev. Albert Gould, Rev. C. N. Smith, of the former pastors; Rev. Dr. Crowell, formerly presiding elder Rev. J. H. Mansfield, the present presiding elder, Rev. W. P. Odell, formerly of Salem, and Rev. O. S. Butler of Georgetown were also present.

Rev. Mr. Phillips preached from Acts 16:31: "And they said, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house;" and from Matthew 5:20: "For I say unto you, that except your righteousness exceeds the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of Heaven." The preacher said that these texts presented the twin picture of the New Testament—faith in Christ for personal salvation and the duty of righteousness on the part of the man of God. The sermon was an able plea for orthodoxy and faith in evangelical truth, against the so-called rationalism of the age. He combated forcibly the assertion that all the intelligent thought of the age was outside evangelical religion; stated that a leading Unitarian pastor at a late Conference had preached on the two pillars of rationalism—reason and righteousness. The preacher said he purposed preaching on the two pillars of orthodoxy—a reasonable faith and righteousness. There was no divorce between reason and faith. Even according to Dr. Bellows, self culture could never supersede worship. Worship, faith, duty, devotion to God—these and not self culture have lifted the race. The preacher recognized faith as the foundation of all knowledge. The sneers of rationalism are ill-timed against the most rational exercise of the human mind. We should have a reasonable faith, because the preacher recognized that there may be an unreasonable faith, and there is a vast difference between genuine faith and credulity.

The church of Christ has faith because it rests upon the teachings of a book, whose internal and external evidence is above any other book the world has ever seen.

Because, while Christianity has prevailed since the time of Constantine its early records remain fixed—its underlying dogmas remain unchanged. It is the faith once delivered to the saints. All other faiths develop, but humanity has developed into Christianity.

Because it presents God as a living Father but a righteous ruler.

Because it presents man in a state of sin to be followed by misery. This in accordance with our rational ideas. We have but to lift our eyes and see the suffering at the hands of sin.

Because it presents a way of escape. It goes out of the laws and codes of men, and asserts a truth that there is help for the fallen, and life for spiritual death. Philosophy sees a man bruised and bleeding—says he is in his natural condition—is sorry for him, but can suggest no remedy. Christianity says, here is a grievous wrong. The man has fallen among thieves; pours out oil and wine and restores the man to his original likeness and health.

Because it presents a scheme of redemption by which God works according to his own laws, and because it works by gradual development.

Because the coming of Christ is in harmony with all our ideas of divine mission.

Because it presents a Saviour who sympathysis with truth and is able to accomplish the work he purposed to do. Humanity needed teaching. This Saviour came to teach the future. Humanity needed an incarnation. Abstractions cannot be grasped by the human mind. This Jesus lifts himself the perfect example of truth. Humanity needed a helper. This Saviour lifts up all those who put their trust in Him. The human heart recognizes the One for whom it has been seeking. The head may go astray but the heart is never wrong. He is the only one whom the heart has found to whom it could say "Rabboni." He is the only one to whom the heart of humanity has found utterance, "My Lord and my God."

Finally the proof of this reasonable faith is because it has been and is. Our faith was forged in the heat and conflict of centuries; it has endured criticism; it was born of betrayal; it has borne the test of time and comes out with a brighter light, without the smell of fire upon its garments.

The speaker closed with an eloquent defense of the righteousness which accompanied this faith. Admitting all that the enemies of Christianity could say about the unrighteousness of some of its professors, it is no proof that the system is false, but that it is imperfectly incarnated by feeble men. Christianity, as interpreted by Jesus, and righteousness are synonymous terms. The preacher spoke for over an hour, and it is to be regretted that more of our people could not have heard his grand and inspiring words.

F. D. Tarlton has sold out his stock of goods to L. L. Nichols, who is well known in town, and deserves the continued patronage which the store has had. We regret the departure of Mr. Tarlton, but he had an offer to engage in a large enterprise which he did not care to lose. Mr. Nichols will keep a good stock of dry goods of all kinds, and will sell them at the right prices.

A small sized blizzard struck yesterday. There was sleet and snow in generous proportions, driven by a wind which attained a velocity of 36 miles an hour, and did not fall much below those figures during several hours of the day. About four inches of snow was added to the fall of Sunday, which gives us on the level, if a level spot can be found, about ten inches.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

DIED.—In Peabody, Mass., Dec. 3, Priscilla, wife of Isaiah Chute, in her 57th year.

With the coming of the wintry blasts,
Her light of life went out. [Anon.

Mrs. Priscilla Chute was one of nature's noblewomen. Born of honest, sturdy stock, she was imbued with a keen sense of her duty in life, and when at an early age she took up the burden of wife-hood and mother-hood, she ripened into that type of woman, whom to know is to love. Her married life covered a period of nearly forty years, during which time ten children were sent to bless the union. Of these ten, five are now living, two sons and three daughters, all of whom have reached man's estate. In her home life, Mrs. Chute was seen at her best. Here her ambition took root, here were centred all her thoughts, here the great mother love went out to its fullest extent. With the advent of grand-children her joy and happiness seemed complete. In ministering to them, in watching over them, as she had watched over her own offspring in the past, she was in her element, and the remembrance of her numberless acts of kindness will ever live. Of a naturally bright and sunny disposition, which always produced a loving impression, she was the idol of her children, and a void exists to-day in that home and in those hearts which cannot be filled. Mrs. Chute was deeply interested in the great truths of Christianity, and her familiar face in the Baptist society's meetings will be sadly missed. During her moments of delirium in her last terrible illness, she would repeat, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want;" and the couplet, "Come sing to me of heaven, when I am called to die," could be heard issuing in murmurs from her lips. Her sufferings were great for months, but she bore all with heroic fortitude and made a brave fight for life. Her funeral was largely attended, many friends attesting their devotion by their presence. The floral tributes were beautiful and appropriate. In their great bereavement the family has the loving sympathy of the entire community.

R. J. C.

Things are settling down quietly after the strike and the men are almost daily securing work. The question is asked what is to become of the men who cannot find work. In answer to the above, the secretary of one of our assemblies said: A canvass was made before the strike was declared off and it was found that a sixth of those who went out had secured employment elsewhere. By the first of January it is expected that a larger portion of the remainder will be at work. We expect to carry through the winter about 250 men, who will be paid a regular weekly allowance. A divided assessment has been called for 25 cents each, and that will place in the national treasury $200,000, and $25,000 of it will keep our men from want till next spring. Everything looks encouraging for the future.

We desire to call special attention to the fair of the Universalist Society, which will be held in their vestry this evening and to-morrow (Thursday) evening. The attraction to-morrow evening will be a farce "The Red Chignon" and a concert by a troupe of original Ethiopian minstrels. This entertainment will be worth the attention of our readers. The young people have made great preparations for it, and we can assure them that a rare treat is in store. This evening a turkey supper with all the fixins, will be served.

At the close of the regular meeting of Masconomo Tribe of Red Men last Thursday evening the entertainment committee announced the following entainment, which was well received and passed off pleasantly: Organ selection by W. H. Garniss; Singing by the Glencoe Quartette, composed of F. C. Blake, William Plummer, Albert Chute and Thomas Clothey; Readings by Albert H. Merrill; Contortion acts by James Smith and a Negro Sketch by Shehan and Smith.

Tuesday last a freight car on the Western division was loaded with machinery from the factory of C. C. Farwell & Co., and transferred to the Eastern division where it was taken on by the early freight Wednesday and carried to Methuen. It is understood that one set of machinery will be used in the shop there, in charge of J. C. Campbell, the larger part of the firm's business to be done here, as formerly.—Danvers Mirror.

OVER WORKED Women

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.

THE DRAMA.

The return of the great American tragedian, Edwin Booth, to the Boston Theatre, is for two weeks only. He is to be supported in leading roles by Charles Barron, who will have on his own account a paticularly cordial greeting. Booth's famous and most impressive personation of the Cardinal-statesman, is to be seen on Thursday. Hamlet will be the play at the matinee on Saturday, and renewed interest will of course be felt in Mr. Booth's portrayal, following so soon in Boston Wilson Barret's much-debated piece of acting. On Friday evening there will be a double offering—The Merchant of Venice and Katherine and Petruchio. At the closing performance of his first week the tragedian is to appear as Iago, the title role in Othello being entrusted to Mr. Barron.

John T. Raymond appears this week in a new play at the Park, entitled The Woman Hater. Mr. Raymond has a fine company and his popularity is sure to draw full houses.

Managers all over the country are talking about the wonderful success at the Boston Museum. Many hopes have been built on the prosperity of Harbor Lights here, since it is supposed that the verdict of the Hub will be indorsed in other cities most emphatically. The new company, the new scenery and the new play all combine, of course, to make the success of Harbor Lights never more pronounced than now, when the fourth month of its run at the Boston Museum is well under way.

The seventy-fifth performance in Boston—and the 850th altogether on the stage—of Adonis took place last evening. It should be borne in mind by Mr. Dixey's admirers, here and elsewhere, that this is the last week but two, of the favorite's engagement at the Hollis Street. Adonis is not to be produced on any stage in New England outside of Boston.

The publisher of Baltimore, Md., Every Saturday, Mr. T. J. Wentworth, says his child aged six months was suffering from a severe cold, and he gave it Red Star Cough Cure, which acted like a charm. No morphia.

TEM DOLLARS ENOUGH, is a volume from the press of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, in which Catherine Owen, who is recognized as a sort of philosopher in domestic economy, shows how to keep house well on ten dollars a week. The author gave her experiences and views on this subject through the columns of Good Housekeeping, and the subject attracted so much attention, that the papers have been revised and enlarged, and are now presented in this more convenient form. The author demonstrates that what is asserted, keeping house on ten dollars a week, has been and can be done, and well done, and her book ought to go into thousands of homes, where double that amount is expended, with far less favorable results. The volume has been received by Merrill & Mackintire, Salem.

THE MADONNA OF THE TUBS, is the quaint title of a delightful little story by Miss Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, which Houghton, Mifflin & Co., have put into handsome form, with forty-three original illustrations prettily fitting the pleasing tale. The story is one of the most touching Miss Phelps has written, full of the breeziness of the sea, and with the sense of tenderness that the great ocean reveals in its playful moods. Altogther, it is a sweet little story. Merrill & Mackintire, Salem, has it.

BECKONINGS for Every Day, a Calendar of Thought, is a collection for each day of the year, in poetry and prose, arranged by Lucy Larcom, in which this careful author has aimed to give some of the most inspiring and uplifting words of the great and good of all ages. Miss Larcom, who possesses special adaptability for a compilation of this kind, states in the preface that her effort has been to "enter into the spirit of modern thought and aspiration, and also to show how the best expressions of the best minds of earlier and later times harmonize in the truth. In the arrangement, one month is given to each topic, which, if somewhat arbitrary, will be useful to the average reader. No page but affords food for thought. It is published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and can be had of Merrill & Mackintire.

ANCIENT CITIES, from the Dawn to the Daylight, is a volume with a strongly religious turn, from the pen of Rev. Wm. B. Wright, the talented pastor of the Berkeley Street church, Boston. The author modestly disclaims any pretence that this is a learned work, and he surely avoids in its pages any showy exhibition of knowledge, but it is full of historical information, nevertheless, and evidences careful research and thoughtful study throughout. The peculiarities of Ninevah, Babylon, Damascus, Athens, Rome, Samaria and the other cities mentioned, are sketched with the author's well-known powers of description, and abound in brilliant passages, and the series of sketches lead up to the final chapters upon the New Jerusalem, to which the story of all that precedes most clearly points. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston; for sale by Merrill & Mackintire, Salem.

DRUNKENNESS, OR LIQUOR HABIT CAN BE CURED BY ADMINISTERING DR. HAINES' GOLDEN SPECIFIC.

It can be given in a cup of coffe or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars, Address in confidence Golden Specific Co., 185 Race St. Cincinnati, Ohio. dec 1—1y

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."

EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

A CHALLENGE!

I hereby agree to forfeit ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS to the Lynn Hospital if I can not prove to the satisfaction of any three disinterested persons:

FIRST, that I am selling the genuine W. L. Douglas' $3.00 shoe and new goods for $2.75.

SECOND, that the McEllery shoe, which I am cutting to $2.85, is superior to the Douglas shoe. The only condition of this offer is that the agent of the Douglas shoe shall forfeit the same amount to the Lynn Hospital if I prove my claim.

I DARE HIM ACCEPT MY CHALLENGE!

From now on until my new Central Square store is ready.

I Shall Cut Specialty Goods to the Heart!

McEllery's Superb	$3.50 Shoes cut to $2.85
Daniels' Magnificent	3.00 Shoes cut to 2.45
Rice & Hutchins' Ster.	3.00 Shoes cut to 2.15
Miller's Climax	2.00 Shoes cut to 1.75
W. L. Douglas'	3.00 Shoes cut to 2.75

We have just received a large lot of W. L. Douglas' $3.00 shoes in Bals, Button and Congress fresh from the factory and in the latest styles. We are satisfied with a small margin and do not seek to make the enormous profit of 37 per cent on cost as do the little retailers who sell them for $3.00. Come and behold. We have enough to go all around. I will warrant the Douglas shoes to the same extent that his agents will.

IMPERIAL EGG FOOD

Will Largely INCREASE Egg Production;

Strengthen Weak and drooping Fowls, promote the Healthy Growth and Development of all varieties of poultry, and insure Fine Condition and Smooth Plumage, helping them through moulting wonderfully. It furnishes bone and muscle for young chicks, thus saving them.

It prevents and absolutely Cures the diseases incident to Poultry.

It is no forcing process; you simply give them the chemicals to make eggs, at a cost of less than one cent a week for each fowl; thousands of testimonials. If your local tradesman does not keep it, write to to spare. No thin slices at the Lord's table. I remember when the Master Street hospital in Philadelphia was opened during the war a telegram came saying: "There will be three hundred wounded men to-night, be ready to take care of them;" and from my church there went in some twenty or thirty men and women to look after these poor wounded fellows. As they came, some from one part of the land, some from another, no one asked whether this man was from Oregon, or Massachusetts, or from Minnesota, or from New York. There was a wounded soldier, and the only question was how to take off the rags most gently, and put on the bandage, and administer the cordial. And when a soul comes to God, He does not ask where you came from or what your ancestry was. Healing for all your wounds. Pardon for all your guilt. Comfort for all your troubles.

Then also I counsel you, if you want to get back, to quit all your bad associations. One unholy intimacy will fill your soul with moral distemper. In all the ages of the church there has not been an instance where a man kept one evil associate and was reformed. Among the 1,400,000,000 of the race not one instance. Go home to-day, open your desk, take out letter paper, stamp and envelope, and then write a letter something like this:

"My old companions: I start this day for heaven. Until I am persuaded you will join me in this, farewell."

Then sign your name, and send the letter with the first post. Give up your bad companions, or give up heaven. It is not ten bad companions that destroy a man, nor five bad companions, nor three bad companions, but one. What chance is there for that young man I saw along the street, four or five young men with him, halting in front of a grog shop, urging him to go in, he resisting, violently resisting, until after a while they forced him to go in? It was a summer night, and the door was left open, and I saw the process. They held him fast, and they put the cup to his lips, and they forced down the strong drink. What chance is there for such a young man?

I counsel you also, seek Christian advice. Every Christian man is bound to help you. If you find no other human ear willing to listen to your story of struggle, come to me, and I will, by every sympathy of my heart, and every prayer, and every toil of my hand, stand beside you in the struggle for reformation; and as I hope to have my own sins forgiven and hope to be acquitted at the judgment seat of Christ, I will not betray you. First of all, seek God; then seek Christian counsel. Gather up all the energies of body, mind and soul, and, appealing to God for success, declare this day everlasting war against all drinking habits, all gaming practices, all houses of sin. Half-and-half work will amount to nothing; it must be a Waterloo. Shrink back now, and you are lost. Push on, and you are saved. A Spartan general fell at the very moment of victory, but he dipped his finger in his own blood and wrote on a rock near which he was dying: "Sparta has conquered." Though your struggle to get rid of sin may seem to be almost a death struggle, you can dip your finger in your own blood and write on the Rock of Ages: "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Oh, what glorious news it would be for some of these young men to send home to their parents in the country these holidays which are coming. They go to the postoffice every day or two to see whether there are any letters from you. How anxious they are to hear! You might send them for a holiday present this season a book from one of our best publishing houses, or a complete wardrobe from the importer's palace, it would not please them half as much as the news you might send home to-morrow that you had given your heart to God. I know how it is in the country. The night comes on. The cattle stand under the rack through which burst the trusses of hay. The horses just having frisked up from the meadow at the nightfall, stand knee deep in the bright straw that invites them to lie down and rest. The perch of the hovel is full of fowl, their feet warm under the feathers. In the old farmhouse at night no candle is lighted, for the flames clap their hands about the great black log, and shake the shadow of the group up and down the wall. Father and mother sit there for half an hour, saying nothing. I wonder what they are thinking of. After awhile the father breaks the silence and says: "Well, I wonder where our boy is in town to-night?" and the mother answers: "In no bad place, I warrant you; we always could trust him when he was home, and since he has been away there have been so many prayers offered for him, we can trust him still." Then at 8 o'clock—for they retire early in the country—they kneel down and commend you to that God who watches in country and in town, on the land and on the sea.

Some one said to a Grecian general: "What was the proudest moment in your life?" He thought a moment, and said: "The proudest moment in my life was when I sent home word to my parents that I had gained the victory." And the proudest and most brilliant moment in your life will be the moment when you can send word to your parents that you have conquered your evil habits, by the grace of God, and become eternal victor. Oh, despise not parental anxiety!

The time will come when you will have neither father or mother, and you will go around the place where they used to watch you, and find them gone from the house, and gone from the field, and gone from the neighborhood. Cry as loud for forgiveness as you may over the mound in the churchyard, they will not answer. Dead! dead! And then you will take out the white lock of hair that was cut from your mother's brow just before they buried her, and you will take the cane with which your father used to walk, and you will think and think and wish that you had done just as they wanted you to, and would give the world if you had never thrust a pang through their dear old hearts. God pity the young man who has brought disgrace on his father's name! God pity the young man who has broken his mother's heart! Better if he had never been born—better if in the first hour of his life, instead of being laid against the warm bosom of maternal tenderness, he had been coffined and sepulchered. There is no balm powerful enough to heal the heart of one who has brought parents to a sorrowful grave, and who wanders about through the dismal cemetery rending the hair and wringing the hands and crying: "Mother! mother!" Oh, that to-day by all the memories of the past and by all the hopes of the future you would yield your heart to God. May your father's God and your mother's God be your God forever!

There is Nothing New Under the Sun,

SO SAID THE WISEMAN,

Over twenty-eight hundred years ago.

He could not have contemplated the nineteenth century, and more especially the present day. Take, for example, the subject of footwear for men, women and children. In these fields of human activity, beneficent improvement and inovation are ceaselessly at work. Each season contributes its share of meritorious new things, and what is still better, for the consumer, multiplicity of variety and lowering of prices go hand in hand. Facts easy of demonstration in the several departments of Nugent's Bargain Shoe Store.

RE-DEDICATION.

In the evening, after the choir and congregation had sung, "Nearer my God to thee," and prayer had been offered by Rev. L. Crowell, the pastor proceeded to the Addresses by former pastors. He said they would follow, somewhat, in the chronological order, and introduced Rev. O. S. Butler, of Georgetown, whose memory went back earlier than any of the others present. Mr. Butler was not a former pastor, but a prominent brother in the church in its early days. At one time he was clerk of the Board of Trustees. Mr. Butler, after referring to the feelings of pleasure, as well as sorrow, which came over him in visiting this once familiar spot, said that the conditions were favorable to the reception of Methodism when it was started here in the vicinity of 1835. Piety was at a low ebb; experimental religion was not considered necessary to church membership; Hosea Ballou and Milton Braman had just had their battle of words; the doctrines of the old church were in so much disfavor that the Universalists had gained considerable foothold. The Methodists became alarmed; their brethren had become intrenched in Lynn, Salem and Lynnfield Centre, and from Saugus and Lynn and Salem they came over to help the few brethren here.

Mr. Butler referred to the remarkable way in which these Methodists became acquainted in the early days. Andrew Swett came to work here in town as a carpenter, and lived somewhere up toward North Danvers. Mr. Swett had been converted among the Freewill Baptists, but he was a stranger in town, and one Sunday morning he started out to find the Methodists of whom he had heard. He met a man on the highway, up on what was called the "Coast," and inquired of him if he knew any Methodists. He said there was a company of "shouters" holding forth at John Bagley's, and these "shouters" Mr. Swett soon found. The speaker paid a fine tribute to this Father Bagley, as he was called, saying that if he had enjoyed the privileges which many men had to-day he would have taken high rank among the leaders of Methodism. His strong point was his moral nature. He was a religious man. He often said that when he was converted he was converted through and through. He regarded the church as his mother. He was conservative, and was at first opposed to the purchase of this church, but when convinced that it was for the best, he pledged $100 and his best efforts for its support. His house was the home for preachers for 40 years. The speaker related an incident of his first meeting with Father Bagley. He came to this town as a young man, and a stranger. A young man came to him asking him to sign a petition for a dancing school. The speaker declined; saying he had no time or inclination for it, and from that time forth he was called a Methodist. His first meeting with Father Bagley was one Sunday morning, near the old Post office. As Mr. Bagley approached him he stretched out a hand saying, "Are you a Methodist?" On being answered in the affirmative, he said, "God bless you, my boy." He took the speaker by the hand and preached to him Jesus and the resurrection on the way to the church where he was introduced to all the brethren as a Methodist.

Mr. Butler referred to the first meetings which were held in Goodrich's hall, to which entrance was through Nichols Lane. Here their early triumphs were won, and great sinners were struck down. The little band grew in strength, despite some inroads made upon them by the Adventists. The last meeting held in Goodrich's hall was a watch-meeting and lasted till long after midnight. They were offered then the use of Armory Hall, and when the church purchased the old pottery on Washington street it was considered a great step in advance. Rev. C. K. True, the pastor of the Lynn Common Street church, preached the first sermon from the text: "How amiable are thy Tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts." This was known as the chapel.

[The above confirms the statement we obtained from Mr. Chamberlain, found in our historical sketch, that the meetings in Goodrich's hall were the beginnings of Methodism in town. Our account and Mr. Butler's differs in his recollection of the preacher at the dedication of the "Chapel," the old pottery building. Our information that Rev. Mr. Smith preached the sermon was derived from the sketch prepared by Rev. Albert Gould.—ED.]

Mr. Butler then referred to the purchase of the building of the South society, of its removal to its present location, and made some reference to the early preachers, his account differing in no essential particular from the account in another column. The first preacher who really made his mark was H. G. Barras, who was a fine scholar and an eloquent preacher. During the preaching of Thomas Street there was a great awakening in the church.

Rev. E. A. Manning was the next speaker, who spoke of the associations which gathered around places of religious worship. He was glad to be here because this church had one year tolerated his unworthy labors. He had been laid aside by the Conference, but was induced to come here for a single year. The speaker said no one knew the physical difficulty under which he labored at that time. But he was glad to be accounted one of them, and hoped the Lord would continue to bless this church.

Presiding Elder Mansfield remembered the first time he came to Peabody. The church edifice was then in a somewhat dilapidated condition compared with its present state. He congratulated the people upon their wide awake pastor. He should hold up this church as an example to the churches in this district.

Rev. L. Crowell considered he had no right to speak here—not having the honor of being a pastor in this town. His first remembrance of this church, and Peabody, was a visit here in 1845 or 1846. He was then pastor of the Lynn Common Church, and exchanged with Rev. I. J. P. Collyer, of whom he had a lively remembrance. He was a great preacher in his day. The speaker paid a warm tribute to his memory, as also to Rev. Daniel Wait, another of the deceased pastors of the church. He humorously alluded to the present pastor—said he had been wondering where he obtained his endowments—but it was all clear when he found that he was born on Cape Cod—in the same town where the speaker's grandfather was born. But the present pastor had surpassed all his expectations in doing this work. He must have found a lodgment in the hearts of the people here.

Rev. C. N. Smith was the next speaker. He counted this a day of surprises. He recognized the faces but not the place. It demonstrated the power of beauty in the adornment of the church. He could not have believed that the amount of $2600 could have been secured with the financial strength of the Society, but he heartily congratulated them on their success. It was no surprise to him to hear of the sympathy manifested in the other churches. He could understand it all and spoke feelingly of the fraternal feeling existing between the Evangelical churches here.

Rev. E. S. Best said he could not discover whether he was awake or dreaming—he had been living in the past and present while sitting in this church. He had always looked upon this church with reverence and respect. He referred to his coming among this people. On his appointment the presiding elder came to him and told him to be of good courage—it was a good field in which to work. He did not understand it then, but when he came here it was all plain. It was a critical period in the history of this church. The people looked discouraged, and when he stood up to preach and the people sank down in their pews, he almost lost sight of them. In his bed that night it came to him what ought to be done, and he felt that what ought to be done could be; he was then a young man and full of enthusiasm. He talked to some of the brethren and succeeded in inspiring them with some of his enthusiasm and they went ahead to raise up the church and put in a vestry. The closing up of his labor was of particular interest. Aftor all the sacrifices the people had made, he felt that God would be with them in the outpouring of His Spirit. God heard their prayer When he began he opened with a congregation of 25; the edifice was crowded to the doors before he left. Some of the days he began service at 9 A. M. and did not close till 10 P. M. Many of the young converts were anxious to keep late hours. They said they had been in the habit of serving the devil all night—why should they not serve the Lord part of it? Their brethren of the Congregational and Baptist churches, after their own meetings were done, would come and join them, and the meetings often continued till 11 o'clock. He trusted that the people in dedicating this church would consecrate themselves anew to the services of the Master.

Some men are born great and grow smaller every day of their lives.

We have to record the decease of Andrew Gray, an old and respected citizen of this town, which took place last Friday night at the Danvers Asylum. Mr. Gray was a mason by trade, and in this business was known by large numbers of our citizens. He was honorable and straightforward in all his dealings, a genial and kindly old gentleman. Of late years he has been in feeble health—the death of a beloved daughter, a few years since, having been a severe blow to him. For some months his mind has been unsettled, and it was thought best, about a week since, to convey him to the Asylum, where it was hoped under the skilful care of the physicians there a cure might be effected. He died suddenly, and it was found on examination that blood had been gathering on his brain for some time—explaining in a large measure his mental condition. Mr. Gray leaves a widow, two sons and one daughter. His age was about 70 years. His funeral took place yesterday from his late residence on Washington street.

The annual meeting of Union Post 50, G. A. R., was held Monday evening, and the following officers for the ensuing year were unanimously elected:—Commander, Thomas H. Jackman; S. V., C. J. Linehan; J. V., George F. Ward; Q. M., William F. Sumner; Surgeon, Dr. C. C. Pike; Chaplain, William F. Pingree; Officer of the Day, Samuel G. Southwick; Officer of the Guard, John C. McDonald; Delegates to Department Convention, Frank E. Farnham, N. M. Quint, J. S. Tuttle; alternates, Wm. F. Wiley, C. J. Linehan, Geo. F. Ward. The installation of officers will take place on the first Monday in January.

NOTICE!

The carpenters, painters and decorators having finished and left us, we are again open and ready to make pictures for all who desire.

We wish to say to those who intend to have pictures finished for Christmas presents: don't put off coming to sit, but come now and give us plenty of time, and if you wish to avoid long and tiresome waits come early or make engagements. Especially bring children in the forenoon if possible.

We shall take orders for Free Hand Crayons to be finished for Christmas only until December 15th. Besides our free hand work, we can give you a finished enlargement in any style known, Crayon, Pastel, Water Color, Oil, Ink, etc., and at very reasonable prices.

Call and see samples of Permanent Bromide Enlargements, the new picture, all sizes up to life. $10 for plain enlargement, full life size, without crayon or other finishing. They are perfectly permanent, and unlike all other enlargements are fine pictures without any finishing, and the price is way below what you would bave to pay for any other picture of equal pretensions.

We have samples both finished and unfinished.

Springfield women working in favor of a "no vote" had a lunch of doughnuts and hot coffee, free to all, in every polling precinct. What a hint this is to the ladies, who will be so much interested here next March!

Mr. Hogue, of the Brush Swan electric light company, of New York, has been corresponding with parties in this town concerning the electric light, and it is expected he will shortly pay us a visit.

Mr. Arthur Walters of this town was passing through Hawley street, Boston, one day last week, when a piece of glass dropped from a broken window and struck him in the hand, making a painful wound.

As Mr. Chas. H. Estes, the expressman, was delivering a heavy iron cylinder at T. E. Wilson's Thursday he fell and the cylinder came down on his legs badly bruising them, but fortunately breaking no bones.

The horse-car people pile their snow up alongside of the tracks, much to the disgust of expressmen and private individuals. We learn that Munroe & Arnold will make complaint to the Selectmen to see if the nuisance cannot be abated.

It is very frequent that our lady readers are compelled to sit in a car and endure the ravings of insane people, who are being removed to the Danvers Asylum. A violently insane person should not be permitted in the public cars and railroad trains.

C. F. Hathaway's bakery wagon was blockaded at the Farms, on Tuesday. Help was received from the horse-railroad men and from Woodfin's expressmen and after considerable exertion, the belated driver was able to reach town.—Marblehead Messenger.

Mr. A. L. Ames, the fertilizer man of Central street, is presenting his customers with a very pretty Calendar, containing a picture of some rosy cheeked girls supposed to have been raised up in the "lane." Thanks for ours.

The first annual convention of the Essex County W. C. T. U. was held in Lynn on Wednesday, Mrs. C. A. Hammond, president, presiding. The reports of the secretary and treasurer show that there are twelve unions in Essex County. The receipts from November 11, 1885, to December 1, 1886, were $53.62, and the expenditures, $30.31, leaving a balance in the treasury of $23.31.

Members of the St. John's C. T. A Society have leased the corner store in Thomas' block, and will open a co-operative store, and will carry a line of gents' furnishing goods. Shares are placed at $50 each, and the Society heads the list with $500.

We get most of our notices of deaths and marriages at the town clerk's office, but as returns are not always made promptly to the town clerk, friends will oblige us, and make sure of the publication, if they will send us information of such events.

Mr. Benjamin Beckett is finishing off the attic at Mrs. J. E. Osborne's boarding house to accommodate the large number of applicants. She has, also, hired a part of the crockery room over Donnell & Sons' store, which will be made into a smoking room for the men.

Mr. George F. Osborne has been re-elected president and director of the Neptune Fire Insurance Company, a position he has honorably held for a number of years. In the employ of the company is Mr. Eugene B. Hinkley, the first high school teacher in this town, and Mr. Peter J. Frye is also employed there.

Amos L. Ames is having his schooner loaded with his matchless bone fertilizer, which he will ship to Florida, to be applied to the orange groves of that state. Last year he sent a small quantity as an experiment; the result was so very satisfactory he will now send his own schooner loaded to her utmost capacity. This accounts for the large size and superior quality of the Florida oranges displayed in the show windows of Geoage Stevens' store.

"THE PROUD INVALID."

REV. T. DEWITT TALMAGE'S SERMON AT THE TABERNACLE.

Everybody Has Something He Wishes He Had Not—God Does Not Wish to Make this World So Bright that We Shall Forget the Brighter.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 12.—The Rev. T DeWitt Talmage, D. D., preached this morning from the text, II Kings, v, 1: "He was a leper." He said:

Here we have a warrior sick, not with pleurisies or rheumatisms or consumptions, but with a disease worse than all these put together. A red mark has come out on the forehead, precursor of complete disfigurement and dissolution. I have something awful to tell you. Gen. Naaman, the commander-in-chief of all the Syrian forces, has the leprosy. It is on his hands, on his face, on his feet, on his entire person. The leprosy! Get out of the way of the pestilence! If his breath strikes you you are a dead man. The commander-in-chief of all the forces of Syria! And yet he would be glad to exchange conditions with the boy at his stirrup or the hostler that blankets his charger. The news goes like wildfire all through the realm, and the people are sympathetic, and they cry out: "Is it possible that our great hero who shot Ahab, and around whom we came with such vociferation when he returned from victorious battle—can it be possible that our grand and glorious Naaman has the leprosy?"

Yes. Everybody has something he wishes he had not—David, an Absalom to disgrace him; Paul, a thorn to sting him; Job, carbuncles to plague him; Samson, a Delilah to shear him; Ahab, a Naboth to deny him; Haman, a Mordecai to irritate him; George Washington, childlessness to afflict him; John Wesley, a termagant wife to pester him; Leah, weak eyes; Pope, a crooked back; Byron, a club foot; John Milton, blind eyes; Charles Lamb, an insane sister; and you, and you, and you, and you, something which you never bargained for, and would like to get rid of. The reason of this is, that God does not want this world to be too bright; otherwise, we would always want to stay and eat these fruits and lie on these lounges and shake hands in this pleasant society. We are only in the vestibule of a grand temple. God does not want us to stay on the doorstep, and therefore he sends aches, and annoyances, and sorrows, and bereavements of all sorts to push us on and push us up toward riper fruits, and brighter society, and more radiant prosperities. God is only whipping us ahead. The reason that Edward Payson and Robert Hall had more rapturous views of heaven than other people had was because, through their aches and pains, God pushed them nearer up to it. If God dashes out one of your pictures it is only to show you a brighter one. If He sting your foot with gout, your brain with neuralgia, your tongue with an inextinguishable thirst, it is only because He is preparing to substitute a better body than you ever dreamed of, when the mortal shall put on immortality. It is to push you on and push you up toward something grander and better that God sends upon you, as He did upon General Naaman, something you do not want. Seated in his Syrian mansion—all the walls glittering with the shields which he had captured in battle; the corridors crowded with admiring visitors who just wanted to see him once; music and mirth and banqueting filling all the mansion, from tesselated floor to pictured ceiling—Naaman would have forgotten that there was anything better, and would have been glad to stay there 10,000 years. But, oh, how the shields dim, and how the visitors fly from the hall, and how the music drops dead from the string, and how the gates of the mansion slam shut with sepulchral bang, as you read the closing words of the eulogium: "He was a leper! He was a leper!"

There was one person more sympathetic with General Naaman than any other person. Naaman's wife walks the floor, wringing her hands and trying to think what she can do to alleviate her husband's suffering. All remedies have failed. The surgeon general and the doctors of the royal staff have met, and they have shaken their heads as much as to say: "No cure, no cure." I think that the office seekers had all folded up their recommendations and gone home. Probably most of the employes of the establishment had dropped their work and were thinking of looking for some other situation. What shall now become of poor Naaman's wife? She must have sympathy somewhere. In her despair she goes to a little Hebrew captive, a servant girl in her house, to whom she tells the whole story, as sometimes, when overborne with the sorrows of the world, and finding no sympathy anywhere else, you have gone out and found in the sympathy of some humble domestic—Rosa or Dinah or Bridget—a help which the world could not give you.

What a scene it was! One of the grandest women in all Syria in cabinet council with a waiting maid over the declining health of the mighty general! "I know something," says the little captive maid, "I know something," as she bounds to her bare feet. "In the land from which I was stolen there is a certain prophet known by the name of Elisha, who can cure almost everything, and I shouldn't wonder if he could cure my master. Send for him right away." "Oh, hush!" you say. "If the highest medical talent in all the land cannot cure that leper there is no need of your listening to any talk of a servant girl." But do not scoff, do not sneer. The finger of that little captive maid is pointing in the right direction. She might have said: "This is a judgment on you for stealing me from my native land. Didn't they snatch me off in the night, breaking my father's and mother's heart? and many a time I have laid and cried all night because I was so homesick." Then flushing up into childish indignation she might have said: "Good for them; I'm glad Naaman's got the leprosy; I wish all the Syrians had the leprosy." No. Forgetting her own personal sorrows, she sympathizes with the suffering of her master and recommends him to the famous Hebrew prophet.

And how often it is that the finger of childhood has pointed grown persons in the right direction. O Christian soul, how long is it since that you got rid of the leprosy of sin? You say: "Let me see. It must be five years now." "Five years. Who was it that pointed you to the Divine Physician?" "Oh," you say, "it was my little Annie or Fred or Charley, who clambered up on my knees and looked in my face and asked me why I didn't become a Christian, and, all the time stroking my cheeks so I couldn't get angry, insisted upon knowing why I didn't have family prayers." There are grandparents here who have been brought to Christ by their little grandchildren. There are many Christian mothers here who had their attention first called to Jesus by their little children. How did you get rid of the leprosy of sin? How did you find your way to the Divine Physician? "Oh," you say, "my child, my dying child, with wan and wasted finger pointed that way! Oh, I shall never forget," you say, "that scene at the cradle and the crib that awful night! It was hard, hard, very hard; but if that little one on its dying bed had not pointed me to Christ, I don't think I ever would have got rid of my leprosy." Go into the Sabbath school this afternoon and you will find hundreds of little fingers pointing in the same direction toward Jesus Christ and toward heaven.

Years ago the astronomers calculated that there must be a world hanging at a certain point in the heavens, and a large prize was offered for some one who could discover that world. The telescopes from the great observatories were pointed in vain, but a girl at Nantucket, Mass., fashioned a telescope, and, looking through it, discovered that star, and won the prize and the admiration of all the astronomical world, that stood amazed at her genius. And so it is often the case that grown people cannot see the light, while some little child beholds the star of pardon, the star of hope, the star of consolation, the star of Bethlehem, the morning star of Jesus. "Not many mighty men, not many wise men are called; but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the mighty; and base things and things that are not to bring to naught things that are." Oh, do not despise the prattle of little children when they are speaking about God, and Christ, and heaven! You see the way your child is pointing; will you take that pointing or wait until, in the wrench of some awful bereavement, God shall lift that child to another world, and then it will beckon you upward? Will you take the pointing or will you wait for the beckoning? Blessed be God that the little Hebrew captive pointed in the right direction! Blessed be God for the saving ministry of Christian children!

No wonder the advice of this little Hebrew captive threw all Naaman's mansion and Ben-hadad's palace into excitement. Good-by, Naaman! With face scarified and rigid and inflamed by the pestilence, and aided by those who supported him on either side, he staggers out to the chariot. Hold fast the fiery coursers of the royal stable while the poor sick man lifts his swollen feet and pain struck limbs into the vehicle. Bolster him up with the pillows and let him take a lingering look at his bright apartment, for perhaps the Hebrew captive may be mistaken, and the next time Naaman comes to that place he may be a dead weight on the shoulders of those who carry him—an expired chieftain seeking sepulture amid the lamentations of an admiring nation. Good-by, Naaman!

Let the charioteer drive gently over the hills of Hermon, lest he jolt the invalid. Here goes the bravest man of all his day a captive of a horrible disease. As the ambulance winds through the streets of Damascus the tears and prayers of all the people go after the world-renowned invalid. Perhaps you have had an invalid go out from your house on a health excursion. You know how the neighbors stood around and said: "Ah, he will never come back again alive!" Oh, it was a solemn moment, I tell you, when the invalid had departed, and you went into the room to make the bed and to remove the medicine vials from the shelf, and to throw open the shutters so that the fresh air might rush into the long-closed room! Good-by, Naaman! There is only one cheerful face looking at him, and that is the face of the little Hebrew captive, who is sure he will get cured and who is so glad she helped him. As the chariot winds out and the escort of mounted courtiers, and the mules, laden with sacks of gold and silver and embroidered suits of apparel, went through the gates of Damascus and out on the long way, the hills of Naphtali and Ephraim look down on the procession, and the retinue goes right past the battle fields where Naaman, in the days of his health, used to rally his troops for fearful onset; and then the procession stops and reclines a while in the groves of olives and oleander, and Gen. Naaman so sick—and so very, very sick!

How the countrymen gaped as the procession passed! They had seen Naaman go past like a whirlwind in days gone by, and had stood aghast at the clank of his war equipments; but now they commiserate him. They say: "Poor man, he will never get home alive! Poor man!" Gen. Naaman wakes from a restless sleep in the chariot, and he says to the charioteer: "How long before we shall reach this Prophet Elisha's?" The charioteer says to a waysider: "How far is it to Elisha's house?" He says: "Two miles." "Two miles." Then they whip up the lathered and fagged out horses. The whole procession brightens up at the prospect of speedy arrival. They drive up to the door of the prophet. The charioteers shout: "Whoa!" to the horses, and the tramping hoofs and grinding wheels cease shaking the earth.

Come out, Elisha, come out, you have company; the grandest company that ever came to your house has come to it now. No stir inside Elisha's house. The fact was, the Lord had informed Elisha that the sick captain was coming and just how to treat him. Indeed, when you are sick and the Lord wants you to get well, He always tells the doctor how to treat you; and the reason we have so many bungling doctors is because they depend upon their own strength and instructions and not on the Lord God, and that always makes malpractice. Come out, Elisha, and attend to your business. Gen. Naaman and his retinue waited, and waited, and waited. The fact was Naaman had two diseases—pride and leprosy; the one was as hard to get rid of as the other. Elisha sits quietly in his house and does not go out. After a while, when he thinks he has humbled this proud man, he says to a servant: "Go out and tell Gen. Naaman to bathe seven times in the River Jordan, out yonder five miles, and he will get entirely well."

The message comes out. "What!" says the commander in chief of the Syrian forces, his eye kindling with an animation which it had not shown for weeks, and his swollen foot stamping on the bottom of the chariot, regardless of pain: "What! Isn't he coming out to see me? Why, I thought certainly he would come and utter some cabalistic words over me or make some enigmatical passes over my wounds. Why, I don't think he knows who I am. Isn't he coming out? Why, when the Shunammite woman came to him he rushed out and cried: "Is it well with thee? Is it with thy husband? Is it well with thy child' And will he treat a poor unknown woman like that, and let me, a titled personage, sit here in my chariot and wait and wait? I won't endure it any longer. Charioteer, drive on! Wash in the Jordan! Ha! ha! The slimy Jordan—the muddy Jordan—the monotonous Jordan. I wouldn't be seen washing in such a river as that. Why, we watered our horses in a better river than that on our way here—the beautiful river, the jasper paved river of Pharpar. Besides that, we have in our country another Damascene river—Abana—with foliaged banks and torrent ever swift and ever clear, under the flickering shadows of sycamore and oleander. Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?"

I suppose Naaman felt very much as we would feel if, by way of medical prescription, some one should tell us to go and wash in the Danube or the Rhine. We would answer: "Are not the Connecticut or the Hudson just as good?" Or, as an Englishman would feel if he were told, by way of medical prescription, he must go and wash in the Mississippi or St. Lawrence. He would cry out: "Are not the Thames and the Shannon just as well?" The fact was that haughty Naaman needed to learn what every Englishman and every American needs to learn—that when God tells you to do a thing, you must go and do it, whether you understand the reason or not. One thing is certain, unless haughty Naaman does as Elisha commands him he will die of his awful sickness. And unless you do as Christ commands you, you will be seized upon by an everlasting wasting away. Obey and live; disobey and die. Thrilling, overarching, under-girding, stupendous alternative!

Well, Gen. Naaman could not stand the test. The charioteer gives a jerk to the right line until the bit snaps in the horse's mouth, and the whirr of the wheels and the flying of the dust show the indignation of the great commander. "He turned and went away in a rage." So people now often get mad at religion. They vituperate against ministers, against churches, against Christian people. One would think from their irate behavior that God had been studying how to annoy and exasperate and demolish them. What has He been doing? Only trying to cure their death-dealing leprosy. That is all. Yet they whip up their horses, they dig in their spurs, and they go away in a rage.

So, after all, it seems that this health excursion of Gen. Naaman is to be a dead failure. That little Hebrew captive might as well have not told him of the prophet, and this long journey might as well not have been taken. Poor, sick, dying Naaman! are you going away in high dudgeon, and worse than when you came? As his chariot halts a moment his servants clamber up in it and coax him to do as Elish said. They say: "It's easy. If the prophet had told you to walk for a mile on sharp spikes in order to get rid of this awful disease you would have done it. It is easy. Come, my lord, just get down and wash in the Jordan. You take a bath every day, anyhow, and in this climate it is so hot that it will do you good. Do it on our account, and for the sake of the army you command, and for the sake of the nation that admires you. Come, my lord, just try this Jordanic bath." "Well," he says, "to please you I will do as you say." The retinue drives to the brink of the Jordan. The horses paw and neigh to get into the stream themselves and cool their hot flanks. General Naaman, assisted by his attendants, gets down out of the chariot and painfully comes to the brink of the river, and steps in until the water comes to the ankle, and goes on deeper until the water comes to the girdle, and now standing so far down in the stream just a little inclination of the head will thoroughly immerse him. He bows once into the flood, and comes up and shakes the water out of nostrils and eyes; and his attendants look at him and say: "Why, general, how much better you do look." And he bows a second time into the flood and comes up, and the wild stare is gone out of his eyes. He bows the third time into the flood and comes up, and the shriveled flesh has got smooth again. He bows the fourth time into the flood and comes up, and the hair that had fallen out is restored in thick locks again all over the brow. He bows the fifth time into the flood and comes up, and the hoarseness has gone out of his throat. He bows the sixth time and comes up, and all the soreness and anguish have gone out of the limbs. "Why," he says, "I am almost well, but I will make a complete cure," and he bows the seventh time into the flood and he comes up, and not so much as a fester or scale or eruption as big as the head of a pin is to be seen on him. He steps out on the bank and says: "Is it possible?" And the attendants look and say: "Is it possible?" And as, with the health of an athlete, he bounds back into the chariot and drives on there goes up from all his attendants a wild "Huzza! huzza!" Of course they go back to pay and thank the man of God for his counsel, so fraught with wisdom. When they left the prophet's house they went off mad; they have come back glad.

People always think better of a minister after they are converted than they do before conversion. Now we are to them an intolerable nuisance because we tell them to do things that go against the grain; but some of us have a great many letters from those who tell us that once they were angry at what we preached, but afterward gladly received the gospel at our hands. They once called us fanatics or terrorists or enemies; now they call us friends. Yonder is a man—I speak a literal fact—who said that he would never come into the church again. He said that two years ago. He said: "My family shall never come here again if such doctrines as that are preached." But he came again, and his family came again. He is a Christian, his wife a Christian, all his children Christians, the whole household Christian, and I shall dwell with them in the house of the Lord forever. Our undying coadjutors are those who once heard the gospel and "went away in a rage."

Now, my hearers, you notice that this Gen. Naaman did two things in order to get well. The first was, he got out of his chariot. He might have staid there with his swollen feet on the stuffed ottoman, seated on that embroidered cushion until his last gasp, he would never have got any relief. He had to get down out of his chariot. And you have got to get down out of the chariot of your pride if you ever become a Christian. You cannot drive up to the cross with a coach and four and be saved among all the spangles. You seem to think that the Lord is going to be complimented by your coming. Oh, no; you poor, miserable, scaly, leprous sinner, get down out of that! We all come in the same haughty way. We expect to ride into the kingdom of God. Never until we get down on our knees will we find mercy. The Lord has unhorsed us, uncharioted us. Get down out of your pride. Get down out of your self-righteousness and your hypercriticism. We have all got to do that. That is the journey we have got to make on our knees. It is our infernal pride that keeps us from getting rid of the leprosy of sin. Dear Lord, what have we to be proud of? Proud of our scales? Proud of our uncleanness? Proud of this killing infection! Bring us down at Thy feet, weeping, praying, penitent, believing supplicants!

For sinners, Lord, Thou camest to bleed,
And I'm a sinner vile, indeed;
Lord, I believe Thy grace is free,
Oh, magnify that grace in me!

But he had not only to get down out of his chariot; he had to wash. "Oh," you say, "I am very careful of my oblutions. Every day I plunge into a bright and beautiful bath." Ah, my hearers, there is a flood brighter than any other. It is the flood that breaks from the granite of eternal hills. It is the flood of pardon, and peace, and life, and heaven. That flood started in the tears of Christ and the sweat of Gethsemane, and rolled on, accumulating flood, until all earth and heaven could bathe in it. Zachariah called it "the fountain open for sin and uncleanness." William Cowper called it "the fountain filled with blood." Your fathers and mothers washed all their sins and sorrows away in that fountain. Oh, my hearers, do you not to-day feel like wading into it? Wade down now into this glorious flood deeper, deeper, deeper. Plunge once, twice, thrice, four times, five times, six times, seven times. It will take as much as that to cure your soul. Oh, wash, wash, wash, and be clean!

I suppose that was a great time at Damascus when Gen. Naaman got back. The charioteers did not have to drive slowly any longer lest they jolt the invalid: but as the horses dashed through the streets of Damascus I think the people rushed out to hail back their chieftain. Naaman's wife hardly recognized her husband; he was so wonderfully

NOTICE!

The carpenters, painters and decorators having finished and left us, we are again open and ready to make pictures for all who desire.

We wish to say to those who intend to have pictures finished for Christmas presents: don't put off coming to sit, but come now and give us plenty of time, and if you wish to avoid long and tiresome waits come early or make engagements. Especially bring children in the forenoon if possible.

We shall take orders for Free Hand Crayons to be finished for Christmas only until December 15th. Besides our free hand work, we can give you a finished enlargement in any style known, Crayon, Pastel, Water Color, Oil, Ink, etc., and at very reasonable prices.

Call and see samples of Permanent Bromide Enlargements, the new picture, all sizes up to life. $10 for plain enlargement, full life size, without crayon or other finishing. They are perfectly permanent, and unlike all other enlargements are fine pictures without any finishing, and the price is way below what you would bave to pay for any other picture of equal pretensions.

We have samples both finished and unfinished.

The Ideal N. England Newspaper.

SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN.

FOR 1887.

DAILY, $8; SUNDAY, $2; WEEKLY, $1.

THE REPUBLICAN aims to be a newspaper in the broadest and highest sense. It prints all the legitimate news of the day without fear or favor unembarrassed by personal or partisan obligations, and in compact, well arranged form. Its facilities for gathering and publishing the news are unsurpassed outside of the largest cities, and are constantly improving.

THE REPUBLICAN is distinctively a New England newspaper, although its reputation is national. It faithfully reports the life of this region and represents its intelligent spirit.

In its political attitude THE REPUBLICAN maintains a thorough independence, giving a fair hearing to all reasonable men and parties in its columns, but asserting its own convictions on public issues with vigor and clearness.

THE REPUBLICAN is an earnest advocate of temperance, of social simplicity and purity, and of all the good causes that help to make life better, It is not merely a journal of news, but undertakes to instruct and entertain its readers by the publication of a rich variety of literary and miscellaneous matter, embracing home and foreign correspondence, stories, poetry, dramatic art and society notes, etc.

A new and valuable feature of THE REPUBLICAN is its

SERIES OF WAR MEMORIES.

Being interesting reminiscences of the Rebellion, written expressly for its columns, chiefly by Western Massachusetts veterans, both officers and privates. These articles appear in Monday's Daily and in THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN each week.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

Contains the cream of the seven Daily issues carefully edited and arranged in compact form. It is an admirable family newspaper for all who are unable to read a daily paper or who desire to follow New England life and thought, and costs only

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR,

Or 10 cents a month for shorter periods; 3 cents a copy.

New subscribers to THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN for 1887 will receive the paper for the month of December, 1886, without extra charge.

All subscriptions are payable in advance and sample copies are sent free.

ASTHMA.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of

DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The store of John P. Peabody, in Salem, has for years been the centre of attraction to the ladies at Christmas time. It will be no exception this year. Mr. Peabody has made an attractive show in his different departments—and many of his novelties can be found nowhere else. His line of plush goods at the entrance to the store—including all sorts of boxes, papeteries, poker sets, jewel and handkerchief boxes, is unusually attractive. Just across the way is the handkerchief counter, where Mr. Peabody is selling a silk handkerchief for 50 cts. that should be seen by every one of our readers who are interested in such things. Alongside are gents' mufflers—a seasonable present for a gentleman at Christmas—and some of the choicest lace and crochet collars. There is a fine display of this kind of goods—both the richer goods and the attractive ones made from cheaper materials. In the centre of the store on the left is another counter devoted to novelties. There are single pieces of choice crockery—and the best line of hammered brass goods that we have noticed in any store. Brush cases, match safes—every conceivable variety of stuff is displayed on this counter. The goods are very desirable, very pretty, and very cheap. In leather bags, for shopping, and pocket books, Mr. Peabody has a good assortment at this same counter. A large bag for ladies, at 25 cts., is a wonder, and there are purses from 10 cts. up. Dolls are, of course, a specialty. There was one for 29 cts—well, we don't see how they can be made for that price. There is, also, shown some fur sets in beaver, coon, chinchilla and red fox, which are particularly appropriate for the winter season. The woolen goods department is attractively arranged and the toboggan caps—a novelty—is a really fine article of headwear. In the rear of the store, near the desk, is the place of all places to see the Christmas goods. This is the jewelry and silver-ware department. To this, Mr. Peabody pays special attention and no novelties are allowed to pass by unobserved. Pins and bracelets, of every style and pattern, solid silver casters, cake baskets, ice tilters, finger rings, gold and silver thimbles—everything in the way of jewelry or silver ware can be found here at very low prices. We can conscientiously recommend Mr. Peabody's store as a good place to trade.

Almy, Bigelow & Washburn have given up a portion of their carpet and tapestry room to goods for the holidays. It was the only course left. Their trade on regular goods has suffered no diminution and it was not possible to crowd any of the departments any further than they are at present. Of course the seasonable goods in handkerchiefs, gloves and ribbons for the Christmas trade are pushed to the front, yet all these goods are in regular line and are good any time. But for specialties one will be repaid by a visit to this department. Out of the portion devoted to these goods is the entrance to the rug department, articles which sell well at this season and are a very sensible gift. There is a large line of books, of vases and crockery, of toys of every description and cut glass bottles. There are knick-knacks in abundance, little things which one would not think of seeing, but which seem to be just the appropriate article to purchase. The art needle work department in this store, in charge of Miss Nowland, has been a great attraction for several weeks. Made up goods, which originate in the workroom of this store, are brought out in endless variety, and the sale on them has been enormous. The windows here are an attraction—they have been so for several weeks, but the inside of the store itself is the greatest attraction of all.

The "Old Corner" bookstore, H. P. Ives', Salem, is filled with a choice line of some original goods for the holidays. This firm make a specialty of Rogers' groups and fine stationery, and persons desiring any of these two specialties will consult their interest by visiting this store at once. The arrangement of the articles in this store is very unique—all the available room being occupied with goods for the holidays. Purses and bags are a great attraction on the left of the entrance—some of the choicest of Japanese leather books being found here. They have a line of purses from 10 cents up to $5.00—suited to every age and condition. Novelties in Christmas cards are another great attraction here. Their display is certainly one of the finest we have seen anywhere. Books of every kind of course they have, from the cheapest to the finest gilt edge—everything desirable in the market. There are Hawthorne calendars (a neat little design of local interest) tablets, desks, albums, etc. We can assure our readers that this store is very attractive in many ways this year, and they will be well repaid by a visit there.

Mr. George A. Collins has greatly enlarged his store, 198 Essex street, Salem, since last Christmas, and has double the stock to select from. In another column you will find a list of elegant Christmas presents which can be obtained there, or at his branch store, 26 Main street.

Throat troubles yield promptly to Red Star Cough Cure, as vouched for by U. S. Architect Clark. Its ingredients are purely vegetable and free from opiates. 25 cents.

The Salem & Danvers Street Railway has submitted its annual report for the year ending September 30, to the Board of State Railroad Commissioners. According to the report the liabilities of the company are $133,745.22 and the assets, $224,540.90. During the year there has been 150 feet of new track built at cost of $1651.84; 25 new horses added at cost of $4500; 6 new cars added at a cost of $4428. The total addition made to property amounts, all told, to $23,197.79. Among the expenses for operating the road repairs of tracks took $833.37; general repairs to cars, harnesses, etc., $2851.20; salaries of officers and employes, $22,769.28; taxes, State and local, $1566.69; rents and tolls paid other companies, $1405.45; provender, $11,683,67; damage for injury to property, $7; other expenses, $4116.38. The inventory of equipments showed the company owned 10 box cars, 14 open cars, 117 horses, 30 pairs harness, 2 omnibuses, etc. Total length of road, including .48 of a mile of switches, 9.28 miles. Of this 4.85 miles of the track is paved. Total length of leased road utilized, 4.83 miles. During the year the total number of miles run was 183,738. Total number of passengers carried, 713,127; total number of round trips, 17,595; total number of persons employed, 37. During this time there were but five persons injured, and these only slightly and by their own fault.

The opening chapters of the Life of Lincoln, now running in The Century, have proved to be of unique interest. The second part deals with Lincoln as Soldier, Lawyer and Politician. The style of the history is spirited and entertaining, and the narrative is brought down to the close of Lincoln's "pioneer period." The topic in the war series is The Second day at Gettysburg, written by Gens. Hunt and Law. The number contains two short stories by American writers: one a London society sketch, An American Beauty, by Mrs. Poultney Bigelow, the other a tale of the far West, entitled A Coward, by a new writer, Miss Ellen Mackubin. The Minister's Charge comes to a conclusion, and in the second part of Stockton's Hundreth Man, the boycott is touched upon. The Century Co., New York.

Frances Hodgson Burnett's new fairy tale, The Story of Prince Fairyfoot, begins in the Christmas St. Nicholas, and will be run through three numbers. There is a short story by J. T. Trowbridge, and Frank R. Stockton contributes the first half of another of his entertaining shipwreck stories. The most striking feature of the number is the article on How a Great Battle Panorama is Made. It is written by Theodore R. Davis, who was interested in the production of one of these popular exhibitions; it is illustrated with sketches by the author, and with reproductions of photographs. The number has two good Christmas stories; the first, entitled A Scheming Old Santa Claus, is by John R. Coryell, the second is by Rose Lattimore Alling, author of Nan's Revolt. It is called A Christmas Conspiracy. It will be concluded in January. The other stories and poems are appropriate to the season. The Century Co., New York.

The skin of a boiled egg is the most efficacious remedy that can be applied to a boil. Peel it carefully, wet and apply to the part affected. It will draw off the matter and relieve the soreness in a few hours.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge, to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

SLAUGHTER SALE OF

BOOTS, SHOES, RUBBERS, ETC.

A business man can have no better friend than a pleased customer. A fair number provides him with his bread and butter. A host of them builds him a fortune. The essence of success in trade is to induce a first purchaser to come again, and finally to think of no other store but yours when in want of anything in your line. This is the principle we are building on, and know every buyer will appreciate it after he has once made our acquaintance. Our aim is, to get your trade, not to make all the money we can out of you at the first picking. We are not sharpers but merchants. We ask an early call to convince you that these are facts:—

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE CHANGE in the vote this year, in the cities, on the question of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors, is a noteworthy occurrence. The attempt was made, and in a large number of cases it was successful, to carry the cities against the system of licensing the saloons. It was not expected that Boston would be carried against license, but other cities, previously on the side of the saloons, have taken a departure in the opposite direction.

This indication in favor of the suppression of the saloons manifests itself in two ways. There is a feeling that the saloon-power in politics is becoming too prominent a factor; and there is, also, a desire to see an effort made, sincerely and honestly, to enforce no-license in the cities.

There are in every town and city, temperance people who have voted "no-license" for years; who could never be induced to vote any other way, whatever might be the result. If they knew, positively, that every rum-shop in their locality would be open, and be allowed to remain open, under a no-license vote, which has been the case, many times, in this state, they would not change their vote. Their ballots are to be relied upon every year for no-license. But to this number has been added, this year, others who have become alarmed, or disturbed, at least, at the political power of the licensed saloon—of its influence with men who are chosen by the people to execute its laws. They are saying, "It is time this power was broken; it is time our young men were being taken out of its influence;" they are saying, in the words of the flaming advertisement, in the Boston papers of late, "Vote No-License; save the young men; save the homes."

There is another class of people who vote "no-license," because of indifference as to its effect upon the saloons, in general. They take good care that while there is enough "no-license" to close the groggeries, there shall not be enough to prevent them from obtaining their supply at the "respectable" (?) places. They know that certain places—certain hotels, for instance—will not be disturbed. They can obtain all they wish at these places. This being the case, they are indifferent as to the other places, and join the no-license ranks cheerfully and openly.

This year, however, coupled with the desire, from a new alliance, to increase the no-license vote, comes the earnest intention to see that law enforced. Prohibition that does not prohibit has been tried again and again, and has been found a failure. The adherents of the Law and Order League have said, "Enforce what law you have. Before trying Constitutional prohibition, enforce what prohibition you already have. If you can't enforce the latter, the former surely cannot be obeyed." And the feeling towards such enforcement is on the increase. Men who have always voted for license, because they have never seen prohibition enforced, because a vote "no-license" has always meant free rum, have taken fresh courage from the persistency of the law and order people and have voted "no-license." With every such vote there has gone forth a pledge to adhere to it so long as the law is enforced.

Men who have not been identified actively with the temperance cause have, this year, voted "no-license," because of a desire to keep temptation away from the young men. The power of the dram-shop has become so obnoxious—it has borne its fruit so openly—that they cannot longer close their eyes, or stifle their conscience. This state, this people, this nation must be roused from its lethargy, and this power of the dram-shop must be put down.

In those cities where a no-license vote has been cast, for the first time in many years, the voters will insist upon respect for law on the part of the authorities. The town of Peabody has shown that "no-license" can be enforced. Private tippling cannot be stopped; but dram-shops can be closed, and the proprietors forced to engage in other business or leave town. What has been done here can be done elsewhere. Prohibition does prohibit in Peabody; when it does likewise in the cities, its advocates will have a more tenable ground to stand upon than in years past. That time is fast approaching.

WE HAD not room, last week, even to apologize to our readers for the space occupied in our account of the dedication of the Methodist church. And yet the large demand for the issue which has come from all sides and all sources has assured us that no apology was needed. Events such as transpired last week make history; the record of any branch of the church of Christ, from its feeble beginnings to a season of prosperity, such as is now before this church, should be and we believe is a matter of pride to the christian community. The record which we gave was unusually full and complete. The history of its beginnings, heretofore unwritten in a certain particular, was given from the lips of one of its early founders, who, in the natural course of human life, must soon pass to his reward.

The exercises of last Tuesday week were of unusual interest to the members of this church. From the demand for the PRESS it is evident that they were of equal interest to others who could not attend. The sermon of Rev. W. L. Phillips, in the afternoon, was a scholarly and eloquent production. It was a powerful defense of Evangelical Christianity, and so regarded by all who were fortunate enough to hear it. The services in the evening—the reunion with former pastors—all were a season of great rejoicing with the people. The people of the church are justly proud of their remodeled church edifice. There is harmony in the church, the pastor and people are in sympathy with each other and the work of the church, and in their prosperity, financial and spiritual, all our citizens will rejoice.

IN CONNECTION with the no-license vote, it is to be regretted that Salem did not vote against the saloons. But the no-license people did good work; they reduced the majority for license from over 1000 to 537, and that too when 3671 votes were cast, in total, against 2541 last year. It is a good showing and means victory before many years. The shops on Boston street, so near the Peabody line, have been a great obstacle to the efforts to enforce no-license here. Whether licenses are granted them this year rests, of course, with the Mayor and Aldermen. We hope the number will be greatly restricted and it would be a good thing if none were granted at all in the close proximity to Peabody.

IT IS NO surprise that Mayor Raymond is re-elected in Salem. His election was a foregone conclusion and it is well for the city that he is re-elected. The disgraceful attempt of the opposition to foist the names of well known citizens upon the ticket, in opposition to Mayor Raymond, reacted, and ought to. The party which countenanced such proceedings should not receive the votes of any citizens of repute.

The Canadian Pacific railroad have offered Lucius Tuttle of Boston, general passenger agent of the Boston & Lowell road, a like position, with quarters probably at Montreal. Mr. Tuttle, who began his career as clerk in the probate court office at Hartford, Ct., has had a varied and thorough railroad experience, and is considered one of the ablest men in New England in his special field. It is announced in this morning's papers that he has accepted the position.

We received a call the other day from Eben U. Noyes, the son of the late John M. C. Noyes, who had a boot and shoe manufactory years ago, on the Square, and a grandson of the late Eben S. Upton, who will be remembered by our older citizens. Mr. Noyes left town when quite young, visiting England, whither he has returned twice since his departure from Peabody, which was 30 years ago. He is now residing in Ballston Spa, N. Y.

Rev. W. R. Clarke, formerly presiding elder of the Boston district of the New England Methodist Conference, preached last Sunday afternoon in the Methodist church, of this town. In the evening, Rev. George Alcott Phinney delivered the first of two lectures in the church on "Music and Architecture."

MUSICAL NOTES.

The announcement is made that the Oratorio of the "Redemption" by Gounod will be given by the Salem Oratorio Society, in Mechanic Hall, Wednesday evening, Dec. 29th. By arrangement with the Lowell Choral Society the latter organization will assist the Salem Society in the chorus, and it is probable that, later on in the season, the Salem Society will return the favor by assisting the Lowell chorus. This was done some years ago, when the Redemption was brought out, with much pleasure and profit to both choruses. For the grand choral numbers of the Redemption this consolidation will be of great advantage, and we trust that the increased expense, attendant upon its production, will be appreciated by the friends of the Society. Even with the hall filled, this is one of the oratorios upon which the Society do not expect to make their expenses by the sale of tickets. The soloists will be Mrs. J. P. Fernald, soprano; Miss Ita Welsh, contralto; Mr. George W. Want, tenor; Mr. A. D. Saxon, baritone; Mr. Harry L. Cornell, bass. An orchestra of 30 pieces, with the organ and piano, will furnish the instrumental accompaniments. Carl Zerrahn will conduct.

Mrs. Fernald has an engagement in Stoneham, Monday, Dec. 20th, with the Rivals Concert Co.

Owing to the indisposition of Miss E. Dora Clark, Mr. Geo. A. Shepard, organist of the Tabernacle church, in Salem, officiated at the Unitarian church in this town, last Sunday.

Miss Eloise Harford, a pupil of Charles R. Adams, has been engaged as contralto for the Barton Square church in Salem, for the rest of the year. Last Sunday, she brought with her Miss Alice May Bates, of Boston, who sang, by invitation of Miss Dalton, the soprano solo from the Messiah, "Come unto Him."

The Musicale given at the Methodist church, last Thursday evening, was a success, financially and every way. As many tickets as the church could accommodate were sold, and all the chairs available in the vestry had to be brought up to the gallery. For a church audience they were very enthusiastic, it being especially noticeable after the violin playing of Mons. Alfred De Seve. This artist is a favorite everywhere, and his reception here was but a repetition of the enthusiasm which greets his appearance in other places. He gave two numbers, and was recalled twice after the second number. Mme. De Seve accompanied him on the piano. Mr. Isaac Littlefield, who is always a favorite in this town, sang well two songs, his best effort being "Echoes," by Abt, which, as usual, was the least appreciated by the audience. Miss Cheney's voice was heard to good advantage in "Jerusalem," a sacred song by Parker, and in a duet with Mr. Littlefield as well as the closing trio. Bach-Gounód's Ave Maria was given by Mrs. Fernald with violin obligato by Mons. De Seve, and the accompaniment of piano and organ, Mme. De Seve taking the piano and Mr. Goldthwait the organ. We think this is the only time this piece has been thus rendered—its original adaptation—in this town, and the harmony of the organ gave a richness to the melody of this beautiful "Ave Maria" which was appreciated by the musical portion of the audience, at all events. If there had been more power in the organ, for the climax at the close of the solo, the rendition would have been all that could be desired; but that was not the fault of the organist. The concert closed with the rendition of Curshman's "Protect us thro' the coming night," by Mrs. Fernald, Miss Cheney and Mr. Littlefield, to the organ accompaniment of Mr. Goldthwait. A fine Ivers & Pond piano was furnished by Mr. Lefavour, of Salem.

Miss Louise Elliot, who sang in Salem at the recital by J. Phippen Jr., in the Young People's course, has been engaged by Plymouth church, Worcester, for the remainder of the year. Miss Elliot is deserving of all the success she is receiving, having been a faithful student and a charming girl, withal.

It is now announced that the first concert of the Salem Symphony Club will be given at Academy Hall, Salem, the latter part of next month. The first violins and some of the horns and oboes will be assisted by Boston artists. A soloist, probably a soprano, will be added. The club are certainly deserving of patronage from the Salem public. F. Clayton Record is the director.

The new band of Ralph L. Reinewald made its first public appearance, with full ranks, last Thursday evening, escorting the United Workmen to Mechanic Hall. It made a creditable appearance, and the band has had a very successful week. Mr. Reinewald played a march of Missud, which was in compliment to the leader of the Cadet Band, and we are glad to know that there is a kindly and fraternal feeling between these two bands. Both are good leaders, both have good bands, and there is room for both.

At the meeting of the Liberal Club, in Hamilton Hall, Salem, part song music was rendered by a quartette under the direction of T. M. Osborne, formerly of this town.

The closing entertainment in the course of Edward K. Hood, in Lynn, was given last Tuesday evening. The Lynn Transcript has the following very complimentary notice of Mr. Hood, personally. Those who know him here will feel that he is deserving of it all: Mr. Hood's own reception was, if possible more enthusiastic. His single number was,—a, Enoch Arden (adapted) and b, The Yarn of the Nancy Bell; but he was called and recalled—certainly to his heart's content. We never knew him to do better. He gave a great variety, but nothing in the line of low comedy. The accompanying vocal and organ music, off the stage,—the vocal, an excellent male quartette,—in the Enoch Arden scenes, was remarkably well conceived and executed. It is regretted that the hall was not crowded, and also that this is the last of the course. Mr. Hood deserves well of everybody, and his fellow townsmen wish him success wherever he appears.

Mr. Thomas McGrath rendered the "Pro-Peccatis" from the Stabat Mater, at St. John's church last Sunday, at Vespers. Lejeal's Vespers was rendered by the choir, the soprano solo being taken by Miss Alice Ducey.

The performance of the Messiah by the Handel and Haydn Society, in Boston, will take place as usual, Sunday evening, Dec. 26th. The soloists are to be Miss Zippora Monteith, of New York, soprano; Miss Gertrude Edmands, contralto; Mr. W. J. Winch, tenor; and D. M. Babcock, bass.

That grand event, the opening of the season of the American Opera Company at the Boston Theatre, is fixed for January 3. Never was grand opera produced with such elegance and completeness. In addition to favorite works seen and applauded here, the repertory will include Faust and Aida, so brilliantly successful in the West. It is probable, also, that in this city will occur two "first productions." Rubinstein's Nero, and Delibes' Coppelia. In every respect the company is larger and stronger than last year, and it is perfectly safe to expect an engagement characterized by the greatest success.

The Musical Record (Boston, $1 a year) for December has for music Valse Joyeuse, by Chas. Kinkel; Christmas Bells, words and music by Mrs. E. R. Young; In the Old Time, a Christmas carol, words by Rev. M. J. Savage, music by Howard M. Dow; O Shepherds, did you hear, by the same authors; and Freeburg Grand March, by Wm. T. Meyer. This monthly is edited by Dexter Smith and published by Oliver Ditson & Co.

The receipts from the Concert given under the auspices of the Oxford League were about $160.

PEABODY, Dec. 14th.

MR. EDITOR.

Dear Sir.—In behalf of the "Committee on Church Repairs and Furnishings," I would like to thank the people of this town, who have been so much interested, without denominational bias, in the recent work of our church, and express our sincerest wish that unbounded prosperity may attend all our churches in the dissemination of the Gospel of Christ.

Most sincerely,
GEORGE ALCOTT PHINNEY.

A city paper congratulates itself on predicting, the day before, what the president's message would contain, and says its synopsis bore quite a resemblance to the genuine article. Well, a newspaper man who cannot take a president's message six years old and tell what the next one is going to be, almost word for word, has no business in journalism. His place is with a construction gang on a railroad.

A Temperance Entertainment is to be given in the vestry of the South Peabody church this evening, by the Peabody Band of Hope. The program consists of songs and recitations by the children, readings by Miss McPherson and Mr. Farr, and singing by Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hayes and Miss Bertha Plummer of Lynn. The proceeds are to be given to the church at that place

The second annual ball of the Boston & Maine Railroad association will be held Wednesday, Jan. 12, at Mechanics Building, Huntington avenue, Boston. Music will be furnished by Baldwin's Boston Cadet Band. Purchasers of ball tickets at any point on the Boston & Maine will be sold half-rate tickets to Boston and return, by Conductor John McDonald.

Another cure for diphtheria: Put a teaspoonful of flour of brimstone into a wineglass of water and stir it with your finger instead of a spoon, as the sulphur does not readily amalgamate with water. When the sulphur is well mixed, give as a gargle and in ten minutes the patient will be out of danger. Brimstone kills every species of fungus in man, beast and plant in a few minutes.

The cold weather last week caused the bicyclist to pack away his wheel.

Mr. Nichols, the young man who has succeeded Tarlton at the dry goods store on Main street, has introduced an innovation in the Christmas trade in Peabody. All the leading books, juvenile and standard works, are placed on his counters, at the same prices made by the large dealers in Salem and Boston. We hope our readers will remember this. It is a new thing for any assortment of books to be found in this town, and Mr. Nichols should be encouraged in his enterprise. In addition to this he has a good line of the regular Christmas articles to be found in such stores as his, and it will pay our readers to look in upon him. Besides, they will receive courteous and affable treatment and will feel like making another visit to the store, even if they do not find just what they want the first time. Mr. Nichols means to keep a well selected line of goods and at the right prices, and he deserves encouragement.

Arrangements have been begun for the appropriate celebration of the 100th anniversary of the promulgation of the Constitution of the United States. This will occur September 17, 1887, and be conducted on a scale of appropriate magnificence. It will include all the states in the Union.

The old saying that winter never comes till the ponds are full is verified this year.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

According to an edict issued years ago the allotted age of man is set down as three score years and ten, and those who have passed that age may truly be called the patriarchs of our age and time. Such a one is Mr. Alfred Taylor living at 75 Washington street, and last Thursday evening, it being his 80th birthday, he was given a genuine and most agreeable surprise by a visit of about thirty of his friends who joined in congratulating him on having survived the vicissitudes along the journey of life and arrived at this ripe old age. During the evening Mr. Taylor and his estimable wife were presented among other things with a purse of about $140, which was received with grateful acknowledgments. The visitors about this time opened their baskets and with what had been prepared in the house sat down and enjoyed an old fashioned baked bean supper. Mr. Taylor, although 80 years of age, appears a good deal younger. He came to Peabody in 1824, the year that the remodelled block of Mr. J. B. Thomas was built, and has a clear recollection of people and events at that date. He was in business here with his brother for many years and built what is now the Methodist church. He has had an experience of the favors and misfortunes of this world that few men have known. The generous gifts of his friends and the social gathering at his home last Thursday will be pleasantly remembered as one of the bright spots in his life, and we trust he may live to see many happy returns.

The ladies of the Universalist church have abundant reason to felicitate hemselves on the success of their fair last week. The attractions advertised were carried out to the full, the many entertainments not only being novel but full of merit. The attendance was very large and a goodly number enjoyed the turkey supper on Wednesday evening. The arrangement of the tables, for both the fair and the supper, showed excellent taste, and at the latter nothing was wanting to make it as enjoyable s the home table. On Thursday even- g a laughable farce was very accept- ly given and a negro minstrel troupe ded to the enjoyment of the evening. he different parts were taken by mem- rs of the Murray Association, and ere heartily encored. As a whole, e fair was quite successful and will t the society about $250.

Hon. William Parsons delivered the ird lecture in the free course last hursday evening. Subject: "Look on the Bright Side." He was greeted with a fair-sized audience, who heartily enjoyed the lecture. He pictured the light and dark side of life, paying a deserved tribute to the late George Peabody, and spoke of the great value of the Peabody library to the young men of this town.

All veterans of the late war, either of the army or navy, who were prisoners at any time during the struggle, are requested to send their address, company and regiment to which they were attached, place and time of imprisonment, to Benjamin Beckett, Jr., who will forward the same to the United States commissioners of pensions, and probably they will have no cause to regret it.

Arrangements have been made for a series of three races at the Rink for the championship of Peabody and valuable cash prizes. The first will take place next Saturday evening. The following have entered: J. Rahilly, J. Daley, M. Toomey, J. Coleman, B. McKean, O. Lyons, J. O'Brien and Joe Coleman. Much sport is anticipated.

Mrs. Emma Holmes, of this town, who fell on Boston street last December and broke her leg, brought suit against the city of Salem through her attorney, F. E. Farnham, Esq. A pro forma verdict was ordered for the city on the ground that there was no evidence of a defect. The case will be carried to the supreme court on exception.

The South Church Sunday school have elected the following officers: Superintendent, J. K. Cole; Assistant Superintendent, David A. Messer; Secretary, Miss Lizzie Kimball; Treasurer, Albert H. Whidden; Librarian, Nathan Lakeman.

The Children's Mission Circle, connected with the South church, had a special meeting and a supper in the vestry, last week. Collection jugs for enny contributions were distributed mong the members.

Mr. William H. Joll, of this town, ill have charge of C. C. Farwell & o.'s shoe factory at Danvers in place John C. Campbell, who goes to their new factory at Methuen.

The friends of Mr. George C. Prescott, who removed to Saratoga last spring, will not be pleased to learn that he is going down hill very rapidly of late. He has joined a toboggan club.

Look out for snow slides!

Golden Medical Discovery

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is an unequalled remedy. Sold by druggists.

THE DRAMA.

This week at the Park Theatre, for one week only, Frank Mayo will appear as Nordeck. This play has been greatly improved since its first presentation, and Mr. Mayo with a strong cast will be cordially welcomed.

The presentation of Othello, last Saturday night, with Barron in the title role and Mr. Booth as Iago, was a superb presentation, and one long to be remembered. Hamlet will be presented tomorrow night; The Fool's Revenge, Friday night, Richelieu at the Saturday matinee, and Richard III at the closing performance, Saturday evening.

There's no sort of reason to doubt that Adonis could run the dramatic year through if Dixey's engagements were such as to allow his sojourn in Boston. But, unfortunately for the Hub, however it may be for other cities, a week from next Saturday night marks the close of the comedian's brilliant season. Seats are now on sale for any of the remaining Adonis performances at the Hollis Street Theatre. He does not return to Boston till a year from next spring, and an immense attendance may be expected nightly.

As the holidays draw near, the popular interest in the season's great attraction at the Boston Museum seems to increase. Although Harbor Lights is well into the fourth month, the indications are that it would hold the stage months yet. But the "lights" cease to shine Christmas night, as another great attraction must have opportunity for performance.

That long-awaited event, the production of Gillette's "Held by the Enemy," will take place two weeks from to-morrow evening at the Boston Museum.

For Christmas week manager Tompkins has made an engagement with the Kiralfy Brothers to bring out the famous ballet spectacle of "The Black Crook." It will have magnificent scenes and appointments, a good cast, and an unusually fine ballet.

WE CAUTION ALL AGAINST THEM.—The unprecedented success and merit of Ely's Cream Balm—a real cure for catarrh, hay fever and cold in the head—has induced many adventurers to place catarrh medicines bearing some resemblance in appearance, style or name upon the market, in order to trade upon the reputation of Ely's Cream Balm. Don't be deceived. Buy only Ely's Cream Balm. Many in your immediate locality will testify in highest commendation of it. A particle is applied to each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price 50 cents.

TOUR THROUGH MEXICO AND CALIFORNIA.—Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb have just announced the grandest excursion they have ever yet planned. It is nothing less than a comprehensive tour of the Southern States, Mexico and the Pacific Coast, with halts at scores of places en route, with special trains and other effective aids to sight-seeing. Hotel cars will be run through the South, and a train of new and elegant Pullman palace sleeping cars and a dining car will be at the service of the party throughout Mexico and beyond. This does not mean that the excursionists are to live on the cars exclusively. On the contrary they will stop at the very best hotels in the cities visited, including the Hotel Iturbride in Mexico, where they are booked for nearly a fortnight. The cars ensure first-class lodgings and meals, however, where otherwise they could not be had. The Mexico section of the tour, no less than the trip through California, Utah, Colorado, etc., is the most complete that could be made. The date of departure from Boston is January 31. Taken altogether, it is the finest excursion ever organized in America. The route extends a distance of between 11,000 and 12,000 miles, and includes no less than twenty-two States and Territories of the United States, fourteen States of Mexico, together with the Federal District, and one Canadian province. A descriptive circular of 144 pages can be had by addressing W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, Boston. There are to be several other excursions to California, one to Mexico and two (January 21 and February 25) to Washington, D. C.

THE FIRST KEEN TWINGE.—As the season advances, the pains and aches by which rheumatism makes itself known, are experienced after every exposure. It is not claimed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a specific for rheumatism—we doubt if there is, or can be, such a remedy. But the thousands benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, warrant us in urging others to take it before the first keen twinge.

A fair sized audience were present at the skating and dancing party at the rink, last Friday evening, given by the "Six Associates". An interesting game of polo was played between the Father Matthews and Crescents. An attractive advertising programme was given.

We have already had some brilliant autumnal sunsets. The sun went down and left the gate open, as it were.

DRUNKENNESS, OR LIQUOR HABIT CAN BE CURED BY ADMINISTERING DR. HAINES' GOLDEN SPECIFIC.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars, Address in confidence Golden Specific Co., 185 Race St. Cincinnati, Ohio. dec 1—1y changed she had to look at him two or three times before she made out that it was her restored husband. And the little captive maid, she rushed out, clapping her hands and shouting: "Did he cure you? Did he cure you?" Then music woke up the palace and the tapestry of the windows was drawn away, that the multitude outside might mingle with the princely mirth inside, and the feet went up and down in the dance, and all the streets of Damascus that night echoed and re-echoed with the news, "Naaman's cured! Naaman's cured!"

But a gladder tune than that it would be in all this place or wherever this sermon shall be read, if the soul should get cured of its leprosy. The swiftest white horse hitched to the king's chariot would rush the news into the Eternal City. Our loved ones before the throne would welcome the glad tidings. Your children on earth with more emotion than the little Hebrew captive would notice the change in your look and the change in your manner, and would put their arms around your neck and say: "Mother, I guess you must have become a Christian. Father, I think you have got rid of the leprosy." O Lord God of Elisha, have mercy on us!

Ready to Abdicate.

A New York correspondent writes that there recently appeared up town a young and rich citizen of Chicago, just back from Europe, and arrayed in the most proper manner possible from the dude standpoint. He was very anxious to meet Mr. Berry Wall, who has long borne the title "King of the Dudes," so a mutual friend brought them together. When the stranger was presented Berry stepped back, took him in slowly from head to toes, and exclaimed: "Ye gods! I abdicate."

Anxious for Particulars.

The following notice in a Montana newspaper is not calculated to sooth the feelings of the thief who stole Mr. Sampson's bay mare: "The night of the 14th inst. a dark bay mare, fifteen hands high, small white star in forehead, both hind feet white, was stolen from the stable of Ira Sampson, the undersigned. I will give the mare and $50 in cash for full and reliable particulars regarding the funeral of the thief. That's the kind of a man I am."

Mrs. Cleveland's Mail.

Mrs. Cleveland is said to receive more letters from Hagerstown, Md., than from any other place in the country. Shortly after her marriage two little girls living in that town sent her a letter and a bouquet of flowers. The letter was answered, and in a short time was copied by the town newspapers. From that time Mrs. Cleveland has been addressed by young and old from Hagerstown on all sorts of subjects and for all sorts of purposes.—Chicago Herald.

A Lesson in Dynamics.

A Rome (N. Y.) girl filled three stone beer jugs with wet sand, corked them tightly and set them in the oven to heat so that she could warm her bed with them. The heat generated steam from the wet sand and an explosion followed, which filled the room with flying sand and fragments of beer jugs. The girl and the rest of the family were badly scared, but escaped unhurt. The Rome girls are now giving up the use of artificial bed warmers.—Chicago Herald.

A Swindle in Shoe Polish.

A sharp young man has been swindling the shoe dealers of East Greenwich, N. Y., by selling them what seemed to be a remarkably fine article of shoe polish, for which he asked 75 per cent. more than the price asked for the ordinary French polish. After he delivered the goods and received the money it was discovered that each bottle contained about two tablespoonfuls of the polish on top of sawdust and glue.

Actor Barrett and Gen. Sherman.

Mr. Wilson Barrett, the English actor, says that the most interesting man he has met in this country is Gen. Tecumseh Sherman. When first introduced the general wanted to talk about theatres. He has a fondness for the drama and dramatic people. But Mr. Barrett skillfully brought him around to the war, and for an hour or two had the pleasure of listening to a most charming recital of history.—New York Sun.

Fishing for a Tapeworm.

A Georgia paper publishes as truth the story of a Marion county farmer who became satisfied that he had a tapeworm. So he carefully baited a little fishhook, tied a short line to it, swallowed the hook, and tied the line to his buttonhole. Then he waited for a bite. By and by he thought he had one and yanked the line; the hook caught in his throat, and had to be dug out. He didn't catch the worm.—New York Sun.

A Valuable Vineyard.

The noted "Sunny Slope" estate, near San Gabriel, Cal., has been sold to an English syndicate for a little over $1,000,000. The property includes the Sunny Slope vineyard and orange grove, 1,950 acres, of which 750 are in vines, 155 in orange and lemon trees, and 20 in miscellaneous fruits, and cultivated lands in grain, etc., to the extent of 1,025 acres.—New York Sun.

But He Was Mistaken.

A Napa, Cal., man thought he saw a sea serpent in the river there, but it was only a solid mass of little fishes, each about an inch and a half long. The school was about fifty yards long and a yard wide, and headed up stream. The commotion they made was caused by hundreds of large fishes that were continually throwing themselves among and eating up the little ones.—Chicago Herald.

An Absent Minded Lady.

An absent minded New York lady, who is conspicuous in society, finished her toilet not long ago for an evening at the theatre, and as a finishing touch drank the eau de cologne that stood on her dressing case. She was seriously sick for over a fortnight.—New York Letter.

A Lucky Shot.

A Sonoma, Cal., hunter saw a deer under a small madrona tree 200 yards away. He fired and missed the deer, but hit the tree about six inches above the animal's head, knocking off a splinter four inches long that struck the deer's head with such force as to penetrate the skull and cause instant death.

Sampling the Cider.

One of the institutions of Connecticut this fall is the cider beat, who, pretending to be out buying cider, samples the farmers' apple juice, gets invited to eat dinner or take tea, says he'll call again and goes on his dishonest way.

An Increase of Salary.

Gayarre, the Spanish tenor, sixteen years ago got eighty cents a night for singing in a music hall at Madrid. Now he has made an engagement to sing at the opera fifty nights for $70,000.

He Deserved It.

Preacher Callahan, of Madison, Ga., lost ten bales of cotton by fire. His friends are making up a purse for him, and a local newspaper says that he deserves it because he "is honest, a tenant and has nine unmarried daughters."

The regular meeting of the Board of Engineers was held last Wednesday evening. On the question of paying the firemen every three months, there not being a full attendance of the Board, it was laid over until some future meeting. Engineer Tibbetts was authorized to attend to the matter of a new stove for Hose 3. Fred C. Blake was approbated as a member of Hose 1, in place of William Brown resigned. It was voted to procure a pung for Hose 1.

Engineers Johnson and Tibbetts were appointed a committee to put a drip pipe on the fire alarm whistle. Voted that the petition of Hose 2 for a swing harness be laid on the table until the next meeting. The matter of a night driver was left with Engineer Tibbetts, and that the amount paid shall not exceed 25 cents per night.

A special meeting of the Board was held on Monday evening, when it was voted to place a swing harness, similar to the one in use at Hose 4, in the house of Hose 2. The hiring of a night driver for the Central Station was left with Engineer Southwick. It was voted to dispose of the old pungs of Hose 2 and 4 and purchase a new one for Hose 4. The engineers decided to fix the fire alarm whistle, by the putting on of a system of valves and to cover the feed pipe outside the building to prevent the condensation of steam and the gathering of water in the pipes.

The engineers purchased a new pung of the same design as those in use by Hose 1, 3 and 5, for Hose 2, of J. A. Roome, last Saturday.

A quantity of rubbish piled on top of the boiler at the tannery of Henry Wilson on Crowninshield street caught fire last Wednesday evening but did no damage. It was discovered by Mrs. William Pray who sent her son to put it out. It was reported, at the time, that it was an incendiary, but such was not the case.

Hose 1 will hold the first of a series of assemblies in Thomas Hall to-morrow evening.

"Jack," the old fire dog, formerly attached to the Peabody department, is now running with one of the Woburn fire companies. z

PEABODY.

Another "lock-out" between two cars of the Naumkeag and Danvers Horse R. R. took place last night. The Naumkeag car left the office in Salem at 10.17, about two minutes late, and the Danvers car followed round the corner to the station. Here it waited a minute or so; stopped to take in a passenger before it got to Mechanics' Hall, and on its arrival there found Conductor Buxton's car—in charge of the driver—headed towards the office from Peabody. Here was a pretty howdye'do! Both conductors, as usual, claimed the right-of-way; both refused to stir, and the Danvers car, with several ladies in it, and a number of Peabody passengers residing in the vicinity of Central street, had to wait till nearly midnight. At last Superintendent Ferguson arrived, and ordered the horses taken off the cars and the cars left on the track. This the conductors had attempted to do previously, but the police would not allow it to be done. He ordered one car to return to Peabody, which it did, and the passengers from this town arrived home shortly after midnight, after waiting nearly two hours.

Upon enquiry we find that the Naumkeag car had the right-of-way, because the Danvers car was late. But it was obliged to leave the office in Salem late, because the Naumkeag car, which was ahead of them, would not leave in time. And we are told that if the Danvers car from the Salem office, coming to Peabody, is not directly in the rear of the Naumkeag, it loses the right-of-way. No matter about the passengers. If it is late a fraction of a minute from the office, it should, according to the rules, wait five minutes. The Naumkeag can make the Danvers five minutes late every trip in this way. It can't start on time unless the Naumkeag car, which is ahead, will allow it, and if it is late it should wait five minutes. Of course it don't, and an affair like last evening is liable to happen any trip. It may be fun for the drivers and conductors, but it is not for the passengers and the public. It is all boy's play, and should be stopped. Rules so plain that the employes of both roads will understand what they mean, should be adopted, or the city of Salem should adopt some for them. Neither road is free from blame in these respects.

At the annual meeting of the Boston & Maine railroad stockholders, Wednesday, it was unanimously voted that the corporation accept the act of the Legislature, granting the right to build and maintain in connection with other railroads, a union station in Boston.

Your "sign" in the PRESS will never be blown down and damaged by a wind storm.

The Women's Relief Corps elected the following officers Tuesday evening:—President, Miss S. F. Kittredge; S. Vice, Mrs. Clara T. Batchelder; J. Vice, Mrs. Kate H. Goulding; Treas., Mrs. S. E. Beckett; Chaplain, Miss M. O. Barrett; Conductor, Miss Jennie Osborne; Guard, Mrs. Mary O. Stevens; Asst. Guard, Mrs. Sarah Pope; Asst. Conductor, Miss C. A. Richmond. The Secretary is to be appointed by the President.

The Teachers' Association met Monday and discussed some of the hindrances to the success of the primary teacher. Too large classes is the one great obstacle to doing good work and, yet, with small claases, there is no standard and no guide to uniformity in the work done by different teachers. For some reason the work done in the primary schools of the town is considerably below what is required in many places, even where the entire primary and grammar course is taken in nine years, while here the time is eleven years. At the next meeting the topic is to be "Home Lessons. Shall pupils be required to study out of school hours?" Mr. A. E. Wells will read a paper, to be followed by a discussion.

The retailing of scandals, the venting of spite against individuals, because of real or fancied injury, never did any newspaper or its publisher or editor any good. We are often asked to publish them—to print articles personal in their nature or reflecting npon the motives or character of citizens. Every publisher has more or less of this to contend with. We have set our foot resolutely against such publications. "With malice toward none, with charity for all" is a very ancient but a very good motto.

A large congregation assembled at the South Church, Sunday evening, to hear an address by Mr. G. W. Leitch on the life, habits and religion of the Hindoos of India and Ceylon. Mr. Leitch has had several years' experience as missionary in Ceylon and knows whereof he speaks. The address was illustrated by a large number of fine views, which gave a good idea of the habits of the people, the ancient architecture of the country as seen in one of the most famous temples, and of the mission work already done. The explanation of the pictures is an admirable missionary lecture, and no one who heard it can fail of realizing the great need of Christian workers in such an extended field. Mr. Leitch has two sisters now in Ceylon engaged in mission work. The collection, which was taken, amounted to $33.

It is to the credit of newspaper men that there are few engaged in this calling who have a diseased craving for personal notoriety, and who attempt to secure notice by sensational and clap-trap means. Most of the fraternity sink themselves in their papers. There are individuals connected with the press who habitually get credit for other men's work; who contrive to have themselves "interviewed" in order to attract attention; who write fantastic things in order to provoke notice, and who figure in this way in the public eye, not by virtue of judgment, useful performance and estimable character, but by the devices employed by quacks and charlatans to attract observation. When one of these noisy and self advertising editors is snubbed by some public man, he takes his revenge by unfounded accusations against the one who has slighted him, and if he should travel anywhere and not receive the attention which his inordinate vanity exacts, he will abuse the locality which has failed to recognize him. Such men are the parasites and fungi of the press. The capable and useful newspaper men of the land hold them in proper scorn, although they manage for a while to delude the general public. The mischief they do in their sensational exploits to make themselves talked about is often hard to repair and they are chiefly responsible for most of the complaint leveled at the whole newspaper world. Impudent self assertion is hard to put down but time at last brings about its correction.

Almy, Bigelow & Washburn have put on another effective and striking show which attracts much attention. Their exhibitions are elaborate and artistic. The grand winter scene thrown open on Saturday night was very pleasing to the throng of beholders. This scene must have had an influence upon the clerk of the weather for our genuine big snow storm came by way of competition. A good many of our readers have visited the winter carnivals at Montreal and are competent to express criticisms as to the correctness in detail of the ice palace, particularly when illuminated with incandescent electric lights; also the uniforms of the snow shoe clubs, the cave under the mountain, and the striking winter scenery in front of the toboggan slide as well as in the background above the slide. Expense and labor have not been spared.—Salem Gazette.

Frederick Porter has just opened the finest market and dining rooms in the Newcomb block to be found east of Boston. Mr. Porter's well known reputation for furnishing his customers with everything of the best the market affords is sufficient guarantee that in his new quarters a "Delmonico" taste could be gratified. The building is a complete model, meeting the requirements of al that could be anticipated. His meat and vegetable market is superb. Mr. Porter's kind consideration for his guests will not be lost sight of in his new quarters. We bespeak for him a most liberal patronage from both in and out of town trade. Don't fail to go to Porter's as he leads them all,—Beverly Times.

B. F. Huntington, from one half acre of land, raised this season 349 3-4 bushels of onions. The total cost of manure, cultivating and gathering crop &c., was $66.18. The net profit, at 90 cents per bushel, was $248.59. Mr. Huntington also gives his experience in raising corn. From 168 rods of land he gathered 188 bushels of corn in the ear, weighing 45lbs. each. The cost of the crop was $78.95. The profit $41.55 Mr. Huntington is one of our progressive young farmers, and keeps up with the times in all that relates to his occupation. For several years he took the lead in strawberry culture. He has achieved success in his calling by diligent labor, study and observation.—Amesbury News.

Masons and plasterers would do well to make note of a hint thrown out by an English architect, who says that the addition of saccharine matter increases the strength of mortar, mixing common lime, with sugar added, as strong as Portland cement. Water, to which sugar has been added, dissolves fourteen and one-half times more lime than does water without sugar.

The Boston Record predicts that within two years the Boston & Maine Railroad will have swallowed the Lowell, and that the Fitchburg, Cheshire and Central Vermont will be virtually consolidated, the former becoming the outlet of the Canadian Pacific, the latter of the Grand Trunk.

It is well when setting out on a journey, to slip two or three grains of flax-seed into the pocket, then if you are so unfortunate as to catch a cinder under your eyelid the pain can be allayed by slipping a grain of flax in after it where it will swell in a few moments, and give out its peculiar mucilaginous water, bathing the eye, keeping down the inflammation and swelling, and wrapping the spark in it to slip out without further trouble.

Cold tea should be saved for your vinegar barrel. It sours easily, and gives color and flavor.

A good way to catch cold is to rush out of a hot room into the cold of the street, and hurry along with the mouth open for breathing, instead of keeping the lips tightly closed and breathing through the nostrils.

The Peabody PRESS says, "nearly all our exchanges are using ballots for wrappers." Up this way the local correspondents of the Boston papers use them to write sensational items on.—Woburn Advertiser.

It is about time to commence selecting your holiday presents. For an absent friend you can't select a present for $2.00 that will be more highly appreciated and give them more satisfaction for a whole year than a copy of the PRESS.

BEATS.—A Lowell Street farmer has raised a mammoth beet that measures 31 inches around the waist and weighs 13 pounds.—Peabody Press. What are you giving us? We've known you to raise beats in Peabody that measured more than 3 feet around the waist, and weighed more than 250 lbs.—Beverly Times.

Do not forget George Stevens in your search for Christmas goods and Christmas candies. George has a larger and better line of goods than ever this year, and his store is a very attractive place.

There was a fair sized audience at the Institute, last Monday evening, to listen to the lecture "Across the Pacific," by Chaplain T. A. Crawford, U. S. A. The lecture was extremely interesting and much enjoyed.

This house to house canvassing is a great business. We saw a man selling a double-jointed, self-feeding, steam-condensing, odorless kettle the other day, which he said he had sold at every house on the street except one.

An eight-year old son of Thomas Olson met with a singular accident last Thursday. He was running to catch on a pung when the horse threw one of its shoes which struck him in the face with such force as to break his nose.

Mrs. Charles R. Manning, after a lingering illness, passed to a higher life last Wednesday. She was an old resident of this town and respected by those who knew her. She was 66 years of age. A husband and one son, H E. Fleet, survive her.

The laugh last week was on the police who had been ventilating their room at the station for the past three years with a ventilator that was only a sham. The discovery was made when putting in a receiver for the new stove.

Mary A. Dearborn, who has been superintendent of the girls' department of St. John's Sabbath-school, has resigned, on account of her health, and she was presented, yesterday, by her assistant teachers and friends with a beautiful Wakefield chair.

Edward Wilcox, the grocer, has been missing numerous articles including tobacco and cigars from his store, and the police have arrested Daniel Barry and Patrick O'Connell, two boys 15 and 16 years of age. The case will come up to-morrow morning.

The administrator of the estate of Prescott Grant sold the John McHugh estate on Washington street, last Saturday, to Mrs. Allen McHugh for $2,005. Mr. Joseph N. Burbeck bought a lot of land, on Holly street, belonging to the same estate.

Mr. A. P. Chute, who has been "right hand man" at the post office, will sever his connection there the first of the year to accept a position as book keeper with the firm of Jerome, Redding & Co., of Boston, dealers in electrical supplies.

Call and inspect the holiday attractions at Nugent's Shoe Store. What they sell they guarantee to be as represented, and, furthermore, they refund the money on all goods returned in good condition. Store open every evening this week.

George Peabody Lodge No. 18 A. O. U. W. elected officers, as follows: M. W., Clarence E. Page; Foreman, Geo. F. Bailey; Overseer, H. G. Upton; Guide, C. M. Buxton; I. W., Frank Fittz; O. It is reported that the B. & M. will settle with Michael Birmingham, who had his back injured while tending a switch some three years ago while he was in the employ of the company as brakeman. The terms are $45 a month and his doctor's bill to the present time.

There has been reported a case of cruelty to the school committee from the Wallis school, in which a child who has been under the doctor's care was not permitted to leave the room, and her parents have taken her out. A choking case was also reported there a short time ago.

Mr. Henry Merrill, of Danvers, and a lady were thrown from their sleigh while crossing the horse-car track on Main street, Saturday. Mr. Merrill kept his hold on the reins and was dragged quite a distance. They were assisted to their sleigh, and sustained only slight injuries.

The new club room of prominent business men in Mr. J. B. Thomas' Block, have their rooms, three in number, attractively furnished with easy chairs and other furnishings for a social club room. They have adopted the name of "Dustin," after the original landlord of the hotel.

Johnnie Kee, the Mongolian, who is trying to pursue his favorite avocation in Blaney's block is much annoyed by the "Melican" boys, as he calls them. The police have been keeping them away of late, and Johnnie has rewarded them by giving them some music, which they pronounce not very slow.

The Old Ladies' Home Aux. Society have postponed their supper and social party, on account of the oratorio being held the 29th, till January 5th. The tickets are now in the hands of the committee or can be found at the drug stores of H. A. Spaulding, D. P. Grosvenor or W. T. Lee. The object is worthy and a liberal patronage should be extended.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE CHRISTIAN ON TRIAL THE THEME OF HIS DISCOURSE.

The World, Conscience, an Angel and the Holy Ghost Bear Witness Against Him, but Christ Pleads His Case and He is Saved.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 19.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., preached to-day in the Brooklyn Tabernacle on the subject: "On Trial," taking for his text I John i, 2: "We have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous," he said:

Standing in a court room you say to yourself: "At this bar crime has often been arraigned; at this witness stand the oath has often been taken; at this jurors' bench the verdict has been rendered, at this judge's desk sentence has been pronounced." But I have to tell you to-day of a trial higher than any oyer and terminer, or circuit, or supreme, or chancery. It is the trial of every Christian man for the life of his soul. This trial is different from any other in the fact that it is both civil and criminal. The issues at stake are tremendous, and I shall in my sermon show you, first, what are the grounds of complaint; then who are the witnesses in the cause, and lastly, who are the advocates.

When a trial is called on, the first thing is to have the indictment read. Stand up, then, O Christian man, and hear the indictment of the court of high heaven against thy soul! It is an indictment of ten counts, for thou hast directly or indirectly broken all the ten commandments. You know how it thundered on Sinai, and when God came down how the mountain rocked, and the smoke ascended as from a smoldering furnace, and the darkness gathered thick, and the loud, deep trumpet uttered the words: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die!" Are you guilty or not guilty? Do not put in a negative plea too quick, for I have to announce that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. There is none that doeth good; no, not one. Whosoever shall keep the whole law yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Do not, therefore, be too hasty in pronouncing yourself not guilty.

This lawsuit before us also charges you with the breaking of a solemn contract. Many a time did we promise to be the Lord's. We got down on our knees and said: "O Lord, I am Thine now and forever." Did you keep the promise? Have you stood up to the contract? I go back to your first communion. You remember it as well as if it were yesterday. You know how the vision of the cross rose before you. You remember how from the head, and the hands, and the side, and the feet, there came bleeding forth these two words: "Remember me!" You recall how the cup of communion trembled in your hand when you first took it; and as in a sea shell you may hear, or think you hear, the roaring of the surf even after the shell has been taken from the beach, so you lifted the cup of communion, and you heard in it the surging of the great ocean of a Saviour's agony; and you came forth from that communion service with face shining as though you had been on the Mount of Transfiguration; and the very air seemed tremulous with the love of Jesus, and the woods, and the leaves, and the grass, and the birds were brighter and sweeter voiced than ever before, and you said down in the very depths of your soul: "Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love thee." Have you kept the bargain, O Christian man? Have you not sometimes faltered when you ought to have been true? Have you not been proud when you ought to have been humble? Have you not played the coward when you ought to have been the hero? I charge it upon you and I charge it upon myself—we have broken the contract.

Still further, this lawsuit claims damages at your hands. The greatest slander on the Christian religion is an inconsistent professor. The Bible says religion is one thing; we by our inconsistency say religion is some other thing, and what is more deplorable about it is, that people can see faults in others while they cannot see any in themselves. If you shall at any time find some miserable old gossip, with imperfections from the crown of her head to the sole of her foot, a perfect blotch of sin herself, she will go tattling, tattling, tattling all the years of her life, about the inconsistencies of others, having no idea that she is inconsistent herself. God save the world from the gossip, female and male! I think the males are the worst. Now the chariot of Christ's salvation goes on through the world, but it is our inconsistencies, my brethren, that block up the wheels, while all along the line there ought to have been cast nothing but palm branches, and the shout should have been lifted, "Hosanna to the son of David."

Now you have heard the indictment read. Are you ready to plead guilty or not guilty? Perhaps you are not ready yet to plead. Then the trial will go on. The witnesses will be called, and we shall have the matter decided. In the name of God I now make proclamation: "Oyez! oyez! oyez! Whosoever hath anything to offer in this trial, in which God is the plaintiff and the Christian soul the defendant, let him now step forth and give testimony in this solemn trial."

The first witness that I call upon the stand in behalf of the prosecution is the World—all critical and observant of Christian character. You know that there are people around you who perpetually banquet on the frailties of God's children. You may know, if you have lived in the country, that a crow cares for nothing so much as carrion. There are those who imagine that out of the faults of Christians they can make a bridge of boats across the stream of death, and they are going to try it; but, alas, for the mistake! When they get amid stream away will go the bridge and down will go their soul to perdition. O, World of the greedy eye and the hard heart, come on the stand now and testify in behalf of the prosecution against this Christian soul on trial. What do you know about this Christian man? "Oh," says the World, "I know a great deal about him. He talks about putting his treasures in Heaven, but he is the sharpest man in a trade I ever knew. He seems to want us to believe that he is a child of God, but he is just full of imperfections. I do not know but I am a great deal better than he is now. Oftentimes he is very earthly, and he talks so little about Christ and so much about himself, I am very glad to testify that this is a bad man."

Stop, O World with the greedy eye and the hard heart. I fear you are too much interested in this trial to give impartial evidence. Let all those who hear the testimony of this witness know that there is an old family quarrel between these two parties. There always has been a variance between the World and the Church, and while the world on the witness stand to-day has told a great deal of truth about this Christian man, you must take it all with some allowance, remembering that they still keep the old grudge good. O World of the greedy eye and the hard heart, that will do. You may sit down.

The second witness I call in this case is Conscience. Who art thou, Oh Conscience? What is your business? Where were you born? What are you doing here? "Oh!" says Conscience, "I was born in heaven. I came down to befriend this man. I have lived with him. I have instructed him. I have warned him. I showed him the right and the wrong, advising him to take the one and eschew the other. I have kindled a great light in his soul. With a whip of scorpions I have scourged his wickedness and I have tried to cheer him when doing right; and yet I am compelled to testify on the stand to-day that he has sometimes rejected my mission. Oh, how many cups of life have I pressed to his lips that he dashed down, and how often has he stood with his hard heel on the bleeding heart of the Son of God! It pains me very much that I have to testify against this Christian man, and yet I must, in behalf of Him who will in no wise clear the guilty, say that this Christian man has done wrong. He has been worldly. He has been neglectful. He has done a thousand things he ought not to have done, and left undone a thousand things he ought to have done." That will do, Conscience. You can sit down.

The third witness I call in the case, is an Angel of God. Bright and shining one, what doest thou here? What hast thou to say against this man on trial? "Oh!" says the angel, "I have been a messenger to him. I have guarded him. I have watched him. With this wing I have defended him, and oftentimes when he knew it not I led him into the green pastures and beside the still waters. I snatched from him the poisoned chalices. When bad spirits came upon him to destroy him I fought them back with infinite fierceness; and yet I have to testify to-day that he has rejected my mission. He has not done as he ought to have done. Though I came from the sky he drove me back. Though with this wing I defended him, and though with this voice I wooed him, I have to announce his multiplied imperfections. I dare not keep back the testimony, for then I should not dare to appear again amongst the sinless ones before the white throne."

There is only one more witness to be called on behalf of the prosecution, and that is the great, the holy, the august, the omnipotent Spirit of God. We bow down before Him. Holy Spirit, knowest thou this man! "Oh, yes," says the holy one, "I know him. I have striven with him ten thousand times, and though sometimes he did seem to repent, he fell back again as often from his first estate. Ten thousand times ten thousand has he grieved Me, although the Bible warned him saying: 'Grieve not the Holy Ghost. Quench not the spirit.' Yes, he has driven Me back. Though I am the third person of the Trinity he has trampled on my mission, and the blood of the atonement that I brought with which to cleanse his soul, he sometimes despised. I came from the throne of God to convert, and comfort, and sanctify, and yet look at that man, and see what he is compared with what, unresisted, I would have made him."

The evidence on the part of the prosecution has closed. Now let the defense bring on the rebuttal testimony. What have you, O Christian soul, to bring in reply to this evidence of the World, of the Conscience, of the Angel and of the Holy Ghost? No evidence? Are all these things true? "Yes, unclean, unclean," says every Christian soul. What? Do you not begin to tremble at the thought of condemnation?

We have come now to the most interesting part of this great trial. The evidence all in, the advocates speak. The profession of an advocate is full of responsibility. In England and the United States there have arisen men who in this calling have been honored by their race and thrown contempt upon those who in the profession have been guilty of a great many meannesses. That profession will be honorable as long as it has attached to it such names as Mansfield, and Marshall, and Story, and Kent, and Southard and William Wirt. The court room has sometimes been the scene of very marvelous and thrilling things. Some of you remember the famous Girard will case, where one of our advocates pleaded the cause of the Bible and Christianity in masterly Anglo-Saxon, every paragraph a thunderbolt.

Some of you have read of the famous trial in Westminster hall of Warren Hastings, the despoiler of India. That great man had conquered India by splendid talents, by courage, by bribes, by gigantic dishonesty. The whole world had rung with applause or condemnation. Gathered in Westminster hall was one of the most famous audiences ever gathered. Foreign ministers and princes sat there. Peers marched in clad in ermine and gold. Mighty men and women from all lands looked down upon the scene. Amid all that pomp and splendor, and amid an excitement such as has seldom been seen in any court room, Edmund Burke advanced, in a speech which will last as long as the English language, concluding with this burning charge, which made Warren Hastings cringe and cower: "I impeach him in the name of the Commons house of parliament, whose trust he has betrayed. I impeach him in the name of the English nation, whose ancient honor he has sullied. I impeace him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trampled on, and whose country he has turned into a desert. And, lastly, in the name of human nature, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age and rank, I impeach him as the common enemy and oppressor of all."

But I turn from the recital of these memorable occasions to a grander trial, and I have to tell you that in this trial of the Christian for the life of his soul the advocates are mightier, wiser and more eloquent. The evidence all being in, Justice rises on behalf of the prosecution to make his plea. With the Bible open in his hand he reads the law, stern and inflexible, and the penalty: "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Then he says: "O thou, judge and lawgiver, this is thine own statute, and all the evidence in earth and heaven agrees in stating that this man has sinned against all these enactments. Now let the sword leap from its scabbard. Shall a man go through the very flames of Sinai unsinged? Let the law be executed. Let judgment be pronounced. Let him die. I demand that he die."

O Christian, does it not look very dark for thee? Who will plead on thy side in so forlorn a cause? Sometimes a man will be brought into a court of law, and he will have no friends and no money, and the judge will look over the bar and say: "Is there any one who will volunteer to take this man's case and defend him?" and some young man rises up and says: "I will be his counsel," perhaps starting on from that very point to a great and brilliant career. Now, in this matter of the soul, as you have nothing to pay for counsel, do you think that any one will volunteer? Yes, yes; I see one rising. He is a young man, only 33 years of age. I see His countenance suffused with tears and covered with blood, and all the galleries of heaven are thrilled with the spectacle. Thanks be unto God! "We have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

O, Christian soul, your case begins to look better. I think, perhaps, after all you may not have to die. The best advocate in all the universe has taken your side. No one was ever so qualified to defend a man as this advocate is qualified to defend you. He knows all the law, all its demands, all its penalties. He is always ready. No new turn of the case can surprise Him, and He will plead for you for nothing as earnestly as though you brought a world of treasures to His feet. Besides that he has undertaken the care of thousands who were as forlorn as you, and He has never lost a case. Courage, O Christian soul! I think that after all there may be some chance for you, for the great advocate rises to make his plea. He says: "I admit all that has been proved against my client. I admit all these sins, aye, more; but look at that wounded hand of mine, and look at that other wounded hand, and at my right foot and at my left foot. But all these wounds I plead for his clearance. Count all the drops of my tears. Count all the drops of my blood. By the humiliation of Bethlehem, by the sweat of Gethsemane, by the sufferings of the cross, I demand that he go free. On this arm he hath leaned; to this heart he hath flown; in my tears he hath washed; on my righteousness he hath depended. Let him go free; I am the ransom. Let him escape the lash; I took the scourgings. Let the cup pass from him; I drank it to the dregs. Put on him the crown of life, for I have worn the crown of thorns. Over against my cross of shame set his throne of triumph."

Well, the counsel on both sides have spoken, and there is only one more thing now remaining, and that is the awarding of the judgment. If you have ever been in a court room you know the silence, and the solemnity, when the verdict is about to be rendered or the judgment about to be given. About this soul on trial, shall it be saved or shall it be lost? Attention? above, around, beneath. All the universe cries, "Hear! Hear!"

The judge rises and gives this decision, never to be changed, never to be revoked. "There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus."

"The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,
I will not, I will not, desert to His foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake."

But, my friends, there is coming a day of trial in which not only the saint, but the sinner must appear. That day of trial will come very suddenly. The farmer will be at the plow, the merchant will be in the counting room, the woodman will be ringing his ax on the hickories, the weaver will have his foot on the treadle, the manufacturer will be walking amid the buzz of looms and the clack of flying machinery, the counsel may be standing at the bar pleading the law, the minister may be in the pulpit pleading the gospel, the drunkard may be reeling amid his cups, and the blasphemer with the oath caught between his teeth.

Lo! The sun hides. Night comes down at mid-noon. A wave of darkness rolls over the earth. The stars appear at noonday. The earth shudders and throbs. There an earthquake opens and a city sinks as a crocodile would crunch a child. Mountains roll in their sockets and send down their granite cliffs in an avalanche of rock. Rivers pause in their chase for the sea, and ocean, uprearing, cries to flying Alps and Himalayas. Beasts bellow and moan, and snuff up the darkness. Clouds fly like flocks of swift eagles. Great thunders beat and boom and burst. Stars shoot and fall. The Almighty, rising on his throne, declares that time shall be no longer, and the archangel's trump repeats it till all the living hear, and the continents of dead spring to their feet, crying: "Time shall be no longer!" Oh, on that day, will you be ready?

I have shown you how well the Christain will get off in his trial. Will you get off as well in your trial? Will Christ plead on your side or will he plead against you? Oh, what will you do in the last great assize, if your conscience is against you, and the world is against you, and the angels of heaven are against you, and the Holy Spirit is against you, and the Lord God Almighty is against you? Better this day secure an advocate.

A Warm Place to Sleep.

Perhaps you never stopped to think that in a city like Chicago live a good many people of various sorts who are able to enjoy no greater comfort, no more delicious luxury, than a warm place to sleep. Thinking the matter over you will doubtless perceive that anything like happiness or contentment without a snug, warm place to sleep o' nights is impossible. Given fine raiment, rich food, good health, wealth and all of the pleasures, delicacies and luxuries which money can buy or youth and vigor can enjoy—all would be a mockery without a warm place to sleep. The prisoner in solitary confinement, the condemned man in his cell, the pauper in a charity bed, the hopeless invalid on a couch that is never to be left save in death, is favored by fortune compared with him who possesses no warm retreat at night, who has almost forgotten what it is to sleep without an accompanying nightmare made up of cramps, chills and icy specters. If any living mortal deserves the pity and charity of his fellows it is the one whom night makes homeless, who has door after door shut in his face, who is cast out from the habitations of man to shift for himself like a wild beast. All this is what a policeman meant to say when he thus chatted at the west end of Madison street bridge:

"What are those chaps doing there on the sidewalk next the flour mill? Gittin' warm. Some of em's tramps who haint got no money, some's newsboys and bootblacks who'd rather spend their money goin' to the theaytres than for lodgin's, and some's fellers in tough luck. No matter who they be an' what brought 'em here, I haint got the heart to drive 'em away. You see, there's big steam boilers right under the sidewalk there, and those grates are reg'lar hot air registers. Go stand over there an' see how warm it is. Some of 'em sleeps there all night, an' mighty glad of the chance, too. Them cold nights we had 'em piled up there two or three deep. When it's real cold a man can't warm but one side o' hisself at a time there, but the boys took turns actin' as watchman', the watchman's duty bein' to turn t'other fellers over every fifteen minutes, so's to warm the cold side."—Chicago Herald.

New Method of Speech Recording.

A promising method of recording and reproducing speech is that of M. Leon Esquille. It consists in first speaking to a diaphragm having a highly polished surface, from which a ray of light is reflected. The record of this speech is obtained by simply photographing the ray of light upon a traveling band of sensitized paper. After having been developed, the articulation may be reproduced by projecting the image of the trace by means of an electric arc or calcium light upon a selenium receiver, the well known apparatus for transforming light impulses into sound vibrations, and the speech is then heard through the telephone connected. This method is more troublesome than Edison's phonograph or Bell's graphaphone, but seems likely to give better results.—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Valuable Find.

Two men, strangers to each other, sat side by side in a west bound Wabash train. One of them slept, and when he awoke found that his seat mate had gone, taking his bag, but leaving one in its place. The conductor was consulted and it was decided to open the remaining valise to identify its owner. It was opened and disclosed, as its only contents, an ax with a piece of broken handle in it and a package containing $1,200 in money. No name or address could be found to lead to the ownership, and the finder is holding it until it can be claimed and he gets his own valise in exchange.—New York Sun.

NOTICE!

The carpenters, painters and decorators having finished and left us, we are again open and ready to make pictures for all who desire.

We wish to say to those who intend to have pictures finished for Christmas presents: don't put off coming to sit, but come now and give us plenty of time, and if you wish to avoid long and tiresome waits come early or make engagements. Especially bring children in the forenoon if possible.

We shall take orders for Free Hand Crayons to be finished for Christmas only until December 15th. Besides our free hand work, we can give you a finished enlargement in any style known, Crayon, Pastel, Water Color, Oil, Ink, etc., and at very reasonable prices.

Call and see samples of Permanent Bromide Enlargements, the new picture, all sizes up to life. $10 for plain enlargement, full life size, without crayon or other finishing. They are perfectly permanent, and unlike all other enlargements are fine pictures without any finishing, and the price is way below what you would have to pay for any other picture of equal pretensions.

We have samples both finished and unfinished.

Grandmothers' Picture.

It is an ancient picture dimmed by years,
A fair old face, with bands of silver hair
Smoothed underneath a cap of snowy lace
Such as our grandsires' wives were wont to wear;
It smiles upon me from its tarnished frame
With all the old time tenderness and love;
I think there cannot be a sweeter look
On angel faces in the world above.

It brings me back the joy of days that came
Before my life was touched with care or guile;
Fair memories of the past, as dim, as dear,
As yonder fading face and fading smile;
It brings me back my childhood's happy hours,
Dew, scent and blossoms, wind and song and sun,
Red sunset skies and shadow-purpled eyes,
And gentle lullabies when day was done.

It brings me back the hush of summer noons,
The shadowed grass, the murmur of the bees;
The idle clouds at anchor in the blue,
The white and gold of daisies on the leas;
It brings me back the silence of the night
Set thick with stars that twinkled faint and high,
The croon of birds within the dusky woods,
The silver moonlight over fields of rye.

I see again the kitchen's sanded floor,
The vine-leaf shadows trembling on the sill,
The grassy yard alight with buttercups,
The glimpse of sky above it, blue and still,
I see the ancient presses, set away
In shaded chambers that I used to know,
And smell the faint, sweet lavender and thyme
That wither on the linen's folded snow.

I see the sunflowers droop beside the well,
I hear the robin whistle to his mate,
I pluck the poppies and the marigolds
That fringe the sunny borders by the gate;
I say my prayers beside a silken knee,
I kiss a dear old face that long ago,
With God's own peace upon its pallid lines,
Was laid to rest where summer roses blow.

Dear saint! if ever I were hard and cold,
Estranged from God by bitter loss and pain,
The love and trust within those tender eyes
Would bring me back my childhood's faith again.
Quaint little picture, graven by the sun,
Slowly your lines are fading from my eye,
But on my heart the sunshine of the past
Has graven a picture that can never die.

Science and Faith.

Science in sounding phrase can tell
Just how we live and why;
But never yet hath soaring science told
How 'tis we die,

How mind to matter is resolved;
How light to darkness fades;
How mental chaos over wisdom mounts,
Amid death's shades;

How vital force that rules the world
In mid career is checked;
How storm-outriding barks on waveless seas
At last are wrecked.

At questions such, proud Science halts
Her ineffectual breath;
But Faith cuts through the Gordian knot,
And cries
"There is no death!"

For eight years Col. D. J. Williamson, Quarter-Master, U. S. A. and ex-U. S. Consul at Callao, was crippled with rheumatism. He got no relief until he used St. Jacobs Oil, which cured him. No remedy on earth equals it for pain. Price, fifty cents a bottle.

A little girl defined "nervous" as "being in a hurry all over." What dictionary ever told it better?

ASTHMA.

No one need undergo the extreme suffering caused by this dreadful disease any longer. The constriction of the air passages that impedes respiration is very soon relaxed by the application of

Battis' Modified Extract of

DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

First by sponging the throat with it. Then by applying a bandage wet with Extract, renewing it as often as required, and covering the wet with several thicknesses of dry cloth to create warmth. If applied in anticipation of a recurring attack or spasm it cannot come on. By continued use of the Extract, the attacks may occur just as regular but less intense, and in time will cease altogether. With this protection one can lie down and enjoy the quiet sleep that it promotes, and without any fear that disagreeable symptoms may follow.

This is my experience with this latest and greatest revelation of nature, of its sympathy with human suffering.

A HOLIDAY SUGGESTION.—Some one has written: "To receive is a passive pleasure; to give, an active joy." Judging by the bustling throngs that crowd the busy marts of trade at this particular time, the writer of these lines must have been a close observer of human nature. It is observable, however, that the crowds of Christmas purchasers are drifting every year more and more into the purchase of those articles which shall enter into the daily life of the recipient long after the season of their presentation has passed.

Chromo cards have given place to articles of utility, as well as ornament, and nowhere is one more impressed by this than in visiting the furniture establishment of the far-famed Boston house of Keeler & Co., 89 to 91 Washington Street, Cor. of Elm. Noted as they are at all times for being headquarters for the most beautiful and artistic furniture for the adornment of the home, they outdo themselves at Christmas, and this year they have outstripped the past by their collection of articles for household adornment of practical utility, in their line.

Their always beautiful stock of goods is, to meet the holiday trade, enhanced by a superb collection of Writing Tables, of the most tempting designs; Music Stands which would entrance Orpheus; Table Scarfs, of exquisite patterns; Tables of graceful shape; Book-cases that would adorn any library or reception room; Desks at which it would be a pleasure to work; Chiffonieres of fabulous capacity; Shaving Stands which would rob "Blue Sunday" of its terrors; elegant Screen Panels; Fancy Rockers, which are so constructed that they tip "just far enough," and soothe the sitter into a sense of solid comfort; these, and the conventional thousand and one articles of their kind, are to be found at this palatial store. And best of all, the firm of Keeler & Co. combine rare designs, elegance, sound construction, and cheapness. By cheapness we refer to their prices. No article goes from their store but what is warranted, and we believe they aim to make every article purchased from them a monument which shall attest to their reliability years hence. Another feature, too, which this firm inaugurated last season, and which met with such popular favor, was to allow purchasers to buy goods at any time prior to Christmas, and leave the same in their care without charge, and without further trouble to the buyer, they deliver the articles so purchased to any address, on Dec. 23 and 24. This enables the purchase of goods from their stock before the choicest articles are culled therefrom, which cannot be duplicated. Keeler & Co's. establishment should surely be visited by our readers, and ladies in particular will no doubt be able to gain many ideas for home decoration and comfort by so doing.—Exchange.

Have you seen Daniel Low's window, at the corner of Washington and Essex streets, Salem. It contains many beautiful articles arranged in attractive form. But it is nothing, compared with the handsome exhibition in the store. Before you decide on your Christmas gifts it will pay you to just call at Mr. Low's. Exquisite taste has been displayed in the selection of goods, which are all new and the prices very reasonable. There are rings and jewelry in rich and elegant designs, silver jewelry, fine solid gold articles with diamonds, rubies and turquoise stones, beautiful patterns in watches, gold-headed canes, silver ware, bric-a-brac, bronzes, mirrors, pocket books, card cases, Burmese glass ware, vases and art goods are seen in wonderous profusion. In fact, his whole line is most complete and the profusion and variety is dazzling and bewildering. Mr. Low never marks his goods at fancy prices for Christmas, but maintains the same close figure that prevails the year through. The tastes of all can be gratified at a slight tax upon the purse. You have only to call to prove the truth of this statement.

Sleds for the boys is the great excitement at the Naumkeag Clothing Co. The winter scene in their window represents lots of boys with clipper sleds, and one of them is up a tree pursued by a bear. But the "Naumkeag" Indian, the protector of all good little boys, is on hand with a gun and a spear, and no harm can befall the lads who buy their clothing of the Naumkeag and get one of their famous clipper sleds.

It sounds comical to hear an ordinary congregation of well dressed comfortable looking people singing: "Jesus I my cross have taken, all to leave and follow thee!" Think of a woman with a silk dress on and a stuffed bird on her hat, standing up and singing: "Naked, poor, despised, forsaken, thou from hence my all shall be."

As soon as there are indications of a felon, apply a poultice of equal parts of saltpetre and brimstone, mixed with sufficient lard to make a paste; renew as soon as it becomes dry.

Now is the time for the weather prophets to say what they know about the kind of weather we are to have this winter, or forever hold their peace.

An exchange paper remarks: "It is generally safe to conclude that a neighborhood in which the roads are good, is prosperous, intelligent and refined."

Judging from the tightness of the article, it isn't every girl who can laugh in her sleeve nowadays.

THE DRAMA.

Lithographs are being put round town for Atkinson's Aphrodite Co., which will be given Christmas night in Mechanic Hall, Salem, under the management of Andrew Moulton & Johnson. Judging from the following, from the Springfield Republican, the show will be of the usual holiday kind in Salem: Atkinson's "Aphrodite" company had a crowded gallery and a light lower house at the Opera house last night. Springfield has not seen so coarse a performance since the same manager's production of "Peck's Bad Boy." The story is the same that Rosina Vokes presented in her clever and refined burlesque, "A Tinted Venus." There the resemblance stops. The tone of the new piece may be judged from the fact that the new Aphrodite gets drunk on gin from one of the barber's bottles as a basis for some of the "fun," and gives a maudlin exhibition that is disgusting and almost indecent. Yet this "tough" show has received dozens of favorable notices in which it is called "clean" and "entertaining." The reporters must have understood that they were writing advertisements at 20 cents a line.

For this Christmas week, at the Boston Theatre, the managers announce the revival of Kiralfy's Black Crook, with a large company and an abundance of new features. There is a new operetta ballet, its first presentation at Boston. It is just the attraction to draw for a Christmas week.

It will be with regret, indeed, that Henry E. Dixey's friends and admirers will say good bye to him at the Hollis Street next Saturday evening. Christmas night will be made a souvenir occasion, and Edward E. Rice is to conduct this evening all the entr'act music.

For the last time Harbor Lights will shine out upon a Boston Museum audience on Christmas evening. The remarkable run of this drama shows how firm a hold the London success has gained in the regard of the theatre-goers. It is acted now, in all respects, with skill and entire success. It is quite certain that the rest of the week the Museum will be packed.

At the Park Theatre, a Tin Soldier, one of the funniest of plays, is to be seen this week.

Held by the enemy, the second production of the season at the Boston Museum, is likely to make one of the greatest successes in the history of this famous house. Gillette's drama of the war time has been received with enthusiasm wherever presented.

Modjeska is an artist always welcome to Boston. She comes to the Hollis Street on Monday of next week with a new play, that has met in New York with emphatic success. The Chouans is a dramatization from Balzac's celebrated novel of that name, by Pierre Berton and and Paul M. Potter. It will be staged with entirely new scenery by J. A. Thompson, William and Arthur Voeghtlin and Gaspard Maeder, while the costumes have been imported expressly for this production. Modjeska's company is said to be the best ever associated with the star.

Among the attractive places to purchase holiday gifts must be mentioned the Bee Hive of Frank Cousins, which is just now doing a thriving business. One very pleasing thing to customers is the fact that all the articles to be found here—and they include everything in the line of Christmas goods—may be purchasod on one floor. There are no stairs to climb—no elevators to wait for. It is one of the lightest, cleanest and most deftly arranged stores to be found in Salem. Mr. Cousins has many surprises in store for his patrons. He brings to the front unexpected novelties, and sells them at such a low price that the customer realizes at once that some one would be pleased with such a gift. In every department may be found useful gifts for Christmas, there are dolls of all kinds and all prices, handkerchiefs, toilet sets, gloves, perfumes, fancy boxes and bottles, crockery in unique designs—in short, everything which can attract the eye or please the customer. The windows are very neatly arranged, that in the upper window being particularly a fine show.

The abandonment of the Jeannette, of Arctic region fame, in the ice is the subject of an attractive display in the window of William G. Webber & Co. It is understood that the arrangement, was under the supervision of Mr. Newcomb, one of the survivors of that expedition, and the curiosity to see it is very great—crowds of people spending a long time taking in all the points. Nothing of more interest, locally, could have been devised.

The store of Chamberlain & Son, jewelers in Salem, is a very attractive sight. The windows of this store are usually full of the finest and richest things to be found in the jewelry line, but this week the store, both inside and out, surpasses all former attempts. Our readers should buy jewelry of reliable firms, who will stand back of what is sold. Such a firm is the old established house of Chamberlain & Son.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge, to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

SLAUGHTER SALE OF

BOOTS, SHOES, RUBBERS, ETC.

A business man can have no better friend than a pleased customer. A fair number provides him with his bread and butter. A host of them builds him a fortune. The essence of success in trade is to induce a first purchaser to come again, and finally to think of no other store but yours when in want of anything in your line. This is the principle we are building on, and know every buyer will appreciate it after he has once made our acquaintance. Our aim is to get your trade, not to make all the money we can out of you at the first picking. We are not sharpers but merchants. We ask an early call to convince you that these are facts:—

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,

THE CHRISTMAS scenes in the window of Frank Cousins' store in Salem, are true to nature, inasmuch as they represent two phases of life, which are familiar to us all. Inside is the richly furnished apartment, and the young miss, who has awakened early Christmas morning, is seen by the cosy fire examining the contents of the stocking which was so carefully and anxiously hung up the night before. A glance assures the looker that the home is that of wealth and plenty; and the gifts which the young girl, possibly the only child, or the pet of the household, receives, are characteristic of lavish expenditure to gladden the heart both of the parents and child. The window curtains are brushed aside, and without is a young lad in the snow. He is thinly clad for the weather, and has come probably to shovel the snow from the steps of the dwelling. The scene within attracts his attention. He has dropped his shovel in the snow and stands wonderingly, at the sight of the splendor in doors. It is indeed Christmas morning within. Is it so without?

The celebration of the birth of Christ should come with gladness to every heart. It should be a part of that joy to see that some portion of the poor, the needy and the outcast of this world, are relieved, in some measure, of their necessities. And the suggestion comes with added force in this country, as each year goes by, that there is a tendency towards extravagant gifts, which make it burdensome to every giver. Lavish expenditure leads to a restriction in the number of gifts. The point is not to see how many of our friends we can make happy by some gift, but to see how elegant, or expensive, or elaborate gift we can give to our nearest friends. In Europe, where Christmas is something of a national holiday, as well as a church festival, the people make trifling presents. Each friend is remembered with a gift, and many hearts are therefore made glad.

The tendency of this nation, as has been the case in all young and prosperous nationalities, is not towards economy. It is, therefore, natural, that in the selection of Christmas gifts, each year should bring something more elaborate. It is a dangerous tendency—to the individual and the nation. Far better would be the European custom of distributing our favors more widely—of enforcing the lesson that 'tis not the gift, but the spirit in which it is given, that hallows it to both alike. Such observance of Christmas removes class distinctions, breaks down the barriers of pride and selfishness, and makes Christmas a glad holiday to the poor and lowly as well as to the rich and powerful. It brings something of joy to little Johnny out in the snow, in the early morning, as well as to the little maiden of the fireside, aglow with pleasure at the first sight of her Christmas stocking. It preaches anew the glad tidings to all—Christ is born in Bethlehem.

THE FURNISHING of refreshments at the polls, by the women, such as doughnuts and coffee, is made the subject of quite a little discussion in Springfield. The Republican takes the ground that it should be discountenanced. The means used is considered by them a "sort of a bribe;" it is the same as if the license men should furnish bar-room drinks free, to the voters at the ballet box. Of course, doughnuts and coffee are not intoxicating, but the purpose for which they are served is the same—the persuasion of he voter to cast a ballot for their side.

There may be some reason in the argument, but it looks to us a little like straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. When the advocates of the rum shops use arguments which are much more persuasive than doughnuts and coffee, not only on the day of election but for weeks previous, when the patrons of the dram shops are compelled by obligations to vote as their master may dictate, shall we make all this fuss because a few women, realizing the temptations hanging over the family and the home, forbidden to cast a ballot in their own right, use what little persuasion they can, even at the expense of doughnuts and coffee, to increase the size of the no-license vote? True, two wrongs do not make a right, admitting that the refreshments of the ladies are for the purpose of influencing voters. But in this case, we must fight the devil with his own weapons.

The presence of the women at the polls, in this momentous issue of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors, is a good omen. Invariably they have been treated with respect. Their presence means something else. It means that before many years, in matters pertaining to the welfare of the home, and to the education of the young, these women will come to the polls, not to furnish doughnuts and coffee, but armed with the power of the ballot. When that time comes, it is beyond dispute on which side their influence will be cast. Will not the time soon come, when in this State, in these matters, it will be the duty of the Commonwealth to call to her aid the women within her borders, for the cause of temperance and home and right? It will be the duty of the daughters of the State to respond to that call. Under Providence, it may not be many years before that call is made.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It very likely may happen that John D. Long will remain in the House of Representatives of the next Congress. It may prove to be the wisest thing to do. But it will not be done, in our judgment, unless it is found that Gov. Robinson's services to the State can be transferred to the Senate of the United States. We think it will be Robinson or Long, and the State will be perfectly satisfied with either.

There is one whopper in Secretary Manning's report. He says the consumers of tobacco are willing to pay for the luxury and ask no relief. People are doubtless willing to pay for their tobacco, but we doubt if they are anxious to pay for it from fifty to a hundred per cent. more than it is worth in the shape of a tax. There are a great many people who would like to be able to get a good Havana cigar at a moderate price, instead of being obliged, as they are now, to pay extortionately for the inferior home-made article. Besides, tobacco forms no contemptible item in the poor man's expenditure, and to take off the tax would leave him more money to expend for other things. We think taking off the revenue tax on tobacco, and a corresponding reduction of the tariff tax would be very popular things.—New Bedford Standard.

Mr. Dawes' speeches on the Indian question might be called a relaxation.—Worcester Gazette.

To Dawes, or his hearers?

They are getting warmed up on the rum question at Woburn, and one of the leading drug dispensers has been sentenced to pay a fine of $50.00 and given three months in the house of correction for selling a solution of gin or rum and camphor. We don't know much about this case but we are inclined to think it is a case of bitter feeling on one side or the other. Dr. Dodge is a reputable druggist there; even closes his store on the Lord's day when all the others keep open. We don't believe he is wilfully guilty of illegal sale of liquor. It looks to us like a similar case of persecution which happened to brother Shepard, of the Danvers Mirror, once upon a time. Brother Shepard came out ahead. We think this may be the case in Woburn. As we remember the town, if Chief Nelson closes up or prosecutes all the unlicensed grog-shops there he will have his hands full. It was not long ago that we read in the Journal that Chief Nelson had gone "fishing." He must have returned.

One thing is certain, and that is, that if we are to nominate Mr. Cleveland to be his own successor, which, at present, seems to us inevitable, we cannot elect him unless we come to some better understanding than now exists. In truth, if he is not with us heartily, and in good faith, and all along the line, we do not care to elect him. Between a Mugwump in the White House and a Stalwart Republican, we should prefer to take our chance of the future in a square hand-to-hand fight on principle with the Republican, getting with our victory, if we should win a victory, a change of public policy, rather than to eke out a precarious milk-and-water servitude to a fast-and-loose, pig-and-puppy, now-you-see-it-and-now-you-don't, too-good-to-be-honest, and too-great-to-be useful Administration, of Cheap-John statesmen, wearing a second-hand apparel and pinchbeck jewelry. This is the feeling among the mass of Democrats.—Courier Journal.

MUSICAL NOTES.

We called attention, last week, to the announcement of the Salem Oratorio Society, regarding the two performances of that society this season. We desire to remind the readers of this column, again, of the work which is being done this year. Two oratorios are to be given, the first one, Gounod's Redemption, one week from to-night; the other, Handel's Judas Maccabæus, later in the season. Those who will be interested in the first programme will surely be so in the masterpiece of Handel. The Lowell Choral Society will add their voices and numbers to the choruses of the Redemption, and in the "Unfold, ye portals everlasting" the effect of the union will be sufficient to compensate for all the trouble. The names of the soloists are given in the advertisement and they have already been referred to by us. Mr. George W. Want is to be the tenor soloist, and upon him comes a very large share of the solo work. He has been heard in Salem at the concerts of the Schubert Club, and we feel sure that the selection is a wise one. But what we started out to say is this: checks for reserved seats to both these oratorios are on sale, and can be obtained of members of the society. Mr. Thomas M. Stimpson, one of the directors, has some; and as he can be very conveniently seen by our people, we trust that they will make it in their way to obtain their checks of him. Patrons who purchase these checks for both performances will have the first choice of seats, which is a very proper thing, as the Society wish to dispose of as many season tickets as the public will take. These seats can be selected, Friday, Dec. 24th and Monday, Dec. 27, and the public can purchase single seats at the close of this sale to holders of season checks. Indications point to a very large sale, and we hope every seat will be taken. We desire to remind our readers who cannot attend the concert, that a public rehearsal will be given in the afternoon, to which admission can be had for the nominal sum of 25 cents

Closely following the oratorio of the Redemption comes the announcement of the first concert of the Salem Schubert Club, which will be given Wednesday evening, Jan. 5, 1887, when Cowen's cantata of the Sleeping Beauty will be performed. The Schubert Club have made, or will make, several new departures at this concert. In the first place, Academy Hall will be used, instead of Plummer Hall. The advantage of this is so obvious that explanation would be superfluous. Secondly, they are to have an orchestral accompaniment. The advantage of this, too, would seem to be a self evident fact. The Schubert Club are a body of musicians, of whom every member is capable of doing solo work. And with Blaisdell's Orchestra, of Concord, N. H., to assist them, the concert cannot fail of being a success. This Orchestra, if we mistake not, has never been heard in Salem. They furnished the accompaniment at the Taunton Musical Festival—have done so for years. And it would be a pleasure if a selection by the Orchestra could be added to the work of the evening at the Schubert Club. The people will find them an intelligent and enthusiastic body of musicians, entirely en rapport with their leader and the work to be performed. Our readers understand, we presume, that no tickets for evening performances are sold by the Schubert Club. The audience is made up of Associate members, who can obtain tickets entitling two persons to the concerts of the season, with all the rehearsals, for $3.00. There are a few of these tickets left, and they can be obtained at the store of O. W. H. Upham. The soloists for the Sleeping Beauty are to be Miss M. E. Bockus, soprano; Miss Addie P. Pitman, of Salem, contralto; Mr. Charles F. Webber, tenor; and Norman McLeod, bass. William J. Winch is conductor of the club this season.

Mr. Gericke, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was ill, at the concert of last Saturday night, and Carl Zerrahn was called to conduct the Orchestra at short notice. The oration he received, and the able manner in which he fulfilled his task, if we credit the best critics, among them Howard M. Ticknor, in the Sunday Globe, must have saddened the heart of "Nym Krinkle," who declared in the Worcester Telegram during the week of the Festival, that Carl Zerrahn could not conduct an orchestra. It will be hard to make the members of the choral organizations, who have been under Zerrahn's leadership, agree with this merciless critic. They have seen Zerrahn in times of orchestral difficulties, out of which no one but Zerrahn could extricate them, and this too when the choral organizations were dependent upon the orchestral accompaniment. What the local organizations in this part of the country are to do when Zerrahn is no longer able to lead them we know not. We suppose some one will be found, but we fail to recall, at present, any one upon whom his mantle, as a director of oratorio music, is worthy to fall.

Mr. Willis H. Ropes has been elected a director of the Salem Oratorio Society, in place of Andrew Fitz, resigned.

The engagement of Elene Buffington Kehew, soprano, who is well known in this vicinity, to Mr. William B. Eaton, is announced.

Theodore M. Osborne has been singing tenor in the choir of the South Church, in this town, for a few Sundays.

Friday evening, Christmas Eve, the three Congregational churches in Salem will unite in a special service, which will be largely musical. Extracts from the Messiah and other numbers will be rendered by Mrs. E. R. Bigelow, of Salem, Mrs. Warren, of Baltimore and a male quartette, also there will be congregational singing led by the Salem Cadet Orchestra. These musical services are attracting much attention, and are drawing in to the church, those evenings, people who are not always found at other times in the house of God. Good music in our churches will attract as large and as intelligent a congregation as good preaching.

Two weeks hence the American Opera Company is to begin a two week's season at the Boston Theatre. Such artists as Fursch-Madi, Emma Juch, Pauline L' Allemand, Mathilde Phillips, Candidus, Stoddard, Whitney, and Babcock are to be seen, and the ballet which the Chicago divines were invited to witness, will, we presume, also be seen. On Monday, Dec. 27, the sale for season performances will begin at the box office of the Boston Theatre, and on Wednesday the sale for single performances will be open.

Next Sunday evening, in Boston Music Hall, occurs the annual performance, by the Handel & Haydn Society, of the Messiah. The only new soloist is Miss Monteith, of New York City.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

In accordance with our custom, we are enabled to give our readers a good idea of the list of the musical selections, which will be rendered by the choirs of this town and some in Salem, in which our people are interested. Twice a year, at Christmas and at Easter, these lists are of interest. The music in the church is an important part of the worship, and at these two great festivals of the church most of our choirs make special preparations and render more and more the music and selections prescribed by the English churches. The order of worship, the responses, the glorias, and the chants of the English church are being adopted by all the branches of protestant churches, to a greater or less extent. Why not? More and more as they are understood, more and more as the old Puritan hostility to the English Church dies away, more and more is seen the beauty of the ritual of that church, and it is being adopted more and more in a modified form. A pastor of one of our leading Congregational churches, not a thousand miles from here, asked the choir to sing regularly the stated response after the commandments. But before the next Sunday he came confidentially to the leader and said, "It will not do." Why wouldn't it do? Because it was the form and ritual of the Church of England. Such a church deserves pity, rather than censure. Such sentiments belong to the old Puritan days, and not to these times when a larger liberality prevails.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We see by the Providence Journal that our former post-master, and a member of Union Post 50 G. A. R., Mr. George Randall, recently delivered a lecture before the Women's Relief Corp and William A. Streeter Post of Attleboro. The Journal says: "His address was upon 'The Work by the Women During the Late War,' which contained numerous passages of interest. He also spoke in an eloquent manner of the different associations formed by the women of the North and their work in hospitals and upon the battle fields during the war, and, among others, he referred to the services rendered by Clara Barton, of Oxford, Mass.; Helen Jillson, of Chelsea; Mary A. Livermore, of Chicago, and Mother Bickerdyke, whose names are always familiar to the Union soldiers. His remarks throughout were eloquent and were listened to with rapt attention at the conclusion of which he received hearty applause. The address was followed by a social.

LIBRARIAN-— Sealed bids will be re-received at my office until Saturday, Dec. 11th, at 12 o'clock, for the position of Librarian of the Peabody Library, for one year. Library to be kept open afternoons and evenings as directed by the Board. Rooms to be kept clean, and everything in good order. The right to reject any or all bids is reserved.

W. H. MORGAN,
Town Clerk.

The above does not refer to the Peabody Library in this town, but to the library in Peabody, Kan., and was clipped from the Gazette of that town.

It is probable that an effort will be made with the next Salem City Government to have all horse-car drivers licensed, the same as is done in Boston, to prevent a repetition of an occurrence like that of a few nights ago. In case this is done, and a like dispute shall arise, a policeman can take judgment in the matter, and give orders to whichever driver he deems to be in the wrong; then, should the driver refuse to obey the officer, his license is taken from him and he loses his position.—Danvers Mirror.

The police raided Miss Annie Fahey on Duck Island, last Saturday night, and secured a quantity of hard liquors. They visited Maurice Galway on Fulton street, but found nothing. Sunday morning the officers thinking the Washington House would be stocked up for Christmas, made a raid and captured a barrel of beer and some brandy. They also visited Charlie Cassidy, but found nothing. Tuesday morning Annie Hogan was fined $100 and costs for keeping the beer seized at the Washington House. The fine was paid in the police court this morning.

A couple of seedy looking individuals, commonly called tramps, struck this place after the storm Friday morning. One of them had begged what would make two quarts of "grub," while the other seemed to be satisfied with a solitary chicken bone. They were quite insulting in their remarks to people they met who refused to give them alms. They finally left going toward Lynn. They were a villainous looking couple and would not hesitate to do a mean act. All such should be "given the run" as soon as their rubicund visages are seen pointing this way.

Among those who received premiums at the Lynn poultry show were Webster C. Smith, West Peabody, on light Brahmas; Charles M. Poor, dark Brahmas; Leghorn Chicks, Arthur Elliott; bearded golden polish, Charles M. Poor; William E. Sheen of West Peabody received special mention on brown Leghorns, male. On best pair of game Bantams, C. M. Poor received the same and on B. R. Bantams and bearded golden polish.

Those intending, in the near future, to purchase a watch or holiday articles of jewelry of any kind, if they will take the trouble to look into Collins' store, 26 Main street, they will see a collection never before equalled in town. It there is any article wanted that is not kept here it will be supplied from the store in Salem.

The weather Thursday brought considerable snow and a great deal more of blow, and piled up the snow in different directions. Friday was mild and there were indications of a thaw. Supt. Besse, of the street department, went to work to open the gutters and when the heavy rain of Saturday came the streets shed the water like a duck's back. It was quick work.

The Boston & Maine railroad is to try a new idea in connection with the Christmas holidays. It will sell tickets between any two stations, on any and all its divisions, at the rate of 2 1-2 cents a mile, for distances of five miles and over. These tickets will be good only between Dec. 23rd and Jan. 4th.

Book Notices.

An important journalistic enterprise, which will strengthen the bonds of sympathy and knowledge as well as promote the commercial and social intercourse between the North and South, is the extended tours through the Gulf States which have been undertaken by Messrs. Harper & Brothers' representatives for the purpose of gathering descriptive and pictorial material for Harper's Magazine and Harper's Weekly. The first published result will appear in Harper's Magazine or January, in Charles Dudley Warner's article on New Orleans, abundantly illustrated by William Hamilton Gibson and other artists. The charming Crescent City, with its strange contrasts of bustling activity and languid ease—the capital of King Cotton, of creoles, and of carnivals—provides a fascinating subject for the Northern writer and artist. The article is exceedingly interesting as a fresh and accurate study of the luxuriant metropolis of the South, and will tend to dispel the common misconception of that section. Among the twenty-one illustrations are five full pages, one of them, A Creole Belle, being the frontispiece of the number. The series of Southern articles, which is to be one of the distinguishing features of Harper's for 1887, will be continued by the same author and artist with a treatment of The Acadian Land in the February number.

If the contents of the January Atlantic are a fair sample of the qualities which will distinguish this magazine for 1887, its subscribers may congratulate themselves; for the number opens with the first chapters of a delightful novel of English country life, written by Mrs. Oliphant and Thomas Bailey Aldrich in collaboration. A story by either of these authors always attract attention; a story by both is a literary event. Two papers of real value are written by Agnes Repplier and George Frederic Parsons. The first is about What Children read To-day, the second, The Saloon in Society, is upon the subject of temperance. A discussion of the political relations of Frederic the Great and Madame de Pompadour, a paper by Edith M. Thomas, and some brilliant reviews complete the prose articles. The usual brief notices and a clever Contribntor's Club complete one of the best magazine numbers that January will bring.—Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The Thanksgiving number of Good Housekeeping has a chapter on home-made Christmas gifts. It says gifts of fancy work are always acceptable to the one who has no time and possibly no taste for doing work of the kind; one who appreciates the general effect without knowing exactly how the details are arranged, and suggests many such gifts that are new and tasty, easily made, and would be acceptable to any one, All newsdealers sell it. It is published every other week at Holyoke, Mass; branch office, 239 Broadway, New York.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for January, 1887, begins the twenty-first volume of this well established family magazine. Opening the number, we are at once greeted with a very beautiful colored frontispiece entitled For the Pastor, which is a real art gem. The leading artiele is devoted to The Salvation Army, and among its illustrations is a fine portrait of "General" Booth. The long announced new serial story, His Banner Over Me, by F. A. Matthews, begins also in this number. It opens interestingly, and is written in a charmingly graceful style. There is also a finely illustrated article on Moscow, its Churches and People, and the younger members of the family will enjoy the new story begun for them, Not Found Out. The monthly visits of this magazine are a continued pleasure.

The sales of The Century Magazine have gone up over 30,000 copies in six weeks, since beginning the Life of Lincoln. A second edition of December will be issued on the 15th. A veteran New York publisher predicts that the permanent edition of the magazine will go beyond 300,000 before the completion of the Lincoln History. The January installment, which is said by the editors to be of most surpassing interest, occupies thirty pages of the magazine, and treats of Mr. Lincoln's settlement in Springfield; his practice of law in that city, the Harrison campaign; Lincoln's marriage; his friendship with the Speeds of Kentucky; the Shields duel; and the campaign of 1884. Pictures are given of the house where Lincoln was married, also the house where he lived after his marriage, etc., etc.

The January number of Arthur's Home Magazine is at hand, with an unusually attractive table of contents and charming illustrations. The enlarged form of the Magazine is a great improvement upon its old style, and places the Home prominently before the public as one of the best of the lower-cost monthly magazines. The price is but two dollars a year, with reductions and premiums for clubs. Sample copies, ten cents each. T. S. Arthur & Son, Philadelphia, are the publishers.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."
EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

Ministering.

BY LILLIAN GREY.

What though your feet are often overweary,
On ceaseless errands sent;
And tired shoulders ache and ache so sorely
'Neath heavy burdens bent?
Be patient, lest the ones whom you are serving
Be soon beyond your care;
Lest little wayward feet that you are guiding Slip past you unaware.

Ah, then, no joy would seem so dear and blessed
As spending months and years
In ceaseless service for the vanished darlings
So vainly mourned with tears.
But while you have your dear ones still around you,
Do not regret your care;
Far easier aching feet and arms and shoulders,
Than aching hearts to bear.

And still beyond your household duties reaching
Stretch forth a helping hand;
So many stand in need of loving comfort
All over this wide land;
Perchance some soul you aid to-day, tomorrow
May with the angels sing:
Some one may go straight from your earthly table
To banquet with the King.

THE PROTEST which has been made by the Hebrews in Boston against the enforcement of the Sunday laws regarding them seems to have had little weight with the authorities. We think this is wise. This Sunday business by the Jews has been carried altogether too far, and the point is being made that the exceptions made in their favor have reference to manual labor rather than keeping open shop on the Lord's day. The Hebrews who are in the wholesale business transact their mercantile affairs just as readily on Saturday as the Christian merchants, and this applies to the merchants in other cities as well. They don't keep their warehouses closed on Saturday or open on the Lord's day. It is only the retailers, the proprietors of cigar stores and second hand clothing shops, who make all this fuss about Sunday closing. We can't for the life of us see why they should have especial privileges on that day. This country has no desire to interfere with their religion, or their Saturday worship. The authorities only insist that in keeping open shops they shall conform to the laws of the land.

AN EMPHATIC VOW.—At the recent convention of the Knights of Labor at Richmond, a striking scene took place during the installation of officers. Master Workman Powderly, after the regular form was completed, raising his right hand and stretching his arm its full length toward heaven, and calling upon all the other officers to do so, solemnly uttered the most emphatic vow, they repeated the words after him, not to use intoxicating liquors during his term of office. This expression of purpose was received with strong approval by the Assembly. Although the temperance question was not raised during the canvass, yet, when the men were elected, it came out that they were all total abstinence men.—Ex.

The annual meeting of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad company was held at the office, No. 350 Atlantic avenue, at 2 P. M., Thursday, President Edwin Walden in the chair. Brief remarks were made by the President in reference to the increased prosperity of the road during the past year. The reports of the Treasurer and Auditor were accepted. The following were chosen Auditors for the ensuing year: David H. Sweetser, James P. Martin, Thomas S. Lockwood. The following Board of Directors was re-elected: Edwin Walden, Edward Tyler, David H. Sweetser, Matthew Bolles, Amos F. Breed, L. S. Judd, Isaac P. T. Edmands Joseph W. Smith, Jessie Tirrell.

The startling announcement is made that the earth is gradually losing its momentum of revolution upon its axis. The rate of this decrease is estimated at one second per year. At this rate it may be calculated that the motion will cease in 6,000,000,000 years. In the meantime, says an exchange, we can go on enjoying our annual elections, earthquakes, neighborhood quarrels and other little things that make life enjoyable.

A lively little fire was discovered in the house occupied by Oscar Fellows, the house which figured so largely in the riots of August 7th, on Bowditch Court, Thursday forenoon, about 11.30 o'clock. Mrs. Fellows had been out of the house for a short while and on her return she smelled smoke, and upon investigating found a brisk fire burning in the window casing of one of the bed rooms. The flames were so hot that the glass in the window was crackling and the fire had worked its way through the casing to the blinds outside. Mrs. Fellows wet a rug and with this new style of fire extinguisher put out the fire after a struggle in which her hands and arms were burned and cut. A young man came in and assisted her in cutting away the casing. It is thought that the fire caught from the chimney or was set by the children.

Box 28 was rung in by Engineer John L. Pettey of the pumping station, at 9.40 o'clock Friday forenoon, for what was thought to be a lively fire in the house of Thomas Conway on Sherman street. The department turned out promptly but on arriving at the box they were informed that the fire, which consisted of a wood box full of rubbish behind the kitchen stove, had been put out, out of doors in fact. Steamer 1, in starting out of the engine house, was damaged by the rear wheels sliding against the horse car track, which was about five inches lower than the level of the street, nearly tipping the engine over, throwing fireman Brophy into the snow but not injuring him. The axle was badly sprung, one spoke and a section of the felly of one wheel smashed out. The engine kept on in answer to the alarm and on the return to the house was sent to Dole & Osgood's and the injuries repaired. It is a great wonder that the engine did not go wholly over as it is a dangerous place to turn, especially after a heavy snow. The railroad company should pay for the damage.

A party of about thirty couples was present at the first assembly given by Hose 1, in Thomas' new hall, last Thursday evening. It was a bad night to get out. The second party will be held Thursday evening, Dec. 30, in the same hall.

The fire alarm whistle has been fixed by E. G. Kelley, by putting in a system of valves by which the water will be taken from the feed pipe. The outside pipe will be covered with asbestos packing covered with tin. z

The A. L. of H. will elect officers to-night.

SOUTH PEABODY

Leander Joy, who is building a house in South Peabody, carried a bundle of shingles up a ladder to the roof, Monday afternoon, and was instantly siezed with a sharp pain in his back the instant he dropped the load, as one experiences when they "drop a stitch." He reached the ground with difficulty, and was carried into Mr. Reed's store and made as comfortable as possible. A lounge was placed in a wagon and Mr. Joy carried to his home in Lynnfield, where he was attended by Dr. Pike.

The carpenters have the ice house of Mr. H. N. Batchelder, at Spring pond, nearly raised and boarded in.

Hose 5 held a very successful dance at their hall, last Friday evening.

The family of Mr. F. L. Newhall have been quite sick the past two weeks with diptheria.

The ice on Spring pond is about seven inches thick, Mr. J. B. Newhall cutting the first of the season last Saturday.

The Band of Hope gave a very interesting entertainment at the church vestry, last Wednesday night, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, and the Plummer sisters of Lynn.

Christmas trees with the usual exercises will be held at the church vestry Friday evening.

Rev. J. W. Colwell and family will spend Christmas at the home of his mother in Providence, R. I.

The Lynn and Boston Railroad carried an unusually large number of passengers last Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Copeland, mother of I. E. Copeland of Lynnfield, is very low, and small hopes are entertained for her recovery.

A service was held at the Rockville church last Sunday, in commemoration of the life, labor and character of the late Rev. Geo. Baker Jewett, D. D., who ministered here during two terms of services covering five years and four months. The services were doubly interesting. Prof. Jewett was held in the hightest esteem by the church and people.

Some one, who evidently was posted as to the contents, stole the poor box at St. John's Catholic church, Monday afternoon, by wrenching it from the wall. It was found afterwards in the coal bin, with the top broken in and near it was a five dollar bill which the thief probably dropped in his haste. It is supposed there was about $15 in the box. A suspicious character, who had been hanging around, is suspected.

CHRISTMAS CHIT-CHAT.

Remember the poor!

Christmas next Saturday!

Make the children happy!

Santa Claus may have to come on roller skates.

As the children grow older they take less stockin Santa Claus.

As the Christmas tree is bent, so is the youthful heart made glad.

Attend church Sunday and hear Christmas preaching and singing.

Blessed are they that expect nothing, as disappointment will prove a blessing.

If you are going to "turn over a new leaf," now is the time to think about it.

Just at this time the little one dotes on dolls and the larger ones on dollars.

Our advertisers say that they had a royal good trade, last week and this.

A cheap Christmas present—offering your heart to your girl.

It is more blessed to give than to receive. But both are pleasant.

Did you buy a silver collar for your sweetheart's pet poodle?

The inmates in our alms house will be remembered Christmas,

The banks, stores and post offices will be closed Christmas.

Those who bought their holiday goods early, had the whole stock to select from.

Nimble fingers are now busy in fabricating Christmas presents for the loved ones.

Be merry on Christmas, but do not let merriment make you forget that it is a Christmas holiday.

Christmas motto:—"He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord."

The editors' gifts for Christmas will come only through the imagination.

No sleighing for Christmas, and sadness of heart in consequence, among livery men.

It is absurd to give your wife a rocking chair, for a Christmas present, thinking she will thus keep still.

The weather was decidedly against those who wanted to shop, Saturday, but the rush has been greater since.

A new style of Christmas slipper is to slipper ten dollar note into the hand of a deserving person whom you know.

The W. C. T. U. will do a noble work this year, in disbursing flowers and useful articles to the sick and poor.

The Christmas slipper is now getting soled and the young lady who worked it is wondering whether it will be too large or small.

Those benevolent looking people, observed on our streets this week, with a long memorandum in their hands, are the Christmas tree committee, who will receive their reward by the happy smiles of those who are remembered.

Christmas was formerly celebrated on the 6th of January, now the feast of the Epiphany, a time which is still adhered to in the Greek church.

No matter how small the present, if it is only a sealskin sacque for your wife, give something away to honor the day.

We wish all our enemies a Merry Christmas, that is if their consciences are as free to enjoy it as ours are. Charity endureth all things.

While the smoking viands make your dining room redolent with the rich aroma of your holiday dinner, remember the Lord says "The poor ye have with ye always."

Joyful faces, eager, sparkling eyes and pattering feet will crowd about the mantel, on Christmas morn. May the great saint of the season bring them no disappointment.

Many a boy will look upon a pair of skates with more happiness, than if Jumbo were to walk out of his stocking in the corner, and those skates you will find at Morrison & Trask's, on Walnut street.

The head of the family will awake Christmas morning, rush for his stocking, and find in it a tall hat, silver headed cane, and pug dog penwiper, while his wife and daughter will look supremely happy.

The holy days are as follows: Feast of the Nativity, Dec. 25; feast of St. Stephen, Dec. 26; feast of St. John the Evangelist, Dec. 27; feast of the Holy Innocents, Dec. 28; feast of the Circumcision. Jan 1; feast of Epiphany, Jan. 6.

Rev. George Alcott Phinney, of the Methodist church, preached a Christmas sermon last Sunday, taking his text from Psalms 30 and a part of the fifth verse:—"Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." He pictured in eloquent words, the light and dark shades of life, and told how all could enjoy the great light of a Christian life.

The Flower Mission Department of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, solicit donations of flowers, fruit, jellies, groceries, provisions and clothing, which will be faithfully distributed to the sick and poor of the town. All wishing to give a Christmas offering in this way, please leave donations at No. 5 Allen's block on Friday, from nine o'clock until four.

Christmas will be observed at our churches about as usual, and in a manner similar to that of former years. At the Methodist church there will be a Christmas tree, Friday evening, and an entertainment for the children and older ones. At the Universalist church there will be no Christmas entertainment this year, but an appropriate Sunday School concert will be given Sunday evening. At St. John's Catholic church, Christmas day, there will be three masses, at 6, 8 and 10 o'clock. Children's mass at 8 o'clock, A. M., and vespers at 3 P. M. At the Unitarian church there will be a Christmas tree, Friday evening, with an operetta for the little ones entitled "The Old Woman and the Shoe"; there will be a Sunday-school concert Sunday evening. At the South church, Friday evening, there will be a Christmas tree and a short entertainment for the children; Sunday evening there will be a Christmas Sunday-school concert. At the Baptist church there will be no Christmas tree this year, but there will be a Sunday School concert Sunday evening. At the Episcopal church, there will be a service Christmas morning, at 10 o'clock. The Christmas tree will be held on the following Wednesday.

Commissioner John C. Black, of the Pension Office, Washington, D. C., has issued an order to the different Grand Army Posts throughout the State, which is substantially as follows: "When the record of surviving soldiers and sailors, late of the Union Army and Navy, was first established in the Pension Office, it was decided to give as full and complete a record of Union ex-prisoners of war as could be obtained. Owing, however, to the fact that the number of ex-prisoners who belong to the prisoner of war associations is comparatively small, the attempt thus far has not been entirely successful. It is now deemed advisable to call upon each Post of the G. A. R. to forward a separate and complete list of its members and others, giving post-office address, who were at any time prisoners of the war."

The night watch secured a quantity of salt that had been put on the Naumkeag tracks in defiance of the Selectmen's orders. As we understand the case it is almost impossible to get along without the use of salt on the rails and to the use of a limited amount there is no objection. The trouble comes of spreading it on in large quantities and then following it up with the snow spreader, which mixes the salt with the snow six or eight feet from the track each side, making it mealy and spoiling it for sleighing. The town counsel has the matter under advisement.

The Franklin Sentinel was hardly recognized when it reached us last week. It is now really handsome. Don't blush!

The Lynn Union, after referring to the article in the Boston Transcript on Labor, by H. M. Newhall, of Lynn, makes some very sensible and pertinent suggestions which would conduce to the better prosperity of that city. Labor troubles have proved a serious obstacle to the prosperity of Lynn, as well as elsewhere. In fact, that city has never been wholly free from agitation. Labor organizations flourish in that city—and have done so for years—and the differences there, as in some other places, are possibly more imaginary than real; that is, in the words of the Union, the two parties may not differ as much as is apparent on the outside. We quote from the Union: "Each side has learned the power of the other, both have become sufficiently aware of the boomerang nature of strikes, boycotts and lockouts, and both sides have, in a general way, been made wise through the bitter lesson of experience. In the meantime the material interests of our city have suffered temporarily through the agitation of the labor question, and through the injudicious acts of some of the labor leaders. The practice of boycotting proved an almost fatal blunder to the Knights of Labor, and all the cool-headed leaders of the organization admit now that it was a most serious mistake. On the other hand, some of the manufacturers have, in many instances, been unjust and pig-headed, and have retarded the advent of the era of good feeling by stubbornly failing to adapt themselves to the changed condition of the times. It is wrong that the city should suffer any longer because a few men on both sides of the controversy fail to keep step with the march of industrial progress. Both parties should approach each other in a yielding, conciliatory spirit, and they will be surprised to wake up some morning and find that they have both believed alike on the labor question all along and have been fighting over little immaterial differences that might be easily settled by arbitration. Mutual concession is the spirit that should now be cultivated. If this era of good feeling can be inaugurated Lynn will start upon a period of prosperity such as have never been known in her previous history.

Skating rinks are inaugurating the season in several places, and the prospects are good for a renewal of the craze.

Wiggins? Wiggins? Let's see. We have an indistinct recollection of such a man. Swallowed by an earthquake, wasn't he?

A correspondent enquires, "Is it wrong to cheat a lawyer?" Possibly not, but it is a pretty big job to undertake.

Holten Lodge I. O. O. F. worked the first and second degree last evening and a large number were present. Sunday they will attend the Methodist Church in a body by invitation of the pastor. They will meet at the Lodge room at 1.30 o'clock. A cordial invitation to all out-of-town brothers who may be here is extended

Some of the drivers of delivery wagons and other vehicles are very reckless and it is a wonder they do not run down and kill somebody every day. This is very noticeable as people are leaving the street cars, and are often compelled to rush back to the car, to save being run down by a wagon driven at full speed.

Chicago society girls used to go to dances in their bare feet. This was because side leather was not large enough to cover their feet.

Turn a deaf ear to the gossip who approaches you with a tale concerning her or his neighbor. The professional gossip is a dangerous citizen.

JUST A WORD.—We are aware of what little faith the public put in the so called mark down sales that seldom reach the expectations that would be warranted from the tone and the way the advertisements read.

We have endeavored since we started in business to make our advertisements ones that the public could rely on and believe, as we never advertise what we cannot back up. Thanking the public for their very liberal patronage, we would call your attention to the

H. H. Warner, the Rochester (N. Y.), patent medicine man claims to have given his employes $250,000 worth of stock in his company as a Christmas present. We have an old claim against this same Warner for advertising which we will sell at a discount, and give to July 1, 1887 to consider it.

Charles R. Bancroft, a young traveling man, who was in town Monday, representing a collar and cuff firm of Albany, N. Y., related his experience as a passenger on the steamer, J. M. White, which was recently burned on the Mississippi river. He lost all his samples, but was glad to escape with his life.

Rev. L. L. Wood, formerly of the Baptist church in this town, is doing a very successful missionary work in Salt Lake City, Utah. His family, consisting of Mrs. Wood and the boys, are not with him, but are located on his ranch at Corvallis, Mont. This ranch is a settler's claim and is much enjoyed by Mrs. Wood.

Poet's Corner.

'Life's Verses."

The second series of "Life's Verses" is a collection of jeu d'esprit contributed by Robert Grant, James Jeffrey Roche, Allen Kelley J. E. Mitchell, Miss M E Wardwell and other well-known bright people One of the best things in the collection is Mr. Roche's "A title Clear," where in a dream he had reached the heavenly gates, and among the throng noted a stranger, who handed in his card to St. Peter:

I saw St, Peter smile and bow,
  Urbane and deferential;
The stranger's greeting was somehow
  A shade more consequential.

"Angel!" the saintly tyler cried,
  A page straightway appearing.
(I don't remember that I tried To wholly keep from hearing.)

I caught the words "Orchestra chair—
  Be sure you get the right one—
See the harp-tuner; and take care
  The halo is a bright one.

"Look lively, too" St. Peter said,
  "The gentleman is waiting."
"Please register,"—he bent his head,
  The great book indicating.

The stranger wrote. I read the scrawl
  The sacred page engrossed on;
The name was nought, the place was all,—
  "J. Winthrop Wiggins, Boston."

Nobody Knows But Mother.

BY H. C. DODGE.

Nobody knows of the work it makes
  To keep the home together;
Nobody knows of the steps it takes,
  Nobody knows—but mother.

Nobody listens to childish woes
  Which kisses only smother;
Nobody's pained by naughty blows,
  Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the sleepless care
  Bestowed on baby brother;
Nobody knows of the tender pray'r,
  Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the lessons taught
  Of loving one another;
Nobody knows of the patience sought,
  Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the anxious fears
  Lest darlings may not weather
The storm of life in after years.
  Nobody knows—but mother.

Nobody kneels at the throne above
  To thank the Heavenly Father,
For that sweetest gift—a mother's love;
  Nobody can—but mother.

The Path to the Village.

BY CHARLES UMRY.

Up the path with daisies fringed,
Cheeks with primrose glances tinged,
Eyes of blue and step so light,
Comes the milkmaid dressed in white;
Fair the sunlit village gleams,
Fair her form as morning beams,
"Love and wealth lie in the town,"
Sings the maid in milking gown.

Down the hill with shadows crossed,
Snow white hair by light wind tossed,
Staff in hand, with pilgrim pack,
Comes the traveler wandering back;
Village lights shine through the gloom,
Smiles of joy his tears illume,
"Home and friends are in the town,"
Singeth he in dusty gown.

Up the path and down the hill,
All the world goes traveling still,
Milkmaid, priest and warrior bold,
Beggar, queen and pilgrim old;
Love and wealth and friends and home
Bid the feet no longer roam,
At the stile leave tear and frown,
Perfect rest lies in the town.

Catarrh is a very prevalent and exceedingly disagreaeble disease, liable, if neglected, to develop into serious consumption. Being a constitutional disease, it requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, effecting a radical and permanent cure of catarrh in even its most severe forms. Made only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Stonington line between Boston and New York is most admirably equipped and gives satisfaction in every way. The trip by this line is enjoyable at all seasons of the year, for the service is fitted out with every comfort and luxury. Particulars may be learned from the attractive little book circular just issued by the Stonington line. It contains maps and illustrations, rates and time table, menu and some descriptive information. They have also issued a pleasing dial calendar for 1887, bearing the hours at which trains leave New York and Boston by the all rail shore line via Providence, New London and New Haven. J. W. Richardson is the agent and can be addressed at 214 Washington street, Boston.

"Give Ely's Cream Balm a trial. This justly celebrated remedy for the cure of catarrh, hay fever, cold in the head, &c., can be obtained of any reputable druggist, and may be relied upon as a safe and pleasant remedy for the above complaints and will give immediate relief. It is not a liquid, snuff or powder, has no offensive odor, and can be used at any time with good results, as thousands can testify, among them some of the attaches of this office."—Spirit of the Times, May 29, 1886.

THE CHRISTMAS JUBILEE.

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGES' SERMON AT THE TABERNACLE.

An Eloquent Discourse on the Nativity of Christ—The Offerings of the Three Shepherds Were Significant of Jesus' Inheritance.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 26.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., preached in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this evening on the subject: "The Christian Jubilee." A special programme of music was rendered by the artists of the church, and the congregational singing was inspiriting. The opening hymn begins:

> Joy to the world! the king is come,
> Let earth receive her king.

Dr. Talmage's text was St. Matthew ii, 9: "When they had heard the king they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was." The preacher said:

At this season all Christendom celebrates the birth of Christ. Step down out of your comfortable surroundings into the chill December night of Bethlehem. Two plain people are hoteled in a village barn after a walk of eighty miles, too long a trudge for one in poor health. No lords of state awaiting in antechamber, as when other kings are born. No messengers mounted at the doorway ready to herald the event from city to city. No medical skill in attendance. No satin lined cradle to receive its infantile guest. But a monarch born in the hostelry called the House of Chimham, the night, with diamoned finger, pointing down to the place; the door of heaven set wide open to look out; from orchestral batons of light, dripping the oratorios of the Messiah: on lowest doorstep of heaven the minstrels discoursing of glory and good will.

Soon after the white bearded astrologists kneel, and from leather pouch chink the shekels, and from open sacks exhale the frankincense and rustle out the bundles of myrrh. The loosened star; the escaped doxology of celestials; the chill December night aflush with May morn; our world a lost star, and another star rushing down the sky that night to beckon the wanderer home again, shall yet make all nations keep Christmas.

Are there no new lessons from the story not yet hackneyed by oft repeatal? Oh, yes! Now, in the first place, it was a sidereal appearance that led the way. So, the star which they saw in the east went before them. Why not a black cloud in the shape of a hand or a finger pointing down to the sacred birthplace? A cloud means trouble, and the world had had trouble enough. Why not a shaft of lightning quivering and flashing and striking down to the sacred birthplace? Lightning means destruction, a shattering and consuming power, and the world wanted no more destruction.

But it was a star, and that means joy, that means hope, that means good cheer, that means ascendancy. A star! That means creative power, for did not the morning stars sing together when the portfolio of the worlds was opened? A star! That means defense, for did not the stars fight in their course against Sisera, and for the Lord's people? A star! That means brilliant continuance, for are not the righteous to shine as the stars forever and ever? A star! That means the opening of eternal joy. The day star in the heart. The morning star of the Redeemer.

The unusual appearances that night have been a strange conjunction of worlds. As the transit of Venus was foretold many years ago by astronomers, and astronomers can tell what will be the conjunction of worlds a thousand years from now, so they can calculate backwards, and even infidel astronomers have been compelled to testify that about the year 1 there was a very unusual appearance in the heavens. The Chinese record, of course entirely independent of the word of God, gives as a matter of history that about the year 1 there was a strange and unaccountable appearance in the heavens. But it may have been a meteor such as you and I have seen flash in the horizon. Only a few years ago I saw in the western sky a star shoot and fall with such brilliancy and precision that if I had been on a hill as high as that of Bethlehem on which the shepherds stood, I could have marked within a short distance the place of the alighting. The University of Iowa and the British museum have specimens of meteoric stones picked up in the fields, fragments flung off from other worlds, leaving a fiery trail on the sky. So that it is not to me at all improbable, the stellar or the meteoric appearance on that night of which we speak. I only care to know that it was bright, that it was silvery, that it flashed, and swayed, and swung, and halted with joy celestial, as though Christ, in haste to save our world, had rushed down without his coronet, and the angels of God had hurled it after Him! Not a black cloud of threat, but a bright star of hope is our glorious Christianity. One glimpse of that stellar appearance kindled up the soul of the sick and the dying college student, until the words flashed from his pale fingers and the star seemed to pour its light from his white lips, as Kirke White wrote these immortal words:

> When marshaled on the nightly plain,
>   The glittering hosts bestud the sky,
> One star alone of all the train
>   Can fix the sinner's wandering eye.
> Hark! hark! to God the chorus breaks,
>   From every host, from every gem,
> But one alone the Saviour speaks,
>   It is the Star of Bethlehem.
> Once on the raging seas I rode,
>   The storm was loud, the night was dark,
> And rudely blew the wind
>   That tossed my foundering bark;
> Deep horror then my vitals froze,
>   Deathstruck, I ceased the tide to stem;
> When suddenly a star arose,
>   It was the Star of Bethlehem.

Notice also in this scene that other worlds seemed to honor our lord and master. Bright star of the night, wheel on in thine orbit! "No," said the star, "I must come nearer, and I must tend, and I must watch and see what you do with my Jesus." Another world that night joined our world in worship. That star made a bow of obeisance. I sometimes hear people talk of Christ's dominion as though it were to be merely the few thousand miles of the world's circumference; but I believe the millions and the billions and the quadrillions of worlds are inhabited—if not by such creatures as we are, still such creatures as God designed to make, and that all these worlds are a part of Christ's dominion. Isaac Newton, and Kepler and Herschel only went on Columbus' voyage to find these continents of our king's domain. I think all worlds were loyal but this. The great organ of the universe, its pedals and its pipes and its keys, are all one great harmony, save one injured pedal, save one broken stop—the vox humana of the human race, the disloyal world.

Now you know that however grand the instrument may be, if there be one key out of order it spoils the harmony. And Christ must mend this key. He must restore this key. He must restore this broken stop. You know with what bleeding hand, and with what pierced side, and with what crushed foot, He did the work. But the world shall be attuned, and all worlds will be yet accordant. Isle of Wight, larger in comparison with the British empire than our island of a world as compared with Christ's vast domain. If not, why that celestial escort? If not, why that sentinel with blazing badge above the caravansary? If not, why that midnight watchman in the balcony of heaven? Astronomy surrendered that night to Christ. This planet for Christ. The solar system for Christ. Worlds ablaze and worlds burned out—all worlds for Christ.

Intensest microscope cannot see the one side of that domain. Further reaching telescope cannot find the other side of that domain. But I will tell you how the universe is bounded. It is bounded on the north and south and east and west by God, and that God is Christ, and that Christ is God, and that God is ours. O, does it not enlarge our ideas of a Saviour's dominion when I tell you that all the worlds are only sparks struck from His anvil, that all the worlds are only fleecy flocks following the one shepherd, that all the islands of light in immensity are one great archipelago belonging to our King?

But this scene also impresses me with the fact that the wise men of the east came to Christ. They were not fools, they were not imbeciles. The record distinctly says that the wise men came to Christ. We say they were the magi, or they were the alchemists, or they were the astrologists, and we say it with depreciating accentuation. Why, they were the most splendid and magnificent men of the century. They were the naturalists and the scientists. They knew all that was known. You must remember that astrology was the mother of astronomy, and that alchemy was the mother of chemistry, and because children are brighter than the mother you do not despise the mother.

It was the lifelong business of these astrologers to study the stars. Twenty-two hundred and fifty years before Christ was born the wise men knew the procession of the equinoxes, and they had calculated the orbit and the return of the comets. Professor Smith declares that he thinks they knew the distance of the earth from the sun. We find in the Book of Job that the men of olden time did not suppose the world was flat, as some have said, but that he knew, and the men of his time knew, the world was globular. The Pyramids were built for astrological and astronomical study.

Then the alchemists spent their lives in the study of metals, and gases, and liquids, and solids, and in filling the world's library with their wonderful discoveries. They were vastly wise men who came to the east. They understood embalment as our most scientific men cannot understand it. After the world has gone on studying hundreds of years, it may come up to the point where the ancients began to forget. I believe the lost arts are as mighty as the living arts.

They were wise men that came from the east, and tradition says the three wisest came—Caspar, a young man; Balthazar, a man in midlife, and Melchior, an octogenarian. The three wisest men of all the century. They came to the manger. So it has always been—the wisest men come to Christ, the brainiest men come to the manger. Who was the greatest metaphysician this country has ever produced? Jonathan Edwards, the Christian. Who was the greatest astronomer of the world? Herschel, the Christian. Who was the greatest poet ever produced? John Milton, the Christian. Who was the wisest writer on law? Blackstone, the Christian. Why is it that every college and university in the land has a chapel? They must have a place for the wise men to worship.

Come now, let us understand in ounces and by inches this whole matter. In post mortem examination the brains of distinguished men have been examined, and I will find the largest, the heaviest, the mightiest brain ever produced in America, and I will ask what that brain thought of Christ. There it is, the brain weighing sixty-three ounces, the largest brain ever produced in America. Now, let me find what that brain thought of Christ. In the dying moment, that man said: "Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief. Whatever else I do, Almighty God, receive me to Thyself for Christ's sake. This night I shall be in life, and joy, and blessedness." So Daniel Webster came to the manger. The wise men of the east followed by the wise men of the west.

Know also in this scene that it was a winter month that God chose for His son's nativity. Had it been the month of May—that is the season of blossoms. Had it been in the month of June—that is the month of roses. Had it been in the month of July—that is the season of great harvests. Had it been in the month of September—that is the season of ripe orchards. Had it been in the month of October—that is the season of upholstered forests. But he was born in the month of December, when there are no flowers blooming out of doors, and when all the harvests that have not been gathered up have perished, and when there are no fruits ripening on the hill, and when the leaves are drifted over the bare earth. It was in closing December that He was born, to show this is a Christ for people in sharp blast, for people under clouded sky, for people with frosted hopes, for people with thermometer below zero, for people snowed under. A December Christ! That is the reason He is so often found among the destitute. You can find him on any night coming off the moors. You can see Him any night coming through the dark lanes of the city. You can see Him putting His hand under the fainting head in the pauper's cabin. He remembers how the the wind whistled around the caravansary in Bethlehem that December night, and he is in sympathy with all those who in their poverty hear the shutters clatter on a cold night.

It was this December Christ that Washington and his army worshiped at Valley Forge, when without blankets they lay down in the December snow. It was this Christ that the Pilgrim Fathers appealed to when the Mayflower wharfed at Plymouth Rock, and in the years that went by the graves digged were more in number than the houses built. Oh, I tell you, we want a December Christ, not a Christ for fair weather, but a Christ for dark days clouded with sickness, and chilling with disappointment, and suffocating with bereavement, and terrific with wide open graves! Not a Springtime Christ, not a Summer Christ, not an Autumn Christ, but a Winter Christ.

Oh, this suffering and struggling world needs to be hushed and soothed and rocked, lullabied in the arms of sympathetic omnipotence! No mother ever with more tenderness put her foot on the rocker of a sick child, than Christ comes down to us, to this invalid world, and He rocks it into placidity and quietness as He says: "My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." Oh, you broken hearted! oh, you persecuted and tried souls! oh, you burden bearers, this day I declare unto you a December Christ!

Notice also a fact which no one seems to notice, that this Christ was born among the sheep and the cattle and the horses and the camels, in order that He might be an alleviating influence to the whole animal creation. It means mercy for overdriven, underfed, poorly sheltered, galled and maltreated animal creation.

Hath the Christ who compared Himself to a dove no care for the cruelties of the pigeon shooting? Hath the Christ who compared Himself to a lamb no care for the sheep that are tied and contorted, and with neck over the sharp edge of the butcher's cart; or the cattle train in hot weather from Omaha to New York, with no water—1,500 miles of agony? Hath the Christ whose tax was paid by a fish, the coin taken from its mouth, no care for the tossing fins in the fish market? Hath the Christ who strung with His own hand the nerves of the dog and the cat, no indignation for the horrors of vivisection? Hath the Christ who said "Go to the ant," no watchfulness for the transfixed insects? Hath the Christ who said "Behold the fowls of the air," Himself never beheld the outrages heaped upon the brute creation, that cannot articulate its grief? This Christ came not only to lift the human race out of its trouble, but to lift out of pang and hardship the animal creation.

In the glorious millenial time the child shall lead the lion and play with the cockatrice only because the brute and reptile shall have no more wrongs to avenge. To alleviate the condition of the brute creation Christ was born in the cattle pen. The first bleat of the lamb of God was heard amid the tired flocks of the Bethlehem shepherds. The white horse of eternal victory stabled in a barn.

But notice also in this account the three Christmas presents that are brought to the manger. Gold, frankincense and myrrh. Gold to Christ. That means all the affluence of the world surrendered to him. For lack of money no more asylums limping on their way like the cripples whom they helped, feeling their slow way like the blind people whom they sheltered. Millions of dollars for Christ where there are now thousands for Christ. Railroads owned by Christian stockholders, and governed by Christian directors, and carrying passengers and freight at Christian prices. George Peabodys and Abbot Lawrences and James Lenoxes no rarity. Bank of England, Bourse of France, United States treasury, all the moneyed institutions of the world for Christ. The gold for Christ.

Gold not merely paid the way for Joseph and Mary and the divine fugitive into Egypt, but it was typical of the fact that Christ's way shall be paid all around the world. The gold for Christ, the silver for Christ, the jewels for Christ. The bright, round, beautiful jewel of a world set like a solitaire on the bosom of Christ.

But I notice that these wise men also shook out from their sacks the myrrh. The cattle came and they snuffed at it. They did not eat it, because it was bitter. The pungent gum resin of Abyssinia called myrrh brought to the feet of Christ. That means bitterness. Bitter betrayal, bitter persecution, bitter days of suffering, bitter nights of woe. Myrrh. That is what they put into His cup when He was dying. Myrrh. That is what they put under his head in the wilderness. Myrrh. That is what they strewed His path with all the way from the cattle pen in Bethlehem to the mausoleum at Joseph's country seat. Myrrh. Yea, says the Psalmist, "all thy garments smell of myrrh." That is what the wise men wrapped in the swaddling clothes of the babe. That is what the Marys twisted in the shroud of a crucified Christ. The myrrh. Oh, the height, the depth, the length, the breadth of a Saviour's sorrow! Myrrh. Well might the wise men shake out the myrrh.

But I notice, also, from another sack they shake out the frankincense. Clear up to the rafters of the barn the air is filled with the perfume, and the hostlers and the camel drivers in the further part of the building inhale it, and it floats out in the air until passers by wonder who in that rough place could have by accident dropped a box of alabaster.

Frankincense. That is what they burned in the censer in the ancient temple. Frankincense. That means worship. Frankincense. That is to fill all the homes, and all the churches, and all the capitals, and all the nations, from cellar to stalactited cave clear up to the silvery rafters of the starlit dome. Frankincense. That is what we shake out from our hearts to-day, so that the nostrils of Christ, once crimsoned with the hemorrhage of the cross, shall be flooded with the perfume of a world's adoration. Frankincense. Frankincense in song, and sermon, and handshaking, and decoration. Praise Him, mountains and hills, valleys and seas, and skies, and earth and heaven—cyclone in your trumpets, northern lights with your flaming ensign, morning with your castles of cloud, and evening with your billowing clouds of sunset!

Do you know how they used to hold the censer in the olden time? Here is a metal pan and the handle by which it was held. In the inside of this pan were put living coals. On the top of them a perforated cover. In a square box the frankincense was brought to the temple. This frankincense was taken out and sprinkled over the living coals, and then the perforated cover was put on, and when they were all ready for worship, then the cover was lifted from this censer and from all the other censers, and the perfumed smoke arose until it hung amid all the folds and dropped amid all the alters, and then rose in great columns of praise outside or above the temple, rising clear upward to the throne of God.

So we have two censers to-day of Christmas frankincense. Here is the one censer of earthly frankincense. On that we put our thanks for the mercies of the past year, the mercies of all our past lives, individual mercies, family mercies, social mercies, national mercies, and our hearts burning with gratitude send aloft the incense of praise toward the throne of Christ. Bring on more incense, and higher and higher let the columns of praise ascend. Let them wreathe all these pillars, and hover amid all these arches, and then soar to the throne.

But here is the other censer, of heavenly thanksgiving and worship. Let them bring all their frankincense—the cherubim bring theirs and the seraphim theirs, and the one hundred and forty and four thousand theirs, and all the eternities theirs, and let them smoke with perfume on this heavenly censer until the cloud canopies the throne of God. Then I take these two censers—the censer of earthly frankincense, and the censer of heavenly frankincense—and I swing them before the throne, and then I clash them together in one great Alleluia unto Him to whom the wise men of the east brought the gold, and the myrrh, and the frankincense, when "the star which they saw in the east went before them."

Cheap Buttons for Everybody.

A short time ago De Francesco, a Neapolitan smallware dealer, won the first prize in a lottery. In the exuberance of his delight the lucky winner announced that he would place the whole of his stock of buttons at the disposal of his fellow townsmen, so that all might come and help themselves. Accordingly, next day his premises were invaded by a boisterous crowd, blows were freely dealt, there were plenty of black eyes and broken heads, and it became necessary to call in the police to prevent further mischief. But after the lapse of five minutes there was not a single button left in the warehouse.—Corriere del Mattino.

A Mountain in Miniature.

In the celebrated Aspen mining case, now being tried in Denver, there is used a model of Aspen mountain, made of terra cotta. Its base is about eight feet square, and its height three feet. It represents that part of the mountain on which the controverted properties are located, and was made according to careful measurements, the scale being fifty feet to the inch. Valejo and Spar gulch were represented, and all the surface contour of that portion of the mountain.—New York Sun.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

New York has spent $700,000 on its canals this year.

France and Mexico have concluded a treaty of commerce.

The power for the electrical railroad at Toronto costs only $2 a day.

The Spanish cortes has authorized an outlay of $45,000,000 for new war vessels.

"Lucky" Baldwin's California ranch contains 50,000 acres and employs 250 men.

It is believed that the Chinese in California "salt" from $1,000 to $2,000 in silver dollars every week.

An angry controversy is in progress in England over the question, "Do Women Have Souls?"

Capitalists in Australia are talking of laying a cable to British Colombia at a cost of $10,000,000.

The public has paid for Appleton's American cyclopædia in its various editions, including annual supplements, nearly $15,000,000.

It is rumored in London that a new half penny daily morning paper will make its appearance in that city on the 1st of January.

Tar as a fuel for ocean steamers is about to be experimented upon by a German who has constructed a novel furnace for the purpose.

A colored citizen of Corinth, Miss., has a skin that is so hard and thick that he can walk on coals of fire without experiencing any pain.

The coming illusion will be the antipodes of the Vanishing Lady. Out of a small egg, which grows gradually larger and larger before the eyes of the spectators, will be produced a living girl.

There is an extraordinary demand for photographs of Archer. One firm of photographers in London assert that they could have sold 10,000 copies had they been ready, and it will be months before the supply is equal to the demand.

The Arab horses which the sultan of Muscat recently sent to Queen Victoria are valued at $17,000. The miscellaneous bric-a-brac which her majesty will send to the sultan are valued at $2,500, leaving a net profit of $14,500 in favor of the queen.

According to local papers the trade in abalone shells at San Diego, Cal., has almost ceased. A dealer who used to receive 1,000 tons of them every year from the coast of lower California, and shipped sixty or seventy tons by every steamer, says the caprice of fashion and an overstocked market have destroyed the business.

The Fogs of New York.

The American metropolis has never developed the "pea soup" fogs of London, and all good citizens devoutly hope it never may. A visitor to New York may see hansoms and tailor made gowns and other English innovations, but he will not see a London fog. Neither will he believe in its density until he does see it. Nevertheless New York gets up some very fair fogs, if the expression may be used. Those who patronize the many ferries rapidly learn the discomfort of a fog.

The fogs of New York are of several kinds. In the winter, when the floating ice on the water is melting, there is apt to arise a dense, white fog, which usually appears before dawn and remains all day. Then there is the intermittent fog, which will suddenly come on in the morning and lifts before noon. A fog will occasionally come on without warning late in the afternoon. The rivers and bay are crowded with craft of all kinds, which are caught quite unexpectedly in a disagreeable predicament. No more trustworthy class of men exists than the hard worked pilots of New York, and accidents are remarkably rare.—New York Mail and Express.

Education of Nurses.

There is quite a rage in England at present for young ladies to go to hospitals to learn nursing; but after three or six months they generally tire of it and leave, instead of going on and qualifying themselves to take an independent position and a well paid one. When a medical man has daughters and little to leave them, says an English journal, how much better it would be to educate one for a nurse instead of letting her join the overcrowded ranks of governesses. Only lately there was an excellent offer, in a town in the north of England, for a well educated lady to take a post in a private lunatic asylum, where her sole duty would be to sing and play to the inmates, and to see that the nurses did their duty at night; and the remuneration was much more than most ladies receive as companions.—Chicago Tribune.

In the matter of lighthouse illumination experiments appear to show that, while the electric arc light is more absorbed in proportion than gas or oil light, as it passes through fog, still its greater intensity enables it to penetrate much further than those. The Berlin core carbons, manufactured by Siemens, have been found to operate best, the core being of graphite. On the whole, investigation thus far renders it apparent that, for ordinary purposes of lighthouse illumination, mineral oil possesses superior advantages, and that for salient or prominently projecting headlands and very powerful lights electricity is superior.—New York Sun.

Pedestrianism in Prison.

L. A. White, the man who was arrested more than a year ago on a charge of manufacturing counterfeit Brazilian money, is developing power as a pedestrian scarcely less wonderful than he showed when his energies were directed to turning out neat counterfeit notes. He is in jail at St. Charles awaiting trial, and a few days ago he measured the "walk" into which the cells open, and began walking back and forth and counting the distance he covered. The first day he walked sixteen miles. Each succeeding day he has increased the distance, and he is now walking more than thirty miles a day.—St. Louis Republican.

A Curious Gun.

I. C. Nichols, general baggage agent of the Missouri Pacific Railway company, has in his possession an old gun made of copper, and, from its looks, evidently made by some old backswoods blacksmith, presented to him by "Uncle Bob" Gardner, of Chetopy, I. T. It is a perfect curiosity, and Mr. Nichols claims that it is the first gun ever made on the six-shooter order. It has six chambers, the revolution of which is made by a huge lever extending the entire length of the barrel, and is shot by cap and ball. The offensive weapon weighs forty pounds.—St. Louis Republican.

A Wall Street Theory.

It is a Wall street theory that the present era of vast individual fortunes is the result of extraordinary conditions that are bound to pass away. They exist only in this country, and it is believed that, law or no law, fifty years hence there will be few or no fifty millionaires in the United States.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Diphtheria from a Goat.

A doctor who attended a Brooklyn family in which two children died of diphtheria last week says he has traced the infection to a goat that had come from a family where children were just recovering from the same disease.

CONCERNING PROMINENT PEOPLE.

What the Newspapers Say of Noted Men and Women.

Charles Francis Adams leaves $1,250,000.

The president is said to receive nearly 50,000 letters a day.

Mme. Patti is to be paid $150,000 for her six months' singing.

Kate Field is giving elaborate dinner parties at the Arlington, in Washington.

Jesse Grant has been appointed superintendent of the proposed Topolobampo railroad in Mexico.

Mme. Nevada Palmer has become a prominent figure in the Paris salons, and her receptions are the rage.

George Alfred Townsend after dictating for some hours to a stenographer found out that the fellow was insane.

Queen Victoria has ordered a tea set of fifty pieces of Burmese ware to be made for her by a New Bedford, Mass., manufacturer.

Miss Catherine Impey, a prominent leader in the temperance cause in England, has been advocating the consumption of hot lemonades in Boston.

Jay Gould has bought a pew in a Presbyterian church at New York, and the paragraphists are making it the subject of most of their squibs.

Mr. Browning found that the palace in Venice which he proposed to purchase was in hopelessly bad repair, and accordingly backed out of the bargain.

Mme. Boucicault, of the Bon Marche, Paris, is the Peter Cooper of her time. She has pensioned her employes royally and distributed her bounty like a princess.

Within the last twenty years Mr. George Washington Childs, A. M., of Philadelphia, has presented over 200 big and valuable Bibles to churches, schools and societies.

The resemblance between Attorney General Garland and First Controller Durham is said to be so great that they can be distinguished only by the different ways in which they crease their hats.

Gen. Hoke, now at the head of the new Georgia, Carolina and Northern railroad, was a major general in the Confederate army at 27 years of age. When the war was over he wanted to go to New York and start life anew. He had no suit but his old gray uniform, and he had this dyed by an old servant, while his mother covered the buttons with pieces of an old bombazine dress.

Mesmerizing a Den of Lions.

A frightful scene has just taken place at Dijon. A mesmerist, M. Torcy, accompanied by his subject, a cataleptic young person, named Mlle. Lucia, entered a cage of lions in Signor Salva's menagerie. The animals seemed at first quite stupefied on seeing strange persons before them, but they soon began to show their molar broadsides and to prepare for action. M. Torcy lost no time, and having sent Mlle. Lucia into a magnetic trance he told her to fix her gaze on the beasts and to place her arms before them, which she did with perfect impunity. She was then plunged into a cataleptic fit, her body was stiffened and her feet and legs fastened to two stools. The animals, goaded by the keepers and by vigorous thrusts from M. Torcy's sticks, were made to jump several times over the young woman's body. This inhuman exercise was continued until the audience, wound up to the highest pitch of terror and excitement, owing to the ominous growling of the infuriated lions, cried out, "Enough!" The three actors in this extraordinary scene were loudly acclaimed by the spectators.

A Cool and Plucky Man.

Albert C. Crocker, superintendent of wells for the Chartiers Gas company, was inspecting a well five miles from Hickory, Pa., the other evening, when there was an explosion of gas and his left foot was blown off just above the ankle. It was pitch dark, and no lanterns are used about the well, so that Crocker could not see how badly he was hurt. He found that he could not walk, but he had no idea that his foot was off. He was assisted into a buggy and driven over the rough roads to Hickory, when it was seen that his foot was gone. By this time he had lost almost every drop of blood in his body, but he was cool and plucky; he sent a man back for the missing foot, ordered the doctors to bind up the wound until a Pittsburg surgeon arrived, and while waiting for him quietly breathed his last.

Frequency of Left-Handedness.

Dr. Louis Jobert has published a work on the cause and frequency of left-handedness. No purely left-handed race has ever been discovered, although there seems to be a difference in different tribes. Seventy per cent. of the inhabitants of the Pendjab use the left hand by preference, and the greater number of the Hottentots and Bushmen of South Africa also use the left hand in preference to the right. Dr. Marro, as a result of his study of criminals, has discovered that from 14 to 22 per cent. of those who have been convicted of crime were left-handed, the highest ratio among people of all classes being only nine in the hundred.—Medical Record.

M. Pasteur's Noble Wife.

M. Pasteur was the recipient of distinguished honors in his journey to Bordighiera, where he is to spend a few weeks in recreation for the first time in nearly four years. The mayor of Nice and the Bureau de la Societe Medicale met him at the station and presented him with a magnificent bouquet of roses. The distinguished savant replied, not in his own name, but in the name of his wife and family, and declared that when he often flagged from overwork his wife stimulated him to pursue his scientific studies and work out the problems he had in view.—Chicago Tribune.

Wintering Quail.

Several gentlemen of Maine have leased a big barn at Cape Elizabeth, where they propose wintering several hundred quail to be liberated in different sections of the state in the spring. The barn floor is covered with sand and gravel, in which the birds dust to keep free from virmin; trees are arranged around the walls and upper part of the barn to prevent the birds from killing themselves by flying against the boards, and an attendant is to feed and water the birds daily.

A Tricycle for Gout.

"Twenty Doctors" is the title of a pamphlet published in London by a man who, from 1868 to 1885, was a cripple from rheumatic gout. He tried nineteen doctors and experimented with all the means of cure or relief known to the profession. Then came No. 20, who put him on a tricycle. He was in agony, and some of the nineteen told him that he would die. But No. 20 said, "stick," and he stuck, and is now quite well. A good advertisement for the tricycle makers.

Mahogany in India.

Mahogany is being rapidly introduced into every part of India where it promises to thrive. The seeds sown have germinated remarkably well, a single pound planted in greenhouses in the southern districts having yielded between 3,000 and 4,000 plants. It is thought quite probable that the world may some day look to India instead of to America for its mahogany.—Boston Transcript.

SOME FACTS FOR VEGETARIANS.

Physical Condition of Flesh Eaters—Flesh Eating Habits of the Civilized World.

A vegetable diet is 400 or 500 per cent. cheaper than the same amount of food derived from the flesh of animals.

The animals which for power of endurance and rapidity of motion are valued for our service derive the whole of their strength and nutriment from the vegetable kingdom; such are the horse, the camel, the elephant.

The physical condition of many flesh eaters shows that the blood itself is loaded with impurities and in a state of decomposition, and that persons whose blood is in this impure state are liable, on very slight exposure, chill, etc., to be attacked with dangerous illness. That this condition is caused by flesh eating is shown from the fact that it is quickly changed by the adoption of a vegetable diet.

The flesh eating habits of the so-called civilized world render necessary the setting apart of a whole class of men for the performance of the degrading and brutalizing office of slaughtering animals for food.

Were it not for the large quantities of vegetables consumed by flesh eaters disease would ensue in every case. Vegetables supply the salts of the blood.

The peasantry of all nations abstain from animal food—wholly or in part—from necessity. Their vigor is greater than that of any other class in every country.

Meat is the most costly of all foods, and among civilized races the struggle for life rages to so fearful an extent that human beings shorten life by the effort they make to save it.

The average age of man should be a century. The majority of human beings die before they are half as old. The longest lived are those who feed on cereals.

Vegetarian diet, by contributing to the physical health of man, improves likewise his moral condition, besides conducing in no small degree to the healthy development of the intellectual faculties; since it must naturally follow that by rendering the instrument clear and pure, the acts of life will be materially elevated, also being identified with that which is clear and pure.—Laura C. Holloway in "Buddhists' Diet Book."

Railroading in Mexico.

The expenses of railroading in the hot climate of Mexico are great. Wooden ties have but a short life, cracking in the dry season and rotting during the rainy months; bridge timbers and piles also wear out rapidly. Freight cars must be painted frequently to prevent drying and cracking, and even the substantial Pullman cars shrivel under this exposure. Fuel constitutes a large item of outlay. Mesquite roots are burned on the Central road; pine cut along its route is used on the Interoceanic, and the Vera Cruz company feeds its engines on coal blocks that are brought from Wales as ballast. The decay of ties will in time necessitate a serious outlay on the Central road, for wooden sleepers cost here $1 each. It is evident that iron ties are a necessity in Mexico, and they are just coming into use. The climate tends to preserve the rails and iron bridges, provided the latter escape the torrents of the rainy season.

Engineers command better wages here than they do in the United States, for only that inducement brings them here. The general staffs of the road are also well paid, but the section hands, who are peons, work for small wages. The natural and proper tendency on all the roads is to employ Mexicans when the right men can be obtained. This policy helps to protect the property of outside corporations doing business here.—Springfield Republican.

How Death May Come.

As the great physiologist Bichat observed many years ago, death may come at last in any one of three different ways: By failure of the heart, the lungs or the brain. The first named is, in fact, the one that always shows that life is extinct. So long as the heart keeps going, the circulation is kept up, and all parts are nourished. When breathing ceases no more oxygen can reach the blood, and the latter no longer nourishes any part as it should; the brain no longer sends its influence to the heart, and it has no further incentive to keep on working. If injury to the brain should happen, or some poison interfere with the outflow of nerve force, then the lungs no longer take in fresh air, and the heart ceases its work. So, finally, all modes of death result in the cessation of the heart beats, and the life of the body stops within two or three minutes after complete failure of this great force-pump to continue its action. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

There has been an unusual eruption of little, shivering pet dogs on our streets lately. They are queer, nondescript figures, with big eyes and sharp snouts, and look as much like rats as anything else. They come from old and New Mexico, and, though there are several varieties of them, hairy and hairless, there is no particular variation in their fragility and utter uselessness. The fanciers assure me that they never live long in our climate. This addition to the list of international pets is probably due to the opening of railroad communication with Mexico. Tourists buy the little brutes as curiosities, and residents ship them to friends in the states as souvenirs.—Alfred Trumble in New York News.

Ready for a Crash.

Everybody in England is raising money, in fact, with a view to an armed crash in the spring. Churchill is going to ask for a big supplementary vote of credit soon after parliament meets to increase the navy and fortifications of Aden, Cyprus and Port Hamilton, and give the government a full hand for hiring cruisers if the necessity arises. There will also be a proposal to augment the Indian army. It is not likely that there will be much opposition to these projects, since it is recognized by all parties that a stormy time is ahead.—Chicago Tribune.

Banqueting Gen. Sherman.

Now that Gen. Sherman has come to New York to live, he will probably be seen at most of the public banquets, for he is an ardent lover of that sort of thing. He is a good eater, a moderate drinker and a fluent speaker. He has no end of anecdotes at his tongue's end. The general is brimful of good fellowship, and he loves to eat and drink and smoke and fight his battles over again in the company of good friends.—New York Times.

A Very Funny Appeal.

Anecdotes of the irrepressible Col. Fairman, who came to the cold northwest to kindle the spirit of art among an uncultivated people, still abound. While in Paris the colonel once displayed a painting on one of the prominent boulevards with the following inscription under it: "Rejected by the jury at the academy. Now let the people judge." Paris laughed itself sad over the very funny appeal.—Pioner Press "Listener."

Clairvoyance Explained.

Many wise people have indulged in wise speculations as to how so-called hypnotic persons are apparently able to see through opaque objects. Scientist Burgson, who investigated some boys who could read the number of a page when a book was held open, but with the back toward them, came to the conclusion that the subject saw the numbers reflected in his own eyes.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

We shall be glad to send, free of charge to all who may desire, a book containing many additional statements of cures by

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE DEATH of John A. Logan removes another of the heroes of the late war,—a man of gruff and uncouth presence, but possessed of a powerful magnetic influence. His death has come suddenly upon the people,—for he has been subject for years to similar attacks of that disease which was his enemy. But the tributes which have been given by his associates in both parties show in how much esteem he was held. Coming so closely after the death of Vice President Hendricks it is a coincidence, to say the least. The old tickets of 1884 in the Presidential Campaign are thus removed from the possibility of renomination. Some other man than Logan must be selected by the republican party, if they would select James G. Blaine as the standard bearer in the next campaign. Some other man than Hendricks must be selected by the democrats if they place Cleveland at the head of their ticket for renomination.

Gen. Logan will be remembered by the younger generation, especially, for the persistence with which he opposed the restoration of Fitz John Porter to the army. Despite the words of Grant, he fought the bill through the Senate with all the power which he could command. Whether right or wrong, we can but admire his consistency. There are many who have followed the history of the fight who still believe with Logan, that the bill restoring Fitz John Porter to his rank in the army should not have been passed. At all events, there is no disputing the record of Gen. Logan in the war. An advocate of the rights of the South regarding slavery in his younger days, he was early to take his stand for the Union at the outbreak of the war.

Gen. Logan and his wife were extremely popular in Washington. The ambition of Mrs. Logan for her husband's success in politics was well known; and it is stated that when the contest, so memorable, for the Senate, was in progress, Mrs. Logan herself hired parlors at the leading hotel of the capital, and entertained the friends of her husband in royal style. The couple were devoted to each other in all their desires, wishes and ambitions, and the sympathy of the entire nation will go to the devoted wife in this hour.

It is said that Gen. Logan would have been a rival of Blaine at the next presidential campaign, for the leading place on the republican ticket. Be that as it may, he would have been an honorable rival. There is little if any deceit in men of such brusque temperament. There has been no tenderer tribute than has come from James G. Blaine, his old associate on the ticket which should have been elected in 1884. He will be kindly remembered by the boys in blue—as a friend of the Grand Army of the Republic, and a legal defender of his country on the field. Since the war he has been a firm, loyal, conscientious republican, and will be indeed a loss to the party.

THE YEAR which is closing will be remembered locally for the events which have transpired here, regarding the labor troubles. It has been, indeed, an eventful one in this respect, and the contest, with the result, will have more than a local interest, in that the issues have been far reaching and have extended to the trade outside of the town. It happened to this town and Salem to be the arena of the sharply defined contest between labor and capital. There have been strikes elsewhere; there have been labor disturbances elsewhere; but in no case, we think, has the result been of such importance, not only locally but generally, as in this trouble which has existed for nearly the entire year.

The result has shown the Knights of Labor the weakness of their methods. It is seen in the moderation with which, in other places, since their surrender here, demands or requests have been made by the laboring men. There is also seen a tendency towards the weakening of the Organization of the Knights of Labor, and the forming of trades unions. The growth of the order has been too rapid. Its control has passed from the hands of those whose judgment was to be commended, to the hands of those who would use the body for selfish or political purposes.

The settlement which has been made here is undoubtedly final. It was an unconditional surrender on the part of the men. There has been much suffering entailed by the long respite from work, there has been much expense added to the town, for the maintainance of order. But the end is peace—that much is surely to be thankful for. The beginning of the new year should open an era of prosperity in the great business interest of this town and in Salem. All the desired labor can be readily obtained; in fact, the manufacturers can have their choice from the unemployed as well as employed labor. We believe the manufacturers will use their advantage to the good of the town, as well as to the successful prosecution of their business. They are a body of shrewd, sensible men,—they have made the town what it is, by their enterprise and their honorable business dealings. They can be depended upon in the future to make the town all she has been in the past.

THE WOBURN Journal is in favor of the retention of the old blue laws on the statute books, and quotes the Boston Record in defence of its position, as saying that the enforcement of these in Boston has had a salutary effect in suppressing vice on Sunday. Now, we doubt if the Record ever said any such thing in just this connection. The blue laws, which have recently been enforced in Boston, and about which there has been so much talk, had reference to the closing of barber shops and other shops on the Lord's day, which have been allowed to keep open previously for the convenience of the people. For instance, the barber shops have been compelled to close in deference to a law which undoubtedly is on the statute book; and this has had a salutary effect in suppressing vice! What a terrible place a barber shop must be, to be sure! Would it not be a good idea to keep them closed every day? And the closing of the drug stores, where, besides the usual prescription trade, cigars and soda are sold on the Lord's day—or have been sold—this, too, has had a salutary effect in suppressing vice!

Nonsense! The blue laws, which have been left as a dead letter on the statute books, has nothing to do with vice and crime. We don't believe that a city or town would be any better or worse, as far as these evils are concerned, whether the barber shops, or the drug stores are open or closed. The enforcement of the liquor laws on Sundays would have a very salutary effect upon vice and crime—but the liquor law is not a "blue law." We have never heard it classed so. In fact, our present liquor law is a new law, comparatively, on the statute books. The enforcement of the law against the illegal sale of liquor on the Lord's day, the suppression of gambling saloons and houses of ill repute, all this is an entirely different thing from what has been considered "blue laws."

In spite of the Woburn Journal and its claimed ally, the Record, we think there are Sunday laws on the statute book that should be repealed, or amended in such a manner that there can be no misconstruction. Despite the ruling of the Supreme Court, despite the enforcement of the laws regarding barber shops and the like in Boston, there is no change in the enforcement of the laws here. Is there in Woburn? We venture the assertion that the same condition of things exists there as in most parts of the Commonwealth. Let us either have laws which are in accord with public sentiment, or enforce the existing laws. The latter can never be done impartially in this Commonwealth regarding the Sunday blue laws, without causing a reaction at once, which would wipe the entire Sunday laws from the statutes. This would be a matter for as much regret as anything. So that the modification of the obnoxious features of this law would be a wise thing for the Legislature to do.

Watch night services will be held in the Methodist church, commencing at 9 P. M. Friday. Rev. Geo. A. Hall will speak at 9 and Rev. G. N. Shipman at 9.30 o'clock. The pastor will conduct the remaining services, which will close at a few minutes past 12 o'clock. The public are invited. Let there be a large attendance.

The West Peabody Farmer's Club will have an entertainment this evening of a musical and literary nature.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The programmes of music, as arranged by the choirs of the different churches in this vicinity, were fully equal to those of former years, on the nearest Sunday to Christmas-tide. The list of music was more generally published, showing that the journals recognize the wishes of the public, to know what is going on in the churches on that day. The Salem News of Friday published the most complete list we have ever known them to give—after the manner of the Boston Traveller. It contained the programme of music in nearly every church in Salem, and the full and careful arrangement is worthy of mention. Its Peabody list was very well, except that the scribe, in clipping them from the PRESS, from which they were taken verbatim, pasted the wrong list over his introduction to the services, in two instances, making the choir of the Unitarian church do duty at the Baptist and vice versa.

The Boston Traveller had the fullest programme of the services in Boston and vicinity, some of which were very elaborate, and its collection reflects much credit upon Geo. H. Wilson, of that paper, its musical editor.

Very elaborate Christmas services were held in St. Augustine's Catholic church, South Boston, where J. J. Carew, formerly organist of St. John's church, is director. Mr. Carew, by the way, has very pleasant rooms in the building No. 149 A. Tremont street, Boston.

Several of our musical people are attending a course of lectures, given in Boston, on voice culture, by Miss Avonia Bonney, who has recently come to this country from England.

This evening Gounod's Redemption is to be given in Salem by the Oratorio Society. The Lowell Choral Society came down this afternoon, in a special train, to assist; and they will return after the oratorio. Special trains will also be run to Boston and way stations. The performances by the Salem Oratorio Society are of considerable more than local interest—it being an unusual thing if several of the Boston press are not represented. The tickets have sold well, and a large house is already assured. We shall be obliged to defer a notice of the performance itself until next week.

It is said that several days prior to Saturday of last week, no desirable seats for the performance of the Messiah, by the Handel & Haydn Society in Boston Music Hall, could be obtained. It shows the great popularity of this oratorio with the musical people of Boston. Or does it show that the performances of the Handel & Haydn are too few in Boston? It would seem that it would be profitable for a repetition. Oratorio music is little heard in Boston—far too little.

Miss Eloise Harford, contralto of Barton Square Church, in Salem, is to give a musicale in Chickering Hall, Boston, early in January. She will have the assistance of Alice May Bates, Charles R. Adams and others.

The engagement of Blaisdell's Orchestra by the Salem Schubert Club might afford a suggestion to the Salem Oratorio Society in the line of something which was said in these columns a year ago. If the Schubert Club can have this orchestra and four soloists at Academy Hall, which will not seat more than one-third as many people as Mechanic Hall, why could not the Oratorio Society give a supplementary performance with the same orchestra, with possibly a few additions, at a more popular price and make money? It might be known that it was for the sole purpose of adding to the deficit which comes nearly every year, from the manner in which the oratorios are brought out. It might be, and undoubtedly should be, a miscellaneous programme, similar to the Festival performances at Worcester and Taunton. It should be a performance not requiring extended time for rehearsal, on the part of the chorus. But we believe it would be a popular thing to do. We cannot see how it would lower the standard of the Society, or present a performance unworthy of the Organization. The opportunity, we think, is a favorable one for the Society. If the members are interested, and they should be, it could be made a financial success. The Taunton Society gives an entire oratorio with Blaisdell's orchestra, and no organ, and they do it well. In Mechanic Hall, they would have the addition of the organ. We hope an orchestral selection by this orchestra will be given at the Schubert Club concert, and that an opportunity will be given some of the Oratorio people to hear and know what they can do.

Some good things are to be found among the music publications of this month. All lovers of pretty songs will welcome the new one by Pinsuti, entitled "A Maiden's Challenge" (30 cents); and we are sure that those who admire classic productions will be pleased with the new edition of the song entitled "Dreams," by Richard Wagner (35 cents); and then there is Cowen's new song, "Year after Year," with its graceful piano accompaniment (40 cents); "The Bird's Answer," by E. B. Smith (40 cents); "Jack and Joe," by Reinecke (35 cents); and "Proposal Apropos," by Curschman (35 cents). All these new and specially selected pieces will be sent to any address, on receipt of price, by the publishers, O. Ditson & Co., Boston, Mass. This old and well-known house is still at the front as it has been for fifty years back.

The American opera season, which opens Jan. 3, at the Boston Theatre, will be the fashionable event of the season. The surprised delight with which music lovers thronged the theatre last spring during the too short season of the company assures the season financial successes at the start. In addition to favorite works seen and applauded here, the repertory will include "Faust" and "Aida," so brilliantly successful in the West. It is probable, also, that in this city will occur two "first" productions, Rubenstein's "Nero," and Delibes' "Coppelia." The company is larger and stronger even than last season.

Vespers will be held in St. John's church, next Sunday evening, at 7.30 o'clock. Lejeal's Psalms will be sung and the choir will be assisted by H. S. Mack, of Salem, violinist.

The management of the Boston Home Journal has secured, and will soon publish, Correspondence of Henry W. Longfellow never before published, and covering the last fifty years of his life. The most interesting and valuable collection of letters and reminiscences of the great poet ever given to the public. They will be published in a series, the first of which will appear Saturday, January 1st.

IT IS said that the streets of Boston and other of our large license cities were noticeable on Christmas day, on account of the large number of intoxicated persons therein. And it was evident that many from the suburban towns were among the number. It is a sad thing that so many men, on every recurring holiday, will spend their earnings in the saloon, instead of for their own good or that of their families. We think the Legislature would do a wise thing if they would follow the suggestion of Gen. Butler, and compel the closing of all liquor saloons, not only on election days, but on every holiday. If it is a good thing to have them closed on election day, it is certainly a good thing to have them closed on every holiday. It would prevent the commission of much crime, which is attributable solely to drunkenness. It would be a blessing to many a man who is led away on such days, to squander his earnings in the saloon. We hope if any change is made in the law the coming session, it will be in this direction.

A large number of postal cards are being received by the citizens of this town from Borden, Edwards & Co., advertising gold "finished" watches for $3.75, one dollar to be paid down and balance in sixty days. We learn from Lum Smith's Public Herald of Philadelphia that this concern is a fraud, and we hope none of our readers will be deceived by them. The Herald says:—"These postals are artfully worded, and are well intended to deceive the unwary. For instance, the words 'Stem Winding Solid Gold' are displayed in heavy type, leaving the impression from the remaining portion of the postal that the purchaser was getting a gold watch: but to avoid the law, the displayed words are followed by the word 'finished' in small type, so the complete sentence reads: 'Stem Winding Solid Gold Finished Watches.' Just what a 'gold finished' watch is we don't know, but we do know that Borden & Co., Edwards & Co., and Borden, Edwards & Co., are trying to swindle the public and at the same time keep out of the penitentiary."

Our "Sparks" reporter and correspondent of the Lynn Item had yearned for a pair of overshoes till he had become wild eyed and haggard and actually grown thin with his unsatisfied longings. But last Friday the young ladies of the PRESS office surprised him by presenting him with a pair of No. 14 overshoes. It represented a corner in the rubber market and accounts for the advance in price in that article. No one suspected for a minute that the young ladies could get material enough at one time for a pair that would fit him, but by beginning early in the season and securing estimates of consolidated firms, the great "feet" was accomplished and they were built on one of the dry docks of the Essex ship yards. They were a perfect fit, and the way the young ladies were enabled to guess so near to the size was by measuring the tank on Buxton's hill, although they cover Moreland than the tank.

Miss Stratton, of the Wallis school, was presented by her pupils Friday with a volume of Shakespeare's works, handkerchief box and several cards. Several of the other teachers received cards. Miss Kitty Wiley, of the Centre school, also received a plush box of stationery.

Daniel J. Sweeney has resigned as manager of the Co-operative Boot & Shoe store in this town, to take effect Jan. 1. He will devote his time to his cigar store.

Mr. George A. Lawrence won a bronze medal at the rifle shoot Christmas day at the range of the Salem Independent Rifle Association. Mr. Lawrence is also one of the directors of the Association.

The employes of the Naumkeag Street Railroad Company surprised Supt. Ferguson, last Friday afternoon by presenting him with an elegant gold watch chain and charm and a diamond pin, the whole valued at about $150. Mr. Joseph F. Hickey, the popular clerk of the road, made the presentation speech.

Yesterday forenoon a bullet from the gun of some careless person, crashed through the window of the sitting room, at the residence of Warren Trask, on the Stephen Blaney farm, and struck against the stove. A son of Mr. Trask was on a lounge in the room at the time. It was a fortunate escape, as the room is almost always occupied.

Jeremiah Bresnahan, known as "Jerry, the Buster," to distinguish him from three other Jerry Bresnahan's, died yesterday, after an illness of three days, of gastric fever. He was about 70 years of age and has buried four wives. He leaves a son by his first wife, who is a hotel keeper in Washington, and a daughter by his second wife. He worked in the tanneries up to the strike last summer.

The parish committee of St. John's church, at the suggestion of Rev. Father Masterson, are doing good work among the poor people of this parish, by the distribution of coal and other supplies to families in want. A meeting was held last Sunday to take measures for the prosecution of this charitable work, and a collection will be taken up next Sunday to raise further funds for the purpose.

A correspondent urges the election of Francis H. Appleton, of Peabody, of Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the retirement of John E. Russell to Congress, on the ground that Mr. Appleton "does not need the salary." This is, no doubt, a good reason, although we have heard candidates urging their election on the opposite ground.—Ipswich Chronicle.

District Officer Shaw arrested, Monday, the manager of the Overland & Pacific Tea Company branch store in Lynn for, as he claims, carrying on a gift enterprise—the company giveaway presents with tea and coffee. In the opinion of a good many, Shaw's calibre is about equal to such cases as these. And it is hoped Gov. Ames will see the need of a new man in this district. The proprietor of that store is as square a man as ever did business and has hosts of friends in this town, who have traded with him for years. He could give Shaw points in honesty.

Major Daniel J. Preston, of Danvers, a respected citizen and for the past eleven years deputy sheriff, died of pneumonia last Friday after a brief illness. He served gallantly during the war in the Eighth Regiment, where he received the commission of Major. He has since been a member of the Grand Army, and Danvers Lodge of Odd Fellows, and held the responsible position of tax collector of Danvers. He was honored by all who knew him in this town and Danvers. It was related to us by Mr. Thomas Osborne, of this town, that a short time ago Major Preston, in speaking to a friend about the old age to which his ancestors lived, said he saw no reason why he, himself, should not live, at least, 20 years longer as he was in perfect health. But it was not to be, and the wife who survives him has the sympathy of the whole community.

The New Discovery!

Reports copied from our Daily Record of the wonderful effects of

Battis' Modified Extract of DENICOTIZED TOBACCO.

1500 more cases to publish, and the evidence daily accumulating:

ALFRED TYLER, No. 4 Downing St., Salem. Nervous movements of a lame leg; could not control it at night; unable to sleep. Also troubled with Psoriasis, a stinging sensation in certain parts of the body. Very much reduced. Under treatment more than a year without relief. Applied the Extract with a sponge and wet bandage for less than a week, and was entirely restored to health gaining the past six months 30 pounds in weight.

The son of JOEL PEABODY, 10 years of age, at No. 5 Union Place, Salem, Mass. Under treatment for billious fever; had been sick for several days; was very feeble when the sun went down at 7 P. M. They applied a bandage wet with Extract across his forehead and closed eyes, when he fell into a profound sleep. At early morn he was up playing around as well as ever. Mr. Peabody also cured his wife of a felon on the thumb by dressing it once with Extract.

CHARLES A. MUNSEY, No. 5 White St., Salem, had his left foot badly injured by a horse stepping upon it. It was much swollen and very painful. He was unable to walk and could not sleep at night. His wife brought him to our store and bathed his foot with the Extract 20 minutes, then applied a bandage wet with the same. He then arose and walked with ease, and stamped his foot upon the floor with great force, to show witnesses standing by that the trouble had entirely disappeared.

Mrs. JOSEPH STICKNEY, at the Willows, Salem, had been sick for several days with a bad cold using the common remedies in such cases without any relief. At 3 A. M., Sept. 16, became very sick, unable to breathe, when the family, much alarmed, applied the Extract to throat and breast and in one minute she experienced some relief, in ten minutes her respiration was as free as ever.

Mr. John F. Morland, for the past two years reporter of the Lynn Daily Item for this town, severs his connection with that paper with the close of this year, and will take the place of Mr. Albert P. Chute at the Post Office. Mr. Morland will continue to represent the Associated Press for this town, and will also furnish for this paper the column of Sparks, which has given so full an account of the doings of the fire department in this town. During Mr. Morland's connection with the Item he has made many friends. His reports have been carefully written in a spirit of fairness to all concerned, and entirely free from that personality which often pervades reports of local doings in the daily press. His reports have been news—and not in any sense editorials. And in this respect many correspondents would do well to copy his example. We do not think he has given the paper for which he was correspondent any cause for explanation or apology to anyone on account of his reports, or involved it in any dispute. For this reason he was a valued correspondent. He will enter upon his new duties Jan. 1st, and Mr. Ward is to be congratulated on securing so courteous and capable an assistant.

The whole trouble about the case of cruelty at the Wallis school is believed by the school committee to have been caused by a misunderstanding of the nature of the case by the teacher, who is one of the best in town and would not intentionally permit anything of the kind to happen. The parents naturally thought their explanation of the case sufficient, and so it would have been had it been understood. In regard to the choking case, investigation shows that the story was maliciously told about one of the teachers by a pupil who afterwards confessed that he made it up out of whole cloth, but not before it was on the streets much exaggerated. There are always two sides; wait till you hear both.

There will be a contest over the will of the late George C. Peirce. George O. Peirce has appealed from the decision of the Probate court to the Supreme court, and Wm. P. Clark, President of the South Danvers National Bank, has been appointed special administrator by the court. The will was drawn by Thomas Stimpson, Esq., twelve years ago, and $300 is left to George O., $500 to each of his children in trust, and $500 to his wife. At the decease of Mrs. George C. Peirce the property is to be divided between the daughter of George C. Peirce and the daughter of George O. Peirce.

Holten Lodge of Odd Fellows elected officers last evening, as follows: N. G., Daniel Buxton; V. G., Chas. E. Galeucia; Rec. Sec., E. I. Kimball; Per. Sec., George H. Manning; Treas., George F. Sanger; Trustees, James Buxton, Sylvanus Newhall and N. C. Patterson. The elected and appointed officers will be installed next Tuesday evening. An invitation was received from Glenmere Lodge No. 139 of Lynn inviting Holten Lodge to pay them a fraternal visit Jan. 26, and it was voted to accept. The third degree was conferred on one candidate, closing up the work of the term, there having been eight initiations this term.

The following are the topics suggested by the United States Evangelical Alliance for the week of prayer, Jan. 2—9, 1887: Sunday, Jan. 2, Sermons. "O Thou that hearest prayer, unto Thee shall all flesh come." (Psalm 65: 2). Monday, Jan. 3, Praise. Tuesday, Jan. 4, Humiliation. Wednesday, Jan. 5, Prayer for the church. Thursday, Jan. 6, Prayer for Families and Schools. Friday, Jan. 7, Prayer for Missions. Saturday, Jan. 8, Prayer for Nations. Sunday, Jan. 9, "Thy kingdom come" (Matt. 5:10).

The second institute of the Essex Agricultural Society for the winter will be held at Rowley on Thursday, Dec. 30. In the forenoon, Hon. J. Otis Winkley, Mayor-elect of Newburyport, is expected to speak on "Which is most profitable to the farmers of Essex county—to raise their own cows or to buy them?" In the afternoon, Hon. John E. Russell, of the State Board of Agriculture, will speak on "Sheep Husbandry, as adapted to Massachusetts."

An exchange says lots of people have a barrel of sweet cider in their cellar, "just to make a little vinegar." One of our store keepers thought he had a barrel on tap in his cellar last week, but when he went to draw some for a customer it had all run out and he was obliged to fill the order at a neighbor's. No one knew who left it running.

Christmas Remembrance.

The Christmas programme at the churches as announced in the PRESS last week was very successfully carried out. The music was a very interesting feature of the services. The weather was for the most part all that could be desired, although some of the young folks would have been happier had there been snow. The morning Christmas service at St. John's Catholic church was attended by a large congregation, who listened to the pleasing singing of the children's choir. The altar was trimmed with evergreen and everything was in keeping with the day. Children's mass was held at 8 o'clock, and at ten o'clock Rev. Father Masterson preached an appropriate sermon, and vespers were held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

At the Universalist church Rev. F. W. Sprague preached in the morning from Matthew 2:11; "and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh." The sermon was appropriate to the Christmas season, and special music was rendered by the choir. The chancel was elaborately trimmed with holly and evergreens. In the evening there was a Sabbath School Concert,—for which the subject was generally assigned to the season of Christmas. Recitations were given by the children, and the music was appropriate to the occasion. The choir of the church was present and sung—also Miss Annie K. Orr, the soprano, sang a solo. There was a selection by four little girls, a piece by Miss Batchelder's class, and a number by a special quartette consisting of Mrs. Hagar, Miss Farnum, Messrs. Albert H. and Frank C. Merrill.

At the Unitarian church, on Friday night, the children of the Sabbath School were entertained by an operetta, the Merry Christmas of the old woman who lived in the shoe. After this presentation the large shoe divided and disclosed a handsome Christmas tree, when Miss Carrie Wilson, representing the old woman in the shoe, distributed the gifts to the members of the school. It was done in a very graceful and effective manner, provoking at times much laughter and applause. The presents were mostly small gifts, and the sick and the aged of the parish were remembered with gifts of fruit and flowers by the Young Workers. Mr. Arthur W. Littlefield, the superintendent of the Sunday School, was presented with some choice books, among them a set of Gibbon's History of Rome. Sunday afternoon Rev. J. W. Hudson preached a sermon on the character of Christ considered as an argument for Christianity. In the evening there was a special Sabbath School Concert appropriate to the Christmas season. For the music there was rendered an arrangement of the Te Deum by the school, and a song by Miss Henrietta Winchester was particularly well done. There was an address by Superintendent Littlefield and Rev. Mr. Hudson made some appropriate remarks for the New Year.

The children of the South church Sunday school were entertained at the vestry Friday evening. Two Christmas trees had been provided which were handsomely decorated with various colored ornaments, strings of pop corn and lighted candles. At 7 o'clock the children filed in and about an hour was taken up with an entertainment, consisting of singing, recitations and readings. Presents had been provided for all the younger members of the school, and these, with a package of candy for each, were distributed to the children with the assistance of Santa Claus who was personated by Bertie Collins. Besides the presents provided by the school, several classes received gifts from their teachers and several teachers were pleasantly remembered by their classes. Among the latter was Miss Hattie Thatcher, who received from her class of boys a large volume of Dore's illustrations. Mr. J. K. Cole, the superintendent, was presented by Miss Floyd, in behalf of the school, with an elegant engraving in bronze frame, "The Sanctuary," after Landseer. Rev. G. A. Hall, the pastor, received a revolving book case for his study, several valuable books, and a sum of money. The vestry was well filled with interested friends of the school who came to enjoy the evening with the children and all seemed well satisfied with what they saw and heard.

Sunday morning Mr. Hall preached to the children a Christmas sermon and in the evening a Sunday school concert was given. Besides the usual singing and recitations by the school, the interest of the occasion was greatly increased by the singing of a chorus of young ladies, members of the school, who have been for some time rehearsing together under the direction of Miss Belle Bill. They sang Holy, Holy, is the Lord God, a trio of considerable difficulty, which was rendered with fine expression and with a spirit and animation showing careful drill.

The vestry of the Methodist Church was well filled Friday evening and two well loaded Christmas trees were covered with silver and gold tinsel and hung with pretty presents for the children and some of the older ones. A social time with vocal music was enjoyed and the children allowed to run and get all the enjoyment out of it possible till the presents were distributed. and all the little ones were remembered. Mrs. Isaac Knowlton, the popular organist of the church, was presented with a handsome reed rocker by her friends in the school, and Mrs. Phinney, wife of the pastor, was, also, remembered with tokens of affection.

On Sunday, by invitation of the pastor, Rev. Geo. Alcott Phinney, Holten Lodge of Odd Fellows attended services in the afternoon. About 100 members were present and reserved seats in the body of the house were provided for them, and the church was full. The pulpit was attractively decorated with a floral anchor, contributed by Bro. B. D. Hill, of Holten Lodge. A printed order of exercises was furnished, containing the hymns, so that all could join in the singing. The pastor took his text from Romans 1:16—"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel." The pastor feelingly spoke of the death and burial of Bro. James S. Paul, and of the kindly and fraternal feelings among the order, and the kindness with which he had been received by them. In behalf of his church, he thanked them for their beautiful memorial window. Mr. Phinney then preached an excellent sermon in his usual forcible manner and was attentively listened to by all. Meetings of this kind are of great benefit to any order, and this, the first one ever attended by Holten Lodge, will be remembered for years to come.

At the Baptist church Rev. J. N. Shipman preached a sermon in the morning appropriate to Christmas. In the evening there was held a Sabbath School Concert, consisting of recitations and singing by the children. The choir of the church was present and assisted in the singing, also rendering one selection.

At the Episcopal church, the regular Christmas service was held Christmas day. There was, also, preaching at the usual time Sunday. The Christmas tree for the children of the Sabbath School will be seen next week.

NOTES.

A happy thought came to the minds of the Y. W. C. T. Union last week. It was, to do something to make others happy on Christmas day, by supplying their needs. This they were enabled to do, through the generous response which met their call for provisions. To the sick, flowers, jellies and other delicacies were taken. To the needy, more substantial supplies were sent. Perhaps it may become a stated ministry by the "Y's," as the younger Union is called.

Going to the alms-house with Christmas gifts has become one of the pleasureable occasions of the season. Last Thursday evening a company of twenty-eight ladies and gentlemen rode up in Mr. N. M. Quint's barge, carrying gifts to the inmates which had been provided by the Mission Circle, connected with the South Church, and the Temperance Unions. Mr. and Mrs. Drew gave the company a cordial welcome. A pleasing entertainment was given in the chapel, consisting of recitations by Miss Lina McPehrson, banjo solos by Mr. Charles M. Poor, and singing by some of the young ladies of the South Church. The pleasure given, was only equalled by the enjoyment of all those who went.

The Odd Fellows got the best of Rev. Mr. Phinney of the Methodist church last Sunday. It is customary to take a collection there every Sunday, and as the Odd Fellows were his guests the contribution box was not passed to them. When the boys got back to the Lodge room they thought they had been intentionally slighted, and so the hat was passed around and about twelve dollars thrown in, and Past Grand S. S. Littlefield was delegated a committee of one to present it to the pastor. It is probable that the next time they will be allowed to contribute with the rest.

After the return of the members o Holten Lodge to their rooms last Sunday, Grand Master W. M. Hill, of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, and District Deputy W. D. Dennis addressed the brothers in eloquent language and congratulated the lodge on the wonderful prosperity it had thus far enjoyed.

* * *

A good joke took place in town yesterday afternoon. Edson Lewis' express team was sent to a certain house, not far from the square, to get an upright piano. When they called the lady of the house said she knew nothing about it and protested mildly against having her piano removed. The expressmen insisted and after considerable labor succeeded in placing the instrument in their team and started for Salem. When they reached the square a happy thought struck them and they telephoned to Salem for particulars and were told they had made a mistake in the name, and with an oh-dear-what-a-heavy-piano-feeling, they returned it to the owner, and afterwards took the right one to Salem.

THE DRAMA.

It would be difficult to arrange a more brilliant or varied representation of the famous "Black Crook" than that which is now performed so smoothly by the Kiralfy Company at the Boston Theatre. Its attractive features have won appreciation throughout the holiday week just past. They will not fail to gain continued favor during the New Year's week that has just begun. The marvellously agile Siegrists, the Magnanis, who evokes music from everything, and the great operetta ballet, one of the most elaborate of all the Kiralfy special offerings, are to be enjoyed nightly and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons during the present week only.

It is a long time since one piece has held the boards at the Museum so long as "Harbor Lights." If the same good fortune attends its successor, now being given this week for the first time, the Museum will have attained an unusual record, even for them, of going through the entire season with two plays. "Held by the Enemy," Gillette's war drama, ha had a long run in New York, and has been received with great favor. Mr. Vanderfelt, the new leading man, already a favorite, will be seen in the part of a young Massachusetts officer, and Miss Evesson and May Davenport will have important roles. Mr. Seymour, the stage manager, will make his first appearance this season. The play was greeted with a large audience Monday night and is undoubtedly in for a long run.

At the Hollis Street Theatre this week comes another new attraction, Mme. Modjeska, in one of her recent New York successes. "The Chouans" is a dramatization from Balzac's novel, by Pierre Berton, and has been adapted for the English stage by Paul M. Potter. It is a drama of strong, well-sustained interest, effective in all its situations, giving not only Modjeska herself, but the members of her company, some remarkable opportunities for good acting. The scene is laid, of course, in France, in the troublous times of contest between Royalists and Republicans, in that part of France where loyalty to the banner of the lilies was most intense, yet by no means unchallenged. The star is to appear as Maria de Vernuil, while Maurice Barrymore, her leading man, acts the role of "The White Chief" of the Royalists. The piece is to be performed nightly with a matinee on Saturday only.

A week hence Miss Fortescue comes to the Park, making her Boston debut in W. S. Gilbert's play, "Gretchen." In the company supporting Miss Fortescue are Fred Terry (a brother of Ellen Terry), Newton Gotthold, Charles Overton, W. H. Crompton and others.

Boucicault's engagement at the Hollis will be marked, probably, by the first production on any stage of his new drama, founded on incidents in the war between North and South.

A single fact is worth a shipload of argument. This may be well applied to St. Jacobs Oil, which is more efficacious than all other liniments. Mr. John Gregg, a well-known citizen of Watsonville, California, found it to be indispensable as a cure for rheumatism. Price, fifty cents.

A ROMANCE OF THE WEST.

Industry Made to Tell in an Unexpected Way—Story of a Ring.

"There goes a young man who has a romance," remarked a well known citizen of St. Paul to a reporter, as he looked through the window, as a young man of perhaps 25 passed up First avenue, a remarkably handsome lady leaning upon his arm. "Tell you about it? Certainly; only I won't give you the names of the parties, for if I did you would print it and nearly every one in the city would recognize in the couple two well known Minneapolis people.

"Some years ago the young man worked in one of the big mills and was looked upon as a good man in his position. One day a party of ladies visited the mill, among them the lady you saw him with. While looking at the different things around the mill this young lady dropped from her finger into a lot of wheat which was being stored a valuable diamond ring which had been presented to her by her mother, who had died some years before.

"Of course, the young lady was nearly heartbroken and refused to be comforted by her friends. This young man, who was standing near when she dropped the ring, saw the whole thing and made up his mind to recover the ring. That evening, as soon as his work was done, he went to the bin in which the wheat had been stored and there, accompanied by a friend, sifted all the wheat and placed it in bags. It was nearly morning when he found the ring. The wheat was then emptied back into the bin and the young man went home. When he went to work again he went to the head miller and succeeded in being released for the day. His next move was to dress himself in his best suit and return the ring to the owner.

"To her he related how he recovered it, and by his pleasing manners so captivated her that she invited him to call. This he did, and the friendship thus begun soon ripened into something stronger. The young lady's father took a great liking to the young man and gave his consent to a marriage arranged between him and his daughter. When the marriage took place the young man left the mill and was started in business by his wife's father. He is now worth about $100,000 and can lay his good fortune to recovering the lost ring."—St. Paul Globe.

A CHALLENGE!

I hereby agree to forfeit ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS to the Lynn Hospital if I can not prove to the satisfaction of any three disinterested persons:

FIRST, that I am selling the genuine W. L. Douglas' $3.00 shoe and new goods for $2.75.

SECOND, that the McEllery shoe, which I am cutting to $2.85, is superior to the Douglas shoe. The only condition of this offer is that the agent of the Douglas shoe shall forfeit the same amount to the Lynn Hospital if I prove my claim.

I DARE HIM ACCEPT MY CHALLENGE!

From now on until my new Central Square store is ready.

I Shall Cut Specialty Goods to the Heart!

McEllery's Superb	$3.50 Shoes cut to $2.85
Daniels' Magnificent	3.00 Shoes cut to 2.45
Rice & Hutchins' Ster.	3.00 Shoes cut to 2.15
Miller's Climax	2.00 Shoes cut to 1.75
W. L. Douglas'	3.00 Shoes cut to 2.75

We have just received a large lot of W. L. Douglas' $3.00 shoes in Bals, Button and Congress fresh from the factory and in the latest styles. We are satisfied with a small marg.. and do not seek to make the enormous profit of 37 per cent on cost as do the little retailers who sell them for $3.00. Come and behold. We have enough to go all around. I will warrant the Douglas shoes to the same extent that his agents will.

Book Notices.

BALLOU'S MAGAZINE.—We have received the January number of this well-known magazine. With this issue, it commences its Sixty-fifth Volume—now a third of a century before the public, and a general favorite with all. It must number its readers by legions. What promises to be an interesting Serial, by Mrs. Jane G. Austin, commences in this number, entitled The Outcast; or the Master of Falcon's Eyrie. If you want an interesting assortment of entertaining, instructive and amusing reading, try this popular monthly. Now is the time to subscribe. Price $1.50 per year, post-paid. We see four subscriptions are sent for $5.00. It is published by G. W. Studley, 23 Hawley street, Boston, Mass.

As a war in Europe may be announced any day by cable, most people are interested to know something about the great states which will first be involved. Francis Joseph I, and the Austria-Hungary Empire, by George M. Towle, gives, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for January, a clear and well-written picture of one Power. When Greek meets Turk, by Oscanyan, tells the story of another. Footprints of Washington in 1753, written and illustrated by Mrs. C. Ingersoll Gara, is an attractive article of our own land and its greatest man. An article on the Spectrum, Sunlight Unraveled, by Arthur V. Abbot, is science made as interesting as a novel. The whole January number of this periodical, with its attractive reading and charming pictures, is a prize for young and old.

The handsome January Magazine of American History opens with the initial chapters in its promised series of studies on the rise, progress, and development of journalism in America, the announcement of which has already attracted attention the world over. This chapter, treating of Pre-Revolutionary Editors, and the Beginnings of journalism in America, is intensely absorbing, and is illustrated in the most useful, unique, and picturesque manner; the text is from the pen of the distinguished author, Hon. S. G. W. Benjamin, our late minister to Persia, who writes delightfully, in an easy-flowing, narrative style, the strictest care being given to exact data. Major Bundy pays a just and appreciative Tribute to Chester A. Arthur, accompanied by a splendid portrait of our late ex-President as the frontispiece to the magazine. This periodical abounds in resources; it fills a position of its own, separate from and independent of any other of the great magazines, and its educational influence is of the first moment to the community at large. Price, $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

The year 1886 has been a magnificent one for The Boston Globe. A year ago The Daily Globe had a circulation of 84,400. Now it has 104,000. a gain of 20,000 in one year. The Sunday Globe had 91,000 one year ago; now it has 105,000, which is about 20,000 more than the circulation of any other Sunday newspaper in Boston. The Sunday Globe has a larger circulation than any other Sunday paper in the United States, counting out New York. Boston and the Globe are to be congratulated on this achievement. If you do not read The Globe, try it for 1887.

An ounce of discretion is better than a pound of knowledge. Why not spend twenty-five cents for a bottle of Red Star Cough Cure, and save a large doctor's bill?

ONE OF THE BEST THINGS OUT.—With the advent of the New Year there always comes to the desk of the editor something new, useful or unique in the shape of some invention or discovery, or something which will amuse and divert while it conveys instruction, Of such a character is the sterling novelty which lies before us in the shape of a Counter-Wrapper-Pad, (12 X 8½ inches) for the counter use of druggists and dealers in medicine. It is gotten out by the Chas. A. Vogeler Company, Baltimore, Md., and is being distributed freely to their patrons in trade. The pad will doubtless be very much in demand and as it deserves should justly become most popular as one of the best things out.

MONEY TO BE MADE.—It is said that dull times are not known by the agents for the great publishing house of George Stinson & Co., of Portland, Me. The reason of this exceptional success is found in the fact that they always give the public that which is keenly appreciated and at prices which all can afford. At present we understand, their agents, are doing wonerfully well on several new lines. They need many more agents in all parts of the country. Those who need profitable work should apply at once. Women do as well as men. Experience is not necessary, for Messrs. Stinson & Co. undertake to show all who are willing to work, not hard but earnestly, the path to large success. It should be remembered that an agent can do a handsome business without being away from home over night. Another advantage—it costs nothing to give the business a trial., and an agent can devote all his time, or only his spare moments to it. Stinson & Co. guarantee grand success to all who engage and follow simple and plain directions that they give. We have not space to explain all here, but full particulars will be sent free to those who address the firm; their full address is given above.

1887.

BY D. J. K.

Thus 1886 has fled, [Matt. 3:7]
  Its joys and sorrows too. [Ps. 30:5]
With great delight I look ahead, [Heb. 11:10]
  To "sing the song" that's "new." [Rev. 5:9]
As 1887 begins, [Ex. 12:2]
  I think of wicked ones; [Ps. 17:9]
Who "heavy laden" with their sins, [Matt. 11:28]
  Rejects God's only Son. [Mark 7:9]
From year to year, man glides along, [Ps. 90:9]
  On speedy wings of time: [Ec. 9:72]
Professing joy, as "drunkard's songs," [Ps. 69:12]
  This year may end his time. [Rev. 10:6]
"This year" of '86 may end [Jer. 28:16]
  God's patient "day" of grace. [2 Cor. 6:2]
His judgment then will be no friend, [Heb. 9:27]
  To those in their own ways. [Pr. 14:12]
O, hearken now, come to the Lord, [Matt. 11:28]
  Who died your soul to save. [Luke 19:10]
Leave self, to trust His "precious blood," [1 Pt.1:19]
  Have victory o'er the grave. [1 Cor. 15:55]
The profit then you shall receive, [1 Tim. 4:8]
  From Him who dies no more. [Rom. 6:9]
No mind the bliss can now conceive [1 Cor. 13:12]
  Laid up beyond time's shore. [Matt. 6:20]

PEOPLES' COLUMN.

OLEOMARGARINE.

There is a petition circulating among the grocery stores in town, to obtain signatures for the purpose of repealing the tax upon oleomargarine, levied at the last session of Congress, and approved by the president, who affixed his signature to the bill.

The bill to tax this bogus imitation for butter known as oleomargarine, was introduced into Congress and passed both houses, receiving the sanction of the president, in the interest of the farmers of the several States and Territories. It is not often that the farmers come before Congress to ask protection for the products of their labor and their skill. In this case where so vile a compound was manufactured and passed off upon the public, as genuine butter, to the great injury of the dairy interests; it was like the last straw that broke the camel's back, too much to be endured, the farmers could not longer withhold their petition for redress of grievances. The tax upon this bogus compound, as it originally passed the House, was fixed at five cents a pound but, on its way through the Senate, it was cut down to two cents a pound, on its final passage, and thus it now stands as law. This is not a competition among dairy-men in the production of butter, but the putting upon the market of a deleterious article, composed of lard, tallow, cotton-seed oil and a low grade of butter. Those are the ingredients from which oleomargarine is made. We certainly hope the petitioners will not succeed in their efforts to have this law repealed. We are not certain that the lard and tallow, that enters into the composition of oleomargarine, is always obtained from healthy animals. Cattle and hogs die from disease in great numbers; their fat is not lost, but utilized, and is as likely to be for butter as for any other purpose.

Prof. Salmon said, "that in a visit to Barren Island, near New York, where all the offal of New York City is rendered—he had seen fat produced from animals which had died from disease in the city, which was perfectly white in color and was odorless and tasteless. If they can afford to treat fats in that way for making soap and lubricating purposes, they can afford to do it in making a product which will sell at the price of creamery butter."

Oleomargarine is composed of, at least, seventy-five per cent. of lard, leaving twenty-five per cent. for tallow and a low grade of butter. Unscrupulous manufacturers of oleomargarine would just as soon use the fat of diseased animals as healthy ones, then sell their villainous compound for genuine butter.

Mr. Colman, Commissioner of Agriculture, says, "I beg to call special attention to the unparalleled increase during the past few years of the manufacture and sale of various compounds of animal fats, vegetable oils and other substances which are fraudulently represented to the public as butter. The extent of this business threatens the destruction of the legitimate dairy business, the interests of which are of the largest magnitude, and affects all sections of the country. It is not competition with dairying that is depreciated, but the simulation of true diary products, the deception of misleading names, the use of impure substances, and the dishonest sale, at high rates, of products otherwise of little value—practices which demoralize trades, defraud honest industry and endanger health."

Senator Warner Miller, of Herkimer, N. Y., who had charge of the bill in the Senate, said, "We are told by medical men that dyspepsia is the universal disease of Americans, and they tell us that it is largely attributable to the eating of too much fat, of the tallow and of the lard which goes with our meats and which is used in the cooking or the preparation of our food. If it shall be pie-crust that has done it by its lard, I do not know what would be the condition of the people if they were given over to the unlimited consumption of oleomargarine, which is to-day composed of, at least, seventy-five per cent. of lard."

After hearing such strong and convincing testimony from distinguished individuals, who have made thorough investigation of the whole subject, who can doubt its impurity?

We presume the object dealers in oleomargarine have in view in circulating this petition is to get rid of the tax, as given in Art. 3, of the Bill, which reads as follows: "Every person who manufactures oleomargarine for sale shall pay a special tax of $600 a year. Wholesale dealers, or those who sell oleomargarine in the original manufacturer's packages, shall pay $48 a year."

If these petitions reach Congress, we earnestly hope they will be the means of increasing the tax on oleomargarine, rather than diminishing it. Protect the productions of your farmers; they are the legitimate results of their honest industry and toil. They are endeavoring to improve the quality of butter and cheese, by keeping better cows, and giving more attention to the matter of feeding, as regards the quality and quantity of food.

As this article is quite lengthy, we will consider the subject of cows and the manner of feeding at another time.

SOUTH PEABODY

Mr. O. F. Newhall has built an addition to his green houses on Lynnfield street.

Rev. Geo. A. Hall occupied the pulpit last Sunday afternoon for Rev. J. W. Colwell.

Mr. Geo. W. Davis has bought one of the ice houses of C. W. Julyn at Brown's pond.

Miss Lizzie Davis has returned from her trip to Philadelphia, after an absence of two months.

Several private families had Christmas trees at their residences, and some valuable and useful presents were given away.

Christmas trees were held at the church last Friday evening when the usual exercises were had after which "Santa Claus" gave some very nice and useful presents to those present.

Mrs. Mary Copeland, of South Lynnfield, died at her late residence last Sunday morning after an illness of twenty weeks. Her funeral took place from her late home last Tuesday afternoon. The remains were laid in the family lot at Lynnfield Centre.

It has been discovered that because there are several old roads crossing the Newhall farm, recently contracted for by the County Commissioners, a flaw to the title exists, and in consequence they cannot purchase it for a truant school, as intended. It is probable that the first money paid—$1000 to bind the bargain—will be returned to the County Commissioners.

The scholars of the three schools here had a private entertainment last Friday afternoon at the school house where a vero a very enjoyable time was had by all present. The teachers made all of the scholars a present of some kind and during the paesenting of them, Master Fred Moore, in behalf of the schools, presented Mr. Farr with a steel engraving of a Farm Scene. Mr. Farr was taken completely by surprise, but responded in a few appropriate remarks, after which the schools were dismissed for one week.

SPARKS.

A new organization of firemen was started in New York, some time during last summer, known as the Order of American Firemen, and the firemen from this section of the country are taking hold of it in good shape. The Peabody department is represented by about twenty members, and Salem and Danvers by about the same numbers. Engineer Wm. W. Reed has been quite active in the work in Peabody, and has been appointed Deputy Grand Secretary for this state, and all communications addressed to him will receive prompt attention.

Hose Company No. 1 will hold their second party in Thomas Hall to-morrow evening.

Hose 5 held another of their social parties in their house on Christmas Eve.

The regular monthly meetings of the different companies in the department will be held next Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Hose 2 have got their new swing harness put in.

William Shannahan, who murderously assaulted his wife in Beverly, last Friday, is a native of this town and at one time was an inmate of our Alms House. His wife was equally well known here as Nell Hubbard, and was employed as a domestic in several families. She was removed to our Alms House but her wounds are not considered dangerous.

We are under obligations to Horace Poole, of Dubuque, Iowa, for the gift of a couple of as handsome turkeys as we have ever laid eyes on, which were placed on our desk Christmas day. We can assure our friend, Mr. Poole, that we are deeply grateful for his thoughtfulness, and wish him a continuance of that prosperity in the far West, which he so richly deserves.

PEABODY.

Arnolt Holt has gone as fireman on a shifter.

One drunk this morning. The offender was sent down for 30 days.

Postmaster Ward has shipped a lot of fowls to Pennsylvania this week.

The Grand Army will bring a minstrel company to the Institute, January 12.

Mr. A. J. Hayes of the Gardner farm had a lot of hens killed by dogs Saturday.

Nine deaths have been returned to the town clerk of persons who have died since last Friday.

James Gallagher, who has lived on Spring street for some time, died suddenly of heart disease Monday morning.

Commander Samuel Worcester, of Salem, will install the officers of Union Post 50 G. A. R. next Monday evening.

A new express and job wagon has been put on by Marr & Ranney, with headquarters at E. H. Shannon's cigar store.

Herbert Lyons, in the employ of the Standard Thermometer Works, will enter a wool store in Boston with the new year.

Nettie Leach, a young woman of questionable character, was sent to her home in Woonsocket, R. I., by the police, Monday.

Mr. John J. Murphy, en employe at P. R. Gill's morocco shop, was presented last Friday by his shopmates with a handsome parlor stove.

A little one belonging to Charles M. Buxton on Endicott street, was considerably scalded about the legs Monday, by pulling a basin of hot water into her lap.

A horse attached to one of I. P. Harris' delivery wagon ran away on Holten street yesterday morning. The wagon was wrecked on Main street and the horse went to Salem.

We have received through Messrs. Root & Tinker, a very handsome engraving of the World's Exchanges, from Moore & Schley, bankers and brokers, of New York.

Mr. Samuel W. Foss has suspended the Lynn Saturday Union and turned the good will of the paper over to the Transcript. Mr. Foss will be editor of the new Lynn penny daily which is shortly to be started.

The evening school will open in the Wallis school house next Monday evening and will be continued four evenings in the week. The teachers are A. E. Wells, Mrs. A. E. Wells, Mrs. E. H. Wilkinson and Miss Georgie Hart. They are all experienced teachers and a good amount of work should be accomplished.

The employes of Mr. C. F. Hathaway, our popular baker, presented him with an elegant silver ice pitcher as a Christmas gift. It was from George A. Collins & Co.'s store on Main street. Mr. Hathaway employs some twenty-five men in his establishment and the best of feelings prevail, as shown by the above. Besides his bakery here he has one in Cambridge and one in Marblehead.

NOTICE!

The carpenters, painters and decorators having finished and left us, we are again open and ready to make pictures for all who desire.

We wish to say to those who intend to have pictures finished for Christmas presents: don't put off coming to sit, but come now and give us plenty of time, and if you wish to avoid long and tiresome waits come early or make engagements. Especially bring children in the forenoon if possible.

We shall take orders for Free Hand Crayons to be finished for Christmas only until December 15th. Besides our free hand work, we can give you a finished enlargement in any style known, Crayon, Pastel, Water Color, Oil, Ink, etc., and at very reasonable prices.

Call and see samples of Permanent Bromide Enlargements, the new picture, all sizes up to life. $10 for plain enlargement, full life size, without crayon or other finishing. They are perfectly permanent, and unlike all other enlargements are fine pictures without any finishing, and the price is way below what you would have to pay for any other picture of equal pretensions.

We have samples both finished and unfinished.
